BIG VOTE REPORTED OVER THE PROVINCE

Although the Country Roads Were Ankle Deep in Mud the Voters Came to the Polls Early.

SERVICES IN CHURCHES

Special Wire to The Examiner:

TORONTO, June 29 — From most parts of Ontario this morning come reports of muddy roads in the country districts and the agricultural electorate is ploughing through to the polls in autos and buggies with their wheels axle deep in mud or water.

Notwithstanding the rainy weather there are indications of a record vote being polled in most constituencies. In the cities electors seemed to appreciate the new regulation opening the polls at 8 o'clock. There were in most cases voters ready to cast the ballots before the deputy returning officers were ready to take them this morning. The platform campaign was really not concluded till Sunday night, when hundreds of Pastors in various parts of the Province, including at least forty in Toronto, took a last gations that "the abolish the bar" in gations that "the abolish the bar" in this election was a moral and not a party issue. In some churches the members of the congregation openly showed their objections to these sentiments by leaving the Church during the Pastor's comments .

At noon to-day it is conceded by independently minded people that it looks like anybody's election.

STONEY LAKE

STONEY LAKE, June 29.—Stoney Lake is becoming very popular with those suffering from that malady known as Honeymoonitis, for which there seems to be no cure.

Already the afflicted ones are flocking in, but we are so confident that the balmy air of good Old Stoney will do them good, we do not look for any fatalities.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarkson, (nee Miss Gladys Crane), who were married in St. Paul's Church, Peterborough, Thursday, June 25th, at 8:00 p.m., were safely landed by the "Comet" at "Gladhalken" at 5:15, where they will remain for a few days before journeying to the West.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Hague Sawers, (nee Miss Vera McCallum), are spending their honeymoon at "Bonnacastle." They were married at Amsterdam, N.Y., Saturday, June 13th.

This day and date seems to have brought them good luck, for Mrs. Sawers has been particularly fortunate in landing some fine specimens of the finny tribe. One of her prizes was a six-pound bass, which resisted capture in a very spunky manner, providing much excitement before it was safely landed.

The Anglican Church at the entrance of Hell's Gate has been completed, the first service having been held last Sunday.

Mr. Reid, of Peterborough spent Saturday at "Woodside," Kawartha Park.

Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Beal, Miss Amy and Master "Bobs," have arrived at their cottage "Seldom Inn" for the season.

Mr. John Carlisle, the most industrious fisherman of Kawartha Park, has been rewarded for his persistency with several fine catches, some days, to the limit.

Mrs. Joseph Milla, of Peterborough, spent a few days with Mrs. (Dr.) Morrison at "Happygolucky."

Miss Alice McGie, of Belleville, is the guest of the Misses Wilmott, Big Island.

Mr. Garnet Galley, accompanied by Mrs. Galley, Mr. Hastie, Masters Jack Turner, Arthur Lewis, and Roy White, all of Peterborough, form the advance guard of the Y.M.C.A. camp, Sandy Point.

Mr. W. J. Charlton, of Lakefield, spent a day with his brother at Kawartha Park.

Miss Eva Darling, of Lakefield, and Miss Minnie Drain, of Peterborough, are visiting friends on the lakes.

Mr. Andrew Murray Carlisle spent a few days with his parents at "Upsidedown."

Mrs. G. P. Whyte, Miss Isobel and R. Mercer Whyte, of Chicago, Ill., are guests of Mrs. Robert Neill.

Messrs. R. K. Harston, of Peterborough, R. McHeard, of Toronto, and M. Costello, of St. Catharines, are registered on the lakes.

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Henderson, Miss Margaret Henderson, Miss Florence Smith and Mr. S. Henderson, of Toronto, have arrived for the season.

Mrs. H. G. Fitzgerald, of Lakefield, has opened her cottage "Sandy Point Villa" for the season.

Mr. Rayson, of Toronto, is making good use of his Evinrude motor. Mr. Roy Johnston, of Port Hope, joins him on his little trips.

Mrs. W. A. MacIntosh and Miss Laura Davidson, of Peterborough, spent a day at Kawartha Park.

Mr. Donald Fotheringham, of Toronto, Mr. B. Tate, of Lakefield, Mr. K. Mackenzie, and Miss Winnifred Mackenzie, are holidaying with Rev A. M. Mackenzie at "Gairlock."

Mr. Minto Brownscombe has arrived at "Falls View" for the summer. —Monty La Rock.

TO DRIVERS OF MOTOR CARS AND OTHER VEHICLES

No doubt all appealed to in the above heading have noticed the presence of a traffic officer at the corner of George and Hunter Streets on Saturday afternoons, have seen something of the advantage of the move by the local authorities. But they should remember that their own convenience and the profit of having a traffic officer on the job can be greatly increased if they will co-operate with him. Drivers of motor cars or other vehicles should first of all keep as much to the right-hand side of the road as possible. Then, as they approach the corner they should give some indication, preferably by the raising of the hands, as to what direction he is going to turn, whether he is going to turn or whether he is going straight ahead. If the drivers do not do this they will find that some day, when they are rushed for time they will be held up at this corner for two or three minutes because the traffic officer thought they were going straight ahead, instead of turning to the right or left, or because he thought they intended turning, when, as a matter of fact, they wished to proceed in the same direction. To avoid this and to avoid accidents which might occur by the officer mistaking their intention, all drivers of vehicles are requested to indicate by raising an arm as they approach the corner in what direction they intend to proceed.

CANDIDATES IN ONTARIO ELECTED BY ACCLAMATION.

MAY RESULT IN REVOLUTION

Assasination of Heir to Throne of Austria Hungary, Will Lead to Serious Results

EMPEROR BROKEN DOWN

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Eng., June 29—That the assassination of the heir to the throne of Austria Hungary and his wife may result in a revolution in that country and possibly embroiling the great powers in a serious crisis was freely admitted in diplomatic circles here, to-day.

It is granted on all sides that there is a growing feeling in Austria toward Republicanism. Only feeling of sympathy and respect for the aged Emperor has prevented a flare-up long ago. It is thought that getting rid of Ferdinand was but a step toward a plan to introduce the Republican Government with bloodshed, if necessary, when Emperor Franz Josef passes out.

Despatches from the Austrian Capital indicate that the eighty-four-year old Monarch is still stunned by the blow. He sees probably the dissolution of his beloved empire. This is the fourth time that a violent death by suicide, assassination or military execution has struck at his heart. The greatest apprehension is felt that he will not survive this latest blow. He had a conference with his cabinet to-day.

DRAGOONS RETURN FROM PETAWAWA

Friday night about nine o'clock, after twenty hours' travel, the local squadron of he Prince of Wales 3rd Dragoons arrived in the city after two weeks' at the Military Camp there. The local squadron were in command of Major Anderson, of Warsaw, and the whole Regiment was in command of Col. Rogers, of Grafton. The Dragoons were in splendid form before their departure from camp, and won many compliments from staff officers and others for the splendid manner in which they carried out their manoeuvres. The local squadron was about 75 strong.

Not an acicdent marred the success of the local squadron training period n camp. Private Doughty, however had a very narrow escape during a charge which was made during one of the campaigns in which the regiment took part. In the middle of the charge toward the enemy his horse stepped in a hole and he was thrown to the ground, the rider falling partly under the animal. The man and horse in the rank behind him came tumbling over the fallen charger and soldier, and it is almost providential that the local rider escaped with only a few bruises.

The camp was a splendid experience, particularly for the Dragoons, as they are a cavalry regiment, and were very prominent in the two weeks' campaigning.

CLOSING MEETINGS OF CAMPAIGN

The Temperance meeting in the Opera House last evening under the auspices of the County Temperance Association, was a huge success. The attendance was very large, and the addresses by Ex-Ald. Hall and Dr. W. H. Doherty, of Toronto, two Conservatives, who have left their party on the abolish-the-bar policy, were convincing and logical.

The Conservative campaign came to an end on Saturday night, when Major Sam Sharpe, M.P., J. H. Burnham and R. J. Soden, addressed the meeting.

MOTOR CAR WAS BADLY DAMAGED

Skidded on Keene Road on Saturday Night, Collided with Post and Put Completely Out of Commission

A NARROW ESCAPE

An automobile accident which resulted in the wrecking of a Ford car, and endangered the lives of the occupants of the machine, took place Saturday evening about half-past seven o'clock, several miles from the city, on the Keene road.

The car in question was the property of a local Company and driven by one of their employees. It was coming at a high rate of speed toward the City, and up to the time of the accident was closely followed by several autos that were returning from the Auto Association's shore dinner at Indian Village. The two young men in the car occupied the front seat and the rear seat was empty, and this is given for the reason that the car skidded while passing between the two railings that are on guard each side of the road from some distance each side of where the accident occurred. It seems that while passing along the road at this point, the auto skidded to the right, the front wheel striking a post, and which was torn loose from the machine. The car proceeded as far as the next post in the railing before the breaks could be put into operation, and striking it, the radiator, mud guard, and front axle were bent and twisted. The car recoiled when the breaks were put on and struc the railing on the other side of the road. Fortunately the railing is a very strong one, and kept the motor from going over backwards into the ditch, and upsetting on top of the occupants.

It is said that the car was driving very fast, and that being the case it was very fortunate that the railing held, and prevented it from leaving the road. As it was the occupants had a narrow escape, and the car was put completely out of commission. When the motorists, returning from the shore dinner reached the scene of the accident, they found the crippled car blocking the road completely. There were in the party that came up Messrs. H. G. Walker, S. J. Keyes, Dr. Morgan and Mr. Davidson. These and several others lifted the car a distance of several hundred feet along the road and left it there, where it would not be in the way of other vehicles. The car was badly damaged, and presented a queer appearance to the remainder of those returning from the shore dinner. Yesterday Mr. T. Appleby, the well-known auto expert, spent part of the day repairing the damaged car, and at last managed to get it into a condition to be brought to the city. It is thought that it can be repaired.

WANT ALL ULSTER TO BE EXCLUDED

Unionists Preparing an Amendment

THE PRESENT OUTLOOK

Examiner Special:

LONDON, June 29.— Lord Lansdowne, Unionist leader in the House of Lords, intends supporting the amending bill at the second reading on Wednesday. A committee of peers is already drafting an amendment. However the opposition officially will seek to remove the time limit and extend the exclusion proposal to the whole of Ulster and will also insert provisions reserving the post office to the Imperial government and taking away the power to vary customs duties. It is probable that in this matter the government will accept the opposition amendments or a modification of them.

VOTING IN COUNTRY LIKELY TO BE LARGE

At one o'clock to-day the reports from the various sub-divisions in the south end of the City indicated that a fairly large vote would be polled today. In the centre of the City at that hour the ballots returned were below the average, but there was plenty of time until the closing hour to run up the list. The country workers stated at noon that the vote in the rural sections promised to be a heavy one. In the City it was a quiet vote and even those who felt confident of the results admitted that they did not know which way it was going. At Gillespies' committee rooms at two o'clock some of the workers claimed that the indications were favourable for the Rowell candidate. The rain had the tendency to drive the farmers to the polls, and in the City it left many outdoor workers idle.

A small boy had made loud and repeated calls for more pudding. After he had disposed of a liberal quantity, he was told that too much pudding would make him ill. Looking wistfully at the dish for a moment, he said:

EXAMINER WILL BULLETIN THE ELECTION RETURNS

Special Wire to This Office Will Announce Results in Ontario Ridings

THE LOCAL SITUATION

As the elections are bound to be under present conditions, the voting to-day is quiet, and to a casual observer the only signs of the election are the autos and horse-drawn vehicles that are traversing the streets in unusual numbers, and the little knot of men around the Committee rooms, and the polling places. Both sides are working strenuously, and indications are that the vote in the City will be a large one, and possibly above the average.

While in this particular election opinion is divided in a peculiar way, on the issues, the weather has retained its neutral attitude toward the forces in action, and an almost steady stream of rain hos poured down since the opening of the polling places this morning. In some places the vote up to noon was larger than usual, and in others it seemed to be coming out but slowly. The voting will be closed at five o'clok this afternoon.

The results of the voting all over the Province will be bulletined on a screen in front of the Examiner Office to-night, by means of stereopticon slides. A special wire has been run into this office, over which returns from all over Ontario will be received as soon as possible after the voting has been concluded, and will be bulletined as they are received. The returns from the City and Country Polling sub-divisions of the West riding will also be bulletined in front of the Examiner as soon as the figures are available.

NO CHANCE FOR PEACE

Special to The Examiner:

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., June 29.—After five and a half weeks of mediation proceedings it is admitted this morning that the prospects of settlement are to-day again away below par. The only encouraging feature be-day was Carranza's request for time, instead of an absolute refusal in the matter of sending delegates to the final conference.

DEATH OF E. W. COX REGARDED AS A LOSS TO FINANCE

The death of E. W. Cox so soon after the lamented passing of his father, Senator Cox, had placed upon his shoulders the great responsibility of the Presidency of the Canada Life and the control of other important companies of the Cox group, will be very generally regretted in financial circles. Mr. Cox had made good. He was steady, careful, and dependable, not apt to be hurralled into making unduly large investments in any particular group of enterprises.

When it is remembered that the head of the Canada Life has the chief say in the investment of some fifty million dollars accumulated to make the old age of thousands easy and to provide for the wants of the widows and children of thousands of others cut off in middle life, the importance to the whole community of having a safe man at the head of so great an institution becomes apparent. The Directors of the Canada Life and Mr. Herbert C. Cox, who by the death of his brother becomes head of the family, have the serious responsibility resting upon them of securing for the guidance of the Canada Life a man big enough and safe enough to command general public confidence.—The Globe.

RECOMMENCE SEARCH ON THE EMPRESS

Examiner Special:

RIMOUSKI, June 29.—The Lord Strathcona and Marie Josephine, early this morning again sailed down the gulf to continue search for bodies. Good weather is again assured, but the sun is not quite so bright as yesterday. It is believed, however, that the ships will bring back other pathetic burdens to-night.

BATTERY WAS EIGHTEEN HOURS ON THE ROAD

Artillerymen Have Returned From a Successful Two Week's Visit at Petawawa Army Reserve.

MADE GOOD SHOWING

The 20th Field Battery C.F.A. reached Peterborough yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock, from Petawawa Army Reserve, where, for the past two weeks they have been under the annual course of instruction, given to the Canadiana Militia.

The journey back was a wearying one, as the men were nearly eighteen hours on the train, covering the distance of 198 miles. This was due to the fact that they were returned via the Kingston and Pembroke Railroad, the work on which seems to be of a very primitive nature, over wild and hilly country. The tracks were of a light type, and would not therefore permit of a heavy engine, and in consequence, when a grade was reached, the baggage cars, horse sara, and gun carriages, were detached from the passenger coaches, and taken ahead ten or twelve miles, and the engine then returned for the coaches. This procedure was maintained over the 70 miles of K. & P. track, between Pembroke and Sharbot Lake, and took a period of nearly 12 hours to cover. The remainder of the journey was uneventful. The men were glad to get home, but thoroughly enjoyed the outing, albeit that hard work was a prominent feature on the programme, throughout the two weeks' training.

On Friday last the gunners were put through their tests, by an examining officer at the camp, and made a good showing in gun-laying. The 10th Brigade was also inspected by Colonel Burstall, commanding the Artillery forces at Petawawa, who was delighted with the work.

The following was the message that H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught had brought to the notice of O.C. Brigades and Regiments:

"Field Marshall, His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada, desires to express the pleasure he has felt in spending two days with the troops in the field. He considers that all ranks have shown great keenness in their duty, and he is confident that the experience, not only in the operations, but in the bivouacs, has brought out many lessons, which should tend to raise the efficiency of the Canadian Militia as a fighting force.

Colonel the Lord Brooke, said he felt he could not leave camp after his second consecutive season's training at Petawawa, without thanking all ranks of the Permanent Force and the Militia, for the support which they have afforded him.

The training, he said, has been novel and perhaps more arduous than in former years. It has in consequence brought out new lessons, which it is the duty of all leaders to lay to heart, and to try to remember when they must take the field.

Lord Brooke feels, that to say that no faults have come to light, during the past two weeks, would be to insult the forces of the Dominion. He is, however, confident that all ranks will endeavour to avoid a repetition of the mistakes, and thus raise the military value of a section of the armed strength of the Empire.

He sincerely hopes that all ranks of the Canadian Militia have not only enjoyed, but have benefited from the hard work, and that they will not miss the opportunities afforded of attending the annual camps in the future.

ENCOURAGE THE BOYS

A feature of the Fifth Annual Toronto Fat Stock Show, to be held at Union Stock Yards, Toronto, on Friday and Saturday, Dec. 11 and 12 this year is the Special Prize offered for hogs fed by farm boys. The prizes aggregate as follows: First $30, second $15, third $10, following conditions to be observed.

Competition limited to boys under 25 years. Pen 3 Barrows, Bacon type 170-225, and must have been fed since weaning at 6 weeks old by the exhibitor.

... is the encouragement a boy needs to make him a good farmer when he is grown and to stay at "the best place on earth"—on the farm.

Full and complete premium lists will be out in short time. There are several new Classes to be competed for this year.

VACATION HINTS.

First — get the vacation. If you can't get it all at once, at least one day a week may easily be yours for leisure. How? Instead of doing your own washing, or having it done at home, send it all to the Peterborough Laundry, all the bed and table linen will be ironed, the starched pieces will be done up ready for home service. Thus you have not only an extra day but the rest of mind and body that makes any day a holiday. It sounds worth trying.

WHITE MAN'S HOPE BLASTED.

"The white man's hope" of bringing the "fistic championship out of darkest Africa, is again blasted. On Saturday, in Paris, Jack Johnson has again won over a white man, Frank Moran, and the reign of the black dynasty in pugilism is perpetuated. There is not much pity for the white man. Those who think in terms of civilization and those who think that the blacks are an inferior race, will feel that the right man holds the championship. In such a "sport" as prize fighting, which is pretty thoroughly ostracised on this continent, a black man is the natural owner of such a championship.

STREET PAVING.

An article appeared a few days ago in a local morning paper, editorially finding fault with the present pavements and evidently endeavouring to create an impression in favour of the material supplied by another firm. The Examiner has no interest in materials and mode of construction of pavement whether of one kind or other of material or manner of construction, except to secure the citizens the very best value for their money expended in paving.

There seems to be abundant evidence that in laying down street paving on George, Hunter and Charlotte streets, that the city authorities have selected a material and form of pavement that has been proved of real merit. Inquiry has developed the fact that some of the most famous streets in the world are paved with the same material as the streets of this City mentioned above. Among these can be cited the celebated Victoria Embankment of London, England; Fifth Avenue, New York; Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C., and scores of others equally famous. It is found that the city of Buffalo, in the past twenty years, has laid down five million square yards of paving upon its streets; and that, of this amount, four million square yards are constructed of the same material as that used on George, Charlotte and Hunter streets, in this city.

The criticism of our local contemporary on our street paving material and the veiled suggestion of its ineffective character, have, it seems, something of their origin in the canvassing skill of a representative of a rival firm supplying another form of surfacing paving material, than the pure Trinidad asphalt, of which our new pavement is constructed. Having raised a doubt—in its own mind, at least — our contemporary might now give some reasons for the faith that is in it, by supplying data and information to support its contention that Peterborough needs another form of pavement. In case this is attempted to be done, the Examiner can assure its readers and the city authorities and the public, generally, that facilities will be provided at no expense to citizens and taxpayers to investigate and compare the merits, lasting quality and general suitability of the pavement material, we have employed so far, with the material advocated by our local contemporary.

We have been so obsessed the past few weeks with election matters that the question of street paving has been somewhat lost sight of. Now that the election is practically over we can give some attention to our own, local affairs; and, in the public interests, now that we are contemplating further paving, it is important that we should make no mistake, but get the fullest available information as to the merits of the various street paving materials offered to municipalities. We should, of course, get the best, within reasonable limits of cost, no matter whom we employ to put it down, provided that adherence to proper plans and specifications is provided for. Paving is expensive, and we should not hesitate to provide that we get pavement that will stay put the longest possible length of time, that will give the best wear and give the ratepayers the best value for their money.

REV. DR. CARMAN.

Rev. Dr. Albert Carman, the grand od man of Canadian Methodism, was eighty-one years of age on Saturday He is a native of Iroquois, Ontario, and in early life was a school master. He became connected in a professional capacity with Albert College, Belleville, in 1857, and did much to bring that institution to the fore. Through his agency it was erected into a University and he was made its first chancellor. He had meanwhile been ordained, and in 1874 was made a bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In 1883 he became superintendent of the Methodist Church, a position he has continued to hold with great force and usefulness down to the present time. He is a strong speaker, a man of ripe experience, and gifted with astonishing energy, which he still showed in promoting the great moral issue which is the occasion of the battle of the ballots to-day.

THE GOVERNMENT'S NAVAL POLICY.

Mr. Borden and his followers are crawling back in the most unostentatious manner possible to the position they occupied in 1909. They have decided to raise and train a body of naval reserves, and the Niobe and the Rainbow are to be put into requisition as training ships. A million is asked to meet the first expenses, and the Laurier Naval Service Act is to remain on the Statute Book. The "tin pot" Navy of less than two years ago, the navy "too weak to fight and too slow to run away," the navy "fit only for picnicing and attendance at Old Home Weeks," the "bunches of iron rust from the Admiralty scrap heap" are actually going to be used as training ships to teach the Young Canadian idea how to aim and shoot, to be used as the foundation possibly of a Canadian Navy And this is being done despite the fact that twenty-one of Mr. Borden's supporters were elected on the definite and distinct promise that the Naval Act of 1910 would be repealed. What the Borden Government is now doing in a semi-surreptitious manner, the Laurier Government did openly and vigorously four years ago; and had the start then made been carried forward by the present Administration, Canada, like Australia, would now be in possession of an effective naval force of her own largely manned by Canadian sea men. By the cowardly, miserable and contemptible tactics pursued, four valuable, critical years have been lost, much bitterness engendered and the country rent asunder into violently opposing schools of thought, whereas Australia is a unit on the question, and has even now brought into existence a powerful squadron which is bound to grow rapidly into an efficient fleet, and she has found no difficulty in finding vounteers to serve on board. Where is the fool who used to write letters to the Tory papers telling the fishermen that any attempt at a Canadian navy or the creation of a naval reserve meant conscription? Why does not this fellow raise the same alarm now? Where, also, are the "tin-pot" jeerers Sir Robert indeed crawled back and down.—Acadian Recorder.

AN HISTORICAL INDEX OF THE CITY, ETC.

and from that time on. Classified lists of all elections for the Dominion House, for the Provincial Legislature, with majorities and state of the poll. Pages of notes descriptive of salient features of the several campaigns and the issues involved. Biography supplies personal account of the candidates.

The direction of affairs as relating to the municipality is in the hands of the Council, where it is not otherwise taken up by the School Board and Utilities Commission. This last is of recent date. The "Municipal" section is a very minute record of all that has been done by the Councils of the town and city since incorporation in 1850. Correct list of Mayors, Councillors, Aldermen, Clerks; etc. At a glance it can be seen who have served the town. Men have come forward to serve one year in council. Others have served, like the late James Steevnson (50 years on the School Board unbroken) half of a lifetime. They should have credit. In this list are the names of men that the town used to conjure with. Who stood as a tower of strength behind the municipality and put their own money into ventures, often with little hope of return. In the section are over one hundred pages of notes, many of surpassing interest. The whole gamut of municipal life and effort is covered. Census returns for seventy years. Municipal income and expenditure for the same period, showing an increase of from about $6,500 per annum to $385,000 as it now is. Assessment values, year to year, the fighting of the drink evil, as shown in the reduction of licenses, erection of bridges, improvement of streets, inception of local institutions and services with all the debate and conference and discussion that came about. This section, alone, is a liberal education to any one who does not know of the history and progress of the municipaity.

Then there is the "Military" section. We have had the Boys in Red with us from very early days, though in fact the first were in dark blue or bottle green, the old and first Rifle Company, organized in the early fifties. The military history, if it may be so termed, goes back to the time of the Mackenzie Rebellion, and the year 1837. Th organization and turning out and participation of the men from this district is described. Lists of the officers in command and of the mustered rank and fyle. Minute particulars of the organization of the several infantry companies (afterwards merged in the 57th Battalion and later into the 57th Regiment) are given. Of the long maintained efforts to have built a drill shed and the cost thereof. Of the magnificent Armouries. Of the men who picked up and held together the force. Scott, Smith, Poole, Kennedy, Bell, Miller, Rogers, Burnham and many others. Side by side with this is the story of the militia, or rural battalions and the Dragoons and Artillery. The story of the North West Rebellion of 1886, and lists of the men who went to service. Of those who joined in the Nile expedition, of the part of the Midland Battalion that participated in the operations at time of the Reil rebellion; and of the force that went off to South Africa. The doings before and after, the going out and coming home, the receptions and celebrations —all these are a matter of record and of large interest to military men.

Public Works Section.

The section "Public Works" deals with the construction of the Trent Canal, the Lift Lock, public buildings and general improvements made throughout the district, beginning with the erection of the first lock(that below the Little Lake), under the direction of the Royal Engineers. Ample notes are made of the detail of the works.

The whole has been handsomely bound and makes an important appearing volume, a heavy one, even if the contents are not necessarily so. Presently the work will be put in print and offered to the public. In the meantime it will be found at the Public Library, where it may be consulted, and the Librarian, Mr. Dela Fosse, will be pleased to afford inspection. Bets may now be settled with neatness and despatch. Disputes adjusted. Dates verified. Incidents recalled. Old associations renewed, for hardly any fact in the life of the town is left unrecorded.

Petes Dropped A Hard Luck Game To The Saints Saturday

Two Fluky Runs Gave Craven's Railroaders the Decision in the Rubber Game of the Series---Schettler is Hurt by a Batted Ball.

The Petes dropped a hard-luck game to the Saints on Saturday, losing the rubber fixture of the series by a score of 3 to 2. Two of the Saints' runs came over in an unusual way, and one of them was the sequel of an accident that sent Louie Schettler out of the game with a badly damaged optic. Schettler had been breezing along in spectacular fashion, fanning five of the visitors, and he looked good to cop the verdict. In the fourth, however, with two out and Craven on third, McNellis drove a hot grounder back at the pitcher. The ball took a bad bound and was deflecting from the pitcher's hand and struck him over the left eye. He reeled and fell to the ground, while Craven cantered home. Dr. McNulty was called from the stand and rendered first aid. It was impossible for Schettler to continue as he had a gash over his optic nearly two inches in length.

That was flucky run No. 1, and No. 2 was sent over in the eighth. Craven started to steal second and Miller heaved the ball at King to stop the theft. Runner and ball arrived together and the Spalding striking Craven bounded far into the outfield between Blount and Welsh. By the time Blount had recovered the pill and shot it to the plate, Craven was in with the winning run. It was the luck of the game that the play should have happened with Craven on the sacks, as one of the slower Saints would hardly have scored.

It was the best game of the week, with the fielding clean cut and accurate on both sides. Wilkinson, who was batted out of the box in the first innings on Friday, was sent back by Manager Craven and made a good job of the twriling for the Saints, although at that there were several occasions on which he was in a bad hole, and a base hit would have broken up the game. With men on the sacks, however, he failed to allow the Petes to come through.

Manager Blount made a big effort to tie up the game in the eighth when he drew a pass, stole second, waited there while Byrne flied out and then purloined third. With Welsh up a run looked sure, as the left fielder is generally there with a hit or a fly to the outfield. This time, however, he popped up to the first-baseman. Stewart and Rooney were both hit, and with the bases full, it was up to King. His best was an easy fly to Koop and the chance was gone.

In the ninth with one down, Miller cracked one over on a line to the left field barn. A faster runner could have made third and scored on Kelly's fly to the outfield, but Miller only got to second and the hit was wasted, as Blount failed to come through.

First Innings.

St. Thomas—Kopp fanned. Craven also struck out. McNellie grounded to Fox. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterborough — Blount fanned. Gillespie made a pretty catch of Byrne's foul fly. Welsh singled over second, and stole second. Stewart was hit. Both moved up on a passed ball. Rooney grounded to Hadley. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Second Innings.

St. Thomas—Kustus struck out. Kading grounded to Fox. McNellis singled to centre. Gillespie flied to Blount. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Peterborough—King flied to Kopp. Fox singled over second. Miller hoisted to Kading and Fox, who had started to steal was doubled up. Kading to Wilkinson. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Third Innings.

St. Thomas. Nevitt fanned, Wilkinson struck out. Kopp grounded to Schettler. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterborough—Schettler grounded to Kading. Blount walked. Byrne hit to Hadley who tried for Blount at second. The manager beat the throw, but McNellis got the ball over in time to get Byrne. Welsh singled to left, scoring Blount. Stewart died on a roller in front of the plate. One run, one hit, no errors.

Fourth Innings.

St. Thomas—Craven singled over second. Hadley walked. Kustus sacrificed on a bunt to Rooney. Kading flied to Welsh who held Craven at third. McNellis cracked a bounder which struck Schettler over the eye, knocking him out. Craven scored on the play. Time was called, and Tracey took Schettler's place. Hadley was out on an attempted delayed double steal, King returning Miller's peg to the plate in time to get the shortstop. One run, two hits, no errors.

Peterborough—Rooney singled to left. King sacrificed. Gillespie to Kading. Fox flied to Craven, Rooney going to third. Miller singled to right, scoring Rooney. Tracey fanned. One run, two hits, no errors.

Fifth Innings.

St. Thomas—Gillespie singled to right. Nevitt fanned, Gillespie stealing on the third one. Wilkinson cracked one into Tracey's hands, and Gillespie was doubled up, Tracey to King. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Peterborough — Blount grounded to Wilkinson. Byrne rolled to Hadley. Welsh fanned. No runs, hits or errors.

Sixth Innings.

Peterborough—Stewart popped to Kading. Rooney grounded to McNellis. King rolled to Wilkinson. No runs, hits or errors.

Seventh Innings.

St. Thomas — Gillespie flied to Blount. King made a fine grab of Nevitt's smash and threw him out. Wilkinson cracked a liner to Fox. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterborough—Fox was out on a grounder to Kading, Wilkinson covering the bag. Miller died on a vicious smash at Hadley. Tracey lifted to Hadley. No runs, hits or errors.

Eighth Innings.

St. Thomas—Kopp flied to Blount. Craven singled over second. He started to steal, and when Miller's peg hit him and rolled to the outfield, he came all the way home. Hadley singled to left. Kustus flied to Fox, the latter making a nice catch. Kading flied to Blount. One run, two hits, one error.

Peterborough—Blount walked and stole second. Byrne flied to Kopp. Blount stole third. Welsh popped to Kading. Stewart was hit, and stole second with Wilkinson holding the ball. Rooney was hit, filling the bases. King flied to Kopp, ending an exciting innings. No runs, hits or errors.

Ninth Innings.

St. Thomas — McNellis singled through third. Gillespie bunted to Rooney who threw McNellis out at second. Nevitt fouled to Miller. Wilkinson fanned. No runs one hit, no errors.

Peterborough—Fox grounded to Kading. Miller doubled over Kopp's head. Kelly hit for Tracey, and flied to Kopp. Blount popped to Wilkinson. No runs, one hit, no errors.

DAVE HILLIARD BREAKS LEG

Local fans will regret to hear that Dave Hilliard, the popular centre fielder of last year's Petes, who has been going like a whirlwind for the Cleveland Association team, is out of the game for the season. Hilliard broke his leg last week sliding into the home plate at Milwaukee, and will be in the hospital for at least two months. The big fellow would probably have been transferred to the Cleveland American League team within a few days, and the accident will prevent him going up to the big show.

BYRNE HAS GONE HOME

The Peterborough team will be without the services of Third-Baseman Joe Byrne. On Saturday he received a telegram calling him home at once as his father is critically ill. He left immediately after the game. The vacancy will be filled by Thrailkill, the utility player of the St. Thomas team, who has been secured by Manager Blount. Thrailkill played left field for the Saints in the first two games, and looks like a first-class player.

The Petes left this morning for Brantford. They will be away all week, playing four games in Brantford and five in Erie.

MINERS THREATEN TO RAID THE CANUCK LEAGUE

OTTAWA, June 29. — Mining League scouts threaten to play havoc with several of the teams in the Canadian League. One of them, representing the Craighton mine, Cobalt, arrived in Ottawa Saturday and made offers to a number of the champions, including Bullock, Lage and Dolan. The league is operating on a semi-professional basis, and the salaries they are paying are far in excess of what some of the Canadian League club can afford to pay.

It will be remembered that the Solver Country hockey magnates forced the N. H. A. people into doubling their salaries several years ago, when they imported a number of stars, and they may repeat at the expense of the minor baseball leaguers. Tom Kane and Ken Robertson, released by Ottawa on Friday, may sign with the Creighton management, also Dolan, and one or two of the other Hamilton players. Frank Shaughnessy said to-day he did not expect any of his regulars would be foolish enough to violate their contracts and sign to play in the north.

TEAM TO PRACTICE

In preparation for the game in connection with the T.A.S. picnic on July 1st, between the Sacred Heart and St. Peters' T.A.S., the following players are requested out to practice to-morrow night at the Sacred Heart field, Kennealley, Carson, W. O'Connell, Neary, Condon, L. Rose, Henry, McDonald, Gorman, Christopher, V. O'Connell and R. Rose.

BASEBALL

A very exciting as well as interesting game of baseball was played Saturday afternoon and evening between the Lift-Lock team and the Stars. The latter won the first game by the score of 19—14, and the former won the second game by the score of 17—13. Batteries for the Lift-Lock, Sedgwick and Crowley; for the Stars, Hamilton and McMahon. The teams are going to play again on Dominion Day, July 1st.

JOHNSON WINS IN 20 ROUNDS

PARIS, June 28.—"Jack" Johnson still holds the heavyweight champion ship of the world. In a hard-fought battle here last night, he defeated Frank Moran of Pittsburg easily on points in the twenty-round contest. Moran was game and stubborn, and stood up to the negro. He did most of the leading and made many friends. The back man's superior skill and his effective uppercutting wore down his opponent and won the match, which at times seemed rather amateurish.

Terrific uppercuts, on which Johnson had relied in many of his previous battles, were again brought into play on his young adversary, who was unable effectively to block them. They were repeatedly sent to Moran's jaw when he least expected them, and several times with such force that the Pittsburgher was sent wabbling but there was not a singe knockdown or anything that looked like a finishing blow. At the close Moran's face was bleeding from cuts on the nose and under the left eye. Johnson showed no marks.

Moran's Blows Ineffective.

Towards the middle of the contest it appeared as if Moran would not go the twenty rounds, but he showed courage and kept driving. Although he landed a number of times on the negro, his blows lacked force, and were comparatively ineffective. Now and then he tried to land hard on his adversary's body and in so doing swung widely through space. Johnson being several feet away. Moran took his punishment well, and during parts of rounds the negro toyed with him when he saw that he could do so without danger.

At Johnson's Mercy.

Towards the end Johnson had the Pittsburgher absolutely at his mercy. Moran apparently feared that he would be finished and clung to Johnson's body for support, trying at the same time to land, but without success. His manner of fighting and holding in the latter part of the contest was the cause of unfavourable comment, as were the tactics of Johnson on several occasions, which brought a caution from the referee, as well as a storm of jeers from the crowd. Many of the French spectators, who seemingly did not understand the fine points of boxing, voiced their objection to infighting, but cheered any resounding harmless whacks.

Women and Diplomats Present.

The great ampitheatre presented a wonderful sight, for, although there were some empty seats, the tiers were crowded with representatives of every element. The singular spectacle was presented of several hundred women, in handsome gowns, applauding the two pugilists as they struggled up and down the ring, feinting and dodging and hammering each other. Among the women were those that bore such great names in French society as Baroness Henry de Rothschild, the younger Duchess d'Uses, Countess Mathieu de Nosilles, the poet Princess de Lucinge, the Duchess de Rohan, Princess Morouzieff and Countess de Proumiers. Johnson's white wife occupied a prominent position, wearing as many diamonds as most of the great ladies. She cried out shrilly from time to time: "Hit him, daddy!" "Come along, pop!" "Now then, Jack, let him have another!"

Gloved hands joined in the appause that rang through the building as the two gladiators sweltered under the heat and strugged for supremacy, as in the days of ancient Rome.

After the fight Johnson took occasion to point out that no champion of his age ever defended the title and won. (He is thirty-six years of age). He appeared little the worse for the battle.

"They thought I couldn't last twenty rounds," he said. "Yell, didn't I. I am satisfied, I have done nothing for two years except ride fast. In another six weeks I will be ready to box anybody.

"Moran? He has a real hard punch with either hand, I know, because I have been there. If they always landed there is not anybody who could stand up against him. He is a good boy all right, and I enjoyed the fight. Carpentier was a fine referee."

Moran Not Satisfied.

Moran, in his dressing room after the fight, said: "At the worst it should have been a draw. I was the aggressor throughout the whole twenty rounds and I was not hurt. The cut over my eye is only an old one reopened; it was received in training. I believe I had the best of practically every round.

"The blow that really hurt was one on my nose, and for this Johnson was warned. That stopped my breathing and sent the blood trickling down my throat. That was the only real hurt Johnson gave me. I shall return to my camp and train for another fight. My manager has one in mind."

Spencer Eddy, former American Minister to Argentina, sat near the ringside. Three feet behind him sat the Duke of Westminster, while not far away were the Earl of Sefton; Louis Barthou, former Premier of France; the Marquis de Lafayette, the Duke d'Uses, Marquis de Breteuil, Baron James de Rothschild and Count Cary.

Here and there were dark faces, some of them negroes from Senegal, Dahomy and the West Indies. Two negro members of the Chamber of Deputies from Gaudeloupe, Gratien Candace and Rene Boisneuf, showed intense interest in the proceedings, while other dark faces included Prince Dhuleep Singh of India and Omar Sultan Pasha of Egypt.

It was an amazingly international crowd. Several hundred Americans were in the best seats. They included Mortimer Schiff of New York, ex-Senator C. W. Watson of West Virginia, Richard Croker, junior, Ogden Mills, Herman B. Durvea, Alfred Vanderbilt, D. A. Reid and E. H. Thomas, all of New York.

Duffy Thrown Out

TORONTO, June 26.—Jimmy Duffy of the Ramblers Club, of Hamilton, Canada's premier long-distance runner, is no longer an amateur. At a special meeting of the Registraton Committee of the Ontario Amateur Union, held yesterday afternoon, Duffy's card was cancelled, and he was disqualified from taking part in amateur sports for the rest of his career.

Accepting money for a foot race at Kingston a month ago was the cause of Duffy's expulsion. From the evidence gathered, Duffy took a small sum of money, and the evidence was so strong against him that he hadn't a leg to stand on.

Duffy was matched against Edward Fabre, the Montreal runner, who finished second to Duffy in the Boston Marathon. Fabre at the time was under suspension by the Quebec Union for competing under two clubs. In spite of the thirty-day suspension Fabre came up and ran against Duffy. The Kingston promoters were told by Walter Trivett, of the Amateur Union, that the race must not take place. Both the promoters and the runner took a chance, with the Kingston people handing out tht cash. For this defiance Fabre was suspended for a year. Duffy was also suspended, and when Trivett investigated, the Kingston people old all, turned Kink's evidence, and howed both men up.

With the passing of Duffy out of the amateur ranks Canada loses the greatest distance runner since the days of Longboat. Duffy was the hope of the Canucks for the German Olympiad in 1916. Barring Jim Corkery, Duffy was the best runner at the long distance game, and his record since coming to Canada three years ago, entitled him to the championship. His victory in the Boston marathon, when he defeated the man that ultimately brought about his downfall, was the crowning point of his career.

Duffy's entrance into Canadian sports was unhtralded. Fred Smith, physical director of the Central Y.M.C.A., entered Duffy in the Ward Marathon in 1911. After a terrific battle with Bob O'Brien Duffy finished second. The next year he won that race. In the fall of 1912, after his return from the Swedish Olympiad, where he finished fifth in the Marathon against 200 runners, the pick o fthe world (Duffy being thi first Canuck to finish), he won the Hamilton Herald ract, and broke Mellor's record of 1.48 for the course by two minutes, a record that Longboat, Holmer, Coley, and other great stars failed to touch. Last year Duffy repeated, and came within Mellor's mark. He won a number of other races besides, finishing in a score of others. With the exception of three races Duffy never finished outside the money.

WOMAN KISSES THE LION THAT KILLED FIANCE

CHICAGO, June 26. — The final chapter in the freight car lion tragedy was enacted when Miss Adgie Costa Castillo, the Mexican animal tamer, threw her arms about the neck of the lion which killed her fiancee and kissed him.

Teddy, the tawny brute, that dragged Emerson Dietrich, Cornell graduate and manager of the animal show to his death, received the caress with evident pleasure. The other lions, though they had taken part in a tragedy the day before, calmly eyed the trainer, but made no more.

Miss Castillo defended her pets. "They did not know what they did, Senor," she said. "They shall not die."

Miss Adgie arrived on Monday and went to the freight car where her lions were caged. When she saw McCord, the keeper, she ordered him to look her in the eye. She was excitable and her voice was almost a scream.

"You know the cubs were hungry, yet you sent him in here to do your work," she cried. "You stood by and let those little cubs tear him to pieces. You could have taken the fork and driven them away. You know you could. A fine lion man you are!"

McCord tried to reply, but the woman would not notice him. He seemed a nervous wreck and quailed under the woman's bitter denunciation.

"My heart tells me there is something in this affair that I do not know," Miss Castillo explained mysteriously. "Whether it is jealousy, hate, or something else — who knows?"

Animal keepers at the Lincoln Park Zoo said to-day that wild brutes sometimes display ungovernable jealousy. They say it is not impossible that Miss Castillo's lions resented the regard she had for Dietrich and he for her, and waited their time to kill him.

But Miss Adgie refused to blame Teddy. "Why should I kill him?" she asked. "He is only a cub. He didn't know what he was doing. I believe he was only playing with Mr. Dietrich and accidentally discovered that he was a stranger. I'm sure Teddy did not mean to harm anyone."

The death of Dietrich was accidental, according to the verdict of a coroner's jury here.

Parents Defend Teddy.

New York, June 26.—The parents of Emerson Dietrich, killed by Lions at Chicago, say they believe their son's death was an accident.

"Emerson had trained Teddy and was very fond of him," said Mr. Dietrich yesterday. "I'm sure Teddy had no intention of killing Emerson."

Dietrich was graduated from Erasmus High School in 1909. He won many medals as an athlete, and was a member of a noted auto-polo team which toured the country. Because of his fearlessness he was known as "Dare-Devil Dietrich."

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

AN HISTORICAL INDEX OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH

A Complete Compilation and Systematic Arrangement of Material of Local History

In a very few years, possibly not more than four or five at the most, we shall celebrate the 100th anniversary of the very beginning of things in connection with the settlement of what is now the City of Peterborough and district immediately surrounding. We shall mark the coming in of the first settler (1819), the erection of the first small dwelling house and mill. Then to note further accession to the group of settlers and putting up of more dwellings, opening out of stores, laying out and construction of the first rude roads, the first buildings used for public purposes such as hotels, churches and for the administration of affairs.

Of all of this we have only vague records and then not in entirety. Life was at first too strenuous to give time for much relation for the benefit of the future. We have some notes of the early settlement and subsequent progress and the coming in of municipal institutions, but of the people, themselves, who they were, where they came from, and how, under such and much difficulty they worked out their lives, nothing has been recorded, and little remains but what is enshrined in the memories of a few of the oldest inhabitants.

The Oldest Inhabitant.

Naturally, one may ask, who is there now who was here at the birth and inception of the place. Not many it is true, though there is verbal relation, only one or two generations removed from participation in the events. Such record is, to some extent, reliable, and may be taken for what it is worth, and because it may not be successfully disputed, though often distorted by the personal point of view. Possibly the oldest inhabitant of the city is Mr. Frank Weir, of East City. On July 14th, 1913, two days after he had taken part in the procession of the 12th of July preceding, he was standing at the corner of Hunter and Chambers Streets, pointing across the street. "I was taken by my mother to pick berries on the ground where the Oriental Hotel stands, in the year 1826. We had come up from Cobourg, by waggon, and while waiting for friends to bring a vehicle to take us down into Otonabee, had our meal at a little shack that stood on the ground now covered by the Post Office. We afterwards strolled over the foot-paths that wound through the woods where now the best business section of the City was located."

It is true that all history is comprised in a record of the movements of individuals. Stop that movement and history ceases. So to tell the history of Peterborough would be to recount the story of its activities as set in motion by the people who settled here to gain a living, to hew out a future among the forests that covered the ends of the town site and district. It is an interesting tale of pioneer privation and effort, of faith in the future by the men who built the town. At first of a small community, bound together by the knowledge that only by mutual, as well as individual effort could the settlement hope to survive and make progress. For there were dark days in the past, when it seemed that isolation would never be broken. To even touch the past and its doings would fill pages of a newspaper.

An Historical Index.

During the last four months Mr. F. H. Dobbin has been engaged on a work which he has just completed, that of writing and having transcribed on the typewriter, an Historical Index of Peterborough. It is rather an unique conception, most thoroughly carried out. It is not a history, but a copious compilation of facts from which history is written. History, in general, will deal with the larger things of municipal life and its environment while the Index recounts both the larger and those of less—say of personal significance. Many of the common things of life interest the common people, and these things are entitled to be of record. They fill in our municipal life as the mortar fills in between the bricks. Essential, but unobtrusive. The work is a minute detail of the locality, dating back to the beginning of things, and a perusal of its pages will place the reader in possession of and, in fact, touch with what has gone on in the past, and of the parts played by those who have worked and helped in the progress that has been made. On the pages and in the paragraphs may be traced the longings and aspirations of the people for the betterment of means of communication, to find an outlet for the first manufactures. In another line to bring together facilities for education, to improve conditions, to stir up the Provincial Assemblies to give adequate opportunity for development, and to do away with certain wrongs and abuses that were holding back on the line of progress.

Collecting for Twenty Years.

Mr. Dobbin had been collecting for the last twenty years with the object of preparing the work, narrative, fact and incident. Such have been sifted and so far as possible, verified, and made use of. So soon as newspapers began to be published there was available fairly accurate memoranda of occurrences, though it may be said that the reporter of those days—the forties—did not bestir himself to give elaborate reports. Still the facts are in print, and may be taken as true. Then from the date mentioned, on up to the present, there is a chain of relation of fact that only needed to be drawn out and selected, in part, to make the basis of the work. This Mr. Dobbin has done. He has gone through every page of the newspapers for the last seventy years, (1843-1914), and selected that which forms a minute and surprisingly complete record. It will be extremely useful as a book of reference, such being the intention of the compiler.

It is divided into thirteen sections, for convenience of reference. These comprise the following: Historical, Institutions and Societies, Religious, Biography, Events, Railway, Fires, Educational, Industrial, Political, Municipal, Military and Public Works. Each of the sections is provided with a copious index—in fact it is "cross-indexed" most minutely, for purposes of reference. For instance should the inquiry be made as to who was 'Conger'. The biography will afford a summary of his life, where he came from and the share he had in the activities of the town. It would be observed by the reader that he was concerned in the political matters of the day, and reference is made to the section "Political". Here is described his connection in such regard. Further reference will be noted to his part in public matters, and in "Municipal" will be found his connection with the Council and municipal administration. Still further reference would give the part he took in the promotion of local enterprises and movements, such as that of the formation of the Little Lake Cemetery, the advocacy (one of the first) of the Trent Valley Canal. All this by way of illustration.

Historical Section.

The Historical Section deals with the very early history of the town, its settlement and growth. The story of the early pioneers. With this is the story of the Robinson Emigration from Ireland to this district, a tale than of which there is none more pathetic in the annals of pioneer life in Canada. A complete list and almost the first time in print, of the immigrants, names, members of families, lands on which they located in the surrounding townships. The names are those of people we all know and meet every day. An account of the appearance of the country and lands at and around Peterborough given by Champlain, the explorer, when he made haste to cross the height of land between Lake Huron and Lake Ontario on his way to take part in repelling the Indian tribes who were threatening destruction to the people along the northern shore of Lake Ontario. The description given is accurate and the locality can be easily recognized. There are copious extracts from the proceedings of the Counties Council during the seven years that the town and county were joined for municipal purposes, lists of the Council and officers of the local administration.

"Institutions and Societies" tells of the formation of the many such which have been organized, blossomed, bore fruit and died, and of those that survive; of the people who toiled and worked for these in the public service; story of the inception and progress of our parks, hospitals, institutes, since the days of 1845, which began with the first Building and Loan Society; public, secret, denominational, all are represented.

Religious Department.

The "Religious" section deals with Churches and Church Life. It represents a large share of effort and the expenditure of much energy. The history of each Church is given and credit is handed to those who accomplished so much in this field. In addition, there are pages of notes detailing the movements of the clergy, the building and improvements, the gradual accession of larger importance.

One of the most interesting sections is that of "Biography". Every man who came at all into our municipal or public life is entered. We may do that much, if no other, to preserve some reference of those who accomplished so much in this field. In addition there are pages of notes detailing the movements of the clergy, the building and improvements, the gradual accession of larger importance.

One of the most interesting sections is that of "Biography". Every man who came at all into our municipal or public life is entered. We may do that much, if no other, to preserve some reference of those who gave unselfishly of time and energy in the pubic service. Over four hundred separate biographs have been prepared, involving an immense amount of work and care in compilation.

Events in City's History.

The section of "Events" comprises over sixey pages of incident and story. Things, which while not of our municipal life, are a part of it. Just the matters that men like to call to recollection and talk over, especially if they had a hand in the occurrence. Date, time and place are given. All can be nailed down to settle disputes as to the time of the "Boring for Coal Oil" fiasco, the "Big Snow," the "Big Flood," and a thousand others. None have been missed.

"Railway" gives a succient detail of the efforts of the Town to bring in a railway. Of the meetings, deputations, bonuses, surveys, promotions, and effort. It was the one vital thing longed and worked for in the early days.

"Fires" we have always with us, just like the poor. In a wooden day and wooden construction fires worked fearful havoc. Millions of dollars in value have gone up in smoke in Peterborough. The section gives an accurate record of all fires that destroyed business buildings, stores, shops, mills, since the early fifties. In this section can be traced the gradual evolution of the front street, as it now appears, and the several locations can be identified from the destruction of buildings that covered the sites in the early days.

The History of the Schools.

"Educational" is the history of our schools. From the building of the first log school, in which taught "Parson" Taylor, of affectionate memory, to the erection of the fine Collegiate Institute, all are described. Also the progress of the Separate Schools. Complete lists of the Boards of Education from the early fifties up to the present. Over 80 pages of detailed record of the proceedings of the Boards, the records of the schools, the financing, the regulating; and an earnest effort at all times to improve the facilities for teaching and to afford better education for the children of the people.

Continually, we have reference to our industries. Who promoted this or that. What did such an industry cost the town or city in the way of bonus, inducement, or privilege. What is the exception, if any. Who is concerned in the venture. Who arranged the terms? All these and hundreds of other questions are answered in the "Industrial" section. Beginning away back in the inception of the lumber industry there is a correct record of all industries established. If municipal aid was afforded the facts are at hand. If private enterprise impelled the establishment credit is given. Large numbers have been started, progressed for a time and passed away. It is interesting to read of these; of the gradual removal of industries from along the river, once the use of electric power came in, not to mention the advent of steam. The history of the lumber business—the first source of wealth to the town—is a story in itself. A full list of all exemptions is supplied, up to date. If, for instance, one wished to know what it cost the town to gain the Electric Works, there are the details. Of the Quaker Oats, the De Laval Co. and all others.

Political Reminiscences.

The political history of the town and riding is ever a topic of conversation and argument. Many have general knowledge of the facts, few of the particulars. Not many may burden their memories with names of candidates, dates of elections and results. All these are given. Elections and results since the time of the Newcastle District, returns for the Colborne District up to Confederation.

THE DEATH OF MR. COX

TORONTO, June 27.—E. W. Cox, president of the Canada Life Assurance Co., died at Folkestone, England, Friday night at 11 o'clock. He had gone for his health. The news came as a great surprise to all Toronto business men, with whom the late Mr. Cox was intimate. Earlier in the week he had sent a message of assurance that he was progressing favourably.

Hemorrhage, following treatment for a throat affection, was the cause of death. The body will be brought to Toronto immediately.

Herbert C. Cox and Dr. Goldsmith accompanied Mr. Cox to England and were with him until the last. It was the former who cabled the brief message which cast gloom around the offices of the Canada Life.

Large Interests.

The late Mr. Cox was closely identified with many business institutions and besides being president of the Canada Life, he was president of the Toronto Savings and Loan, the Imperial Guarantee and Accident Co., and the Provincial Investment Co. He was a director of the Central Canada Loan and Savings Co., the Imperial Bank, to which board he was only recently elected; the National Trust Co., Western Assurance Co., Dunlop Tire Co., and Robert Simpson Co., British American Insurance Co., and the Dominion Securities Corporation.

Fond of Motoring.

His clubs were the York, Lambton, National, Royal Canadian, Caledonian and Manitoba Club of Winnipeg. His chief hobby was automobiling. In this recreation he took a particular delight. He was also a great reader. Between these two he spent most of his leisure hours. He was of a very quiet and unassuming disposition, easy to approach and loved by every member of the Canada Life staff. This same feeling of comradeship permeated his dealings with the field men of the corporation. He was a genius in management. As stated by a friend Saturday morning, "He was one of the ablest life insurance men we had."

Survived by Widow.

Mr. Cox is survived by widow, brother, Herbert C. Cox, president of the Imperial Life, and two sisters, Mrs. A. E. Ames and Mrs. A. L. Davis. He was a member of Sherbourne Street Methodist Church and gave liberally to all church activities.

Deceased was born in Peterborough, Ont., June 18, 1864. As a boy he attended the Peterborough Collegiate. Later he went to Toronto University. He entered the Canada Life Assurance Co. under his father, thel ate Senator Cox, and later father and son joined in a partnership in the control of their financial interests. He had attained a position of high standard as one of Canada's most prominent financiers.

Interests Consolidated.

An intimate friend of the Cox family said: "The Cox interests in the Canada Life and many other concerns were all more or less consolidated by the late senator before his death and with the idea of keeping them together. They will, therefore, in all likelihood come under the immediate control of Herbert Cox, the only remaining son, if he cares to assume it. If not, and what is perhaps more probable, E. R. Wood will be the man. Mr. Wood in many ways is the ablest financier in Canada, was in the closest relation with the senator and in immediate touch with all the Cox interests. These interests probably aggregate fifteen million dollars.

Directors to Meet.

All the directors of the Canada Life were notified immediately on receipt of the news and a meeting has been called for this week. Until then, officials of the company will not make any statement.

Flower Sunday At George Street Methodist Church

Yesterday was Flower Sunday for the George Street Methodist Church and Sunday School. In the morning, the scholars met at 10.30 o'clock and marched up to the Church at eleven, where a special service was held. The pupils, as they took their places in the body of the Church, marched across the front of the auditorium, and each carried a bouquet, which they gave to those in charge of the floral design as they passed the platform. When the whole Sunday School was seated and the floral design completed the effect was very beautiful indeed. Two pillars of flowers were crowned with two large vases, attractively draped.

The Rev. R. G. Peever took charge of the service, which was participated in by Mr. S. R. Armstrong, Superintendent of the Sunday School, and by Mr. R. F. Downey of the Charlotte Street Sunday School. The Church Choir and Sunday School Orchestra also took part in the service.

Mr. R. F. Downey delivered a very hopeful address to the Sunday School. He told in terms that held the interest of the children through out, the story of Joseph, and how his brothers sold him into slavery. From the story he drew a number of truths which he gave to the Sunday School as his message, and which were received with much interest by all the children.

The service was a gratifying one in every way. In the evening the flowers of which there were many beautiful bouquets (and some very lovely baskets from the Bible Classes) were taken down and distributed to the homes of the sick and needy. Owing to the morning session the Sunday school did not meet as usual yesterday afternoon.

WERE SELLING ON THE MARKET

When N. C. Cameron Put a Stop to It—Were Arrested

A travelling jeweller walked into the city last week and took up his stand in the city market. He had the usual paraphernalia with a horse and waggon, and rode up and down the streets announcing wonderful bargains. All went well with them on Thursday night, and they were getting into shape to do business Friday night, when the local secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association got his eye on them, and, with the assistance of P.C. Servante, they were marched to the Police Station.

Secretary N. C. Cameron recognized them as coming from Toronto, one of whose number he had laid a charge against during the last Toronto Exhibition, but who got across the line, and a warrant is now out for his arrest.

A number of innocent people fell through persuasive methods and are now wishing that the jewellers were stopped before they got started. The Retail Merchants' Association will not stand for any person doing the public if they know it, as their motto is honest goods and honest trading.

OIL DISCOVERED IN MONAGHAN

Mr. Rich. Latimer Was Digging Well on His Farm

The comunity of Fraserville is somewhat excited over the discovery of an oil well on the farm of Mr. Richard Latimer. Mr. Latimer's farm is situated on the boundary line between North and South Monaghan, near Whitehead's Wharf, which is nine miles from Peterborough. It has been the opinion of many people, during the past, that there was oil in this vicinity, and Mr. Latimer made this discovery while digging a well. He has samples under test now. Particulars are not yet known, but Mr. Latimer was up to the city Saturday, and it is understood that he is highly satisfied with the report. —Port Hope Guide.

ELOQUENT SERMONS AT SPRINGVILLE

Springville, June 27.—On Sabbath last Rev. Geo. Crow preached two very earnest and eloquent sermons. For the morning service he selected as his text the latter clause of the 4th verse of the 11th chapter of St. Paul's Epistle to the Hebrews, "And by it He being dead yet lixeth." The masterly introduction of the subject, the eloquent interpretation of the truths contained, the earnest appeal to all for a personal application thereof, reflected the zeal and ability of the speaker. The evening service was equally interesting, the reverend gentleman preached a very instructive sermon from Math. 21st chapter, 29th verse, "He answered and said I will not, but afterwards repented and went." The intense desire to make men better was apparent throughout the discourse and is a special characteristic of thes peaker.

The subject for the morning service June 28th, was "Daring To Do"; evening service, "Now Or Never." Special preparations are made for the garden party on July 1st.

The continued drought is becoming serious. The hay crop is too far advanced to receive much benefit. Grain and roots are showing the effects of the dry and windy weather. An immediate rain would benefit beyond estimate.

THE TRUE KIND OF CHARITY

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—It is refreshing to note how united the churches are on the temperance question, and one is led to wonder what the result would be were the same zeal espoused in the cause of Charity—that much abused and misunderstood word—Charity—not the "cast-a-crust-to-a-beggar sort," but the kind St. Paul spoke of in I Cor. xiii, "Though I speak with the tongues of men and angels, and though I give all my goods to feed th poor, and have not charity I am become as sounding brass and tinkling cymbals." I have in my mind a certain divine who laboured in my home town sixteen successive years and preached from the Old Testament, always such sermons as "David was a gude mon." He held forth for two hours every Sunday on such themes, once a year he waxed eloquent. Sunday before July 12th, he would preach and perspire, perspire and preach on Orangeism and down with Catholicism, and when he was succeeded later by a more enlightened man it was found there was nothing in the Orange constitution against Catholics but love for your fellowman. Now such teachers as this man have been the means of raising up such men as are causing all the trouble in Ulster to-day, and discord the world over. They stir up strife. "When I labour for peace they are ready for battle." I cannot see why they call themselves the representatives of Christ. He never sent forth men to preach such a Gospel. So I say it is refreshing to see men of one mind on the true moral issues. A stranger comes to live in a new street. She is asked at once what church she attends. "So and sa"; if it happens to be the one her neighbours attend she is received with open arms, if not she remains the stranger she was. Our good ever-zealous Christian draws aside her skirts in a holier than thou attitude. If more love to your neighbour and less labour and tariff were preached, we might enlarge the ideas and elevate the ideals of the "strangers withinour gates" as people will adopt themselves to the rural conditions of the land of their adoption irrespective of creeds.

Automobile Association Held Enjoyable Shore Dinner At Indian Village On Saturday

While there is much to be said for the excursion where several hours are spent en route and in returning from the actual picnic grounds, it is generally admitted that the elimination of the greater part of the journey, and the resultant longer period at the grounds would be welcome to all who attend such excursions. But the difficulty lies in finding a suitable site so near the city that the sail by boat to and from it will not occupy too much time, or one that while some distance from town can be conveniently reached through medium of the swiftly travelling railway trains and convenient railway schedules. But the fact remains that the raiway schedules to the best sites are not at all convenient, and that to reach others by boat requires the spending of a good deal more time on the steamer than at the actual picnic grounds.

And in those facts lie the reason why the Peterborough Automobile Association was able to crowd a day's rollicking fun, as well as a shore dinner that will be long remembered, into the comparatively few hours of lasct week that remained after the hours of half-past-one on Saturday. For while a beautiful—almost ideal—site, that lay some distance from the city, was chosen for the affair, yet those who were present made the journey by auto, and consequently, although the whole affair transpired during the afternoon and evening only, had as long at the grounds as though they had attended a picnic by boat and spent the whole day in doing so. The weather and scenery made such a delightful combination that the trip to and from the grounds would not have proved irksome were it half as long again, and the arrangements for a good time at Indian Village were so complete that only those who were disposed to shun a merry afternoon and evening, found any opportunity for getting in a dull quarter of an hour during the progress of the affair.

The Shore Dinner that was held by the Automobile Association at Indian Village on Saturday afternoon, was the first outing of the kind that that organization have ever attempted, and thef act that over one hundred people gathered for the picnic, almost overtaxing the accommodations provided, showed to what extent the members of the Association and others are prepared to support their officers in a venture of that kind. All appreciated the efforts that the prime movers of the Associaion expended in arranging for the shore dinner, and showed beyond all doubt that they are more than willing to take advantage of their plans whenever the opportunity is given.

The first party left Central Park Saturday afternoon about half past one o'clock, and were followed an hour later by a second contingent. From that time until five o'clock the number of cars already on the scene were augmented until about twenty-five autos and over a hundred people were assembled at the beautiful spot that had been chosen for the picnic. The cars were lined up under the trees, and with the camp fire, the one hundred people, the trees, the green sward and the lake, made a very attractive picture indeed. So attractive in fact, that Mr. F. Roy, who was present, took a couple photos of the affair.

Partly because the appetizing odours from the cooking fish were rendering it more impossible each minute for the men to wait until sufficient was done to supply the wants of everybody, a large number of them were allured out into the open field and sides were chosen for a baseball game. When the preliminaries were over the teams lined up as follows:

Umpire—Mr. T. V. Donaldson.

Although in the battle that followed the Walkerites were walloped by the score of 14-5, let it be said right at the beginning that that by no means indicates the actual play of the game, which was of the big league class all the time. Mr. Walker did the twirling for his team, and Mr. W. H. Collier held him up in good style behind the bat, starring in his capturing of a number of difficult foul flies, not one of which escaped his ever-ready glove. Mr. Joy and Dr. Pulkinghorn proved a very effective battery for the winning nine, allowing only five runs to be scored, but they were backed up by fairly decent work in the field, and supported by good work with the willow by their teammates, who pounded the opposing pitchers for 14 runs. The game was out on ice in the mourth innings when Mr. Quinn supplanted Mr. Walker in the pitcher's box and was touched up for seven runs the first innings that he twirled. It would be unfair to single out any particular player for all came through with lightning plays in the pinches, and with timely hitting. By request the box score must be omitted, as several of the players feel that they would be powerless to resist the tempting offers from the professional leagues that would come in by the next mail to every player who took part in the game were it published. The number of home runs, three-base hits, stolen bases, etc., would make Ty Cobb turn green with envy were he to have the exact figures.

The fish dinner followed the ball game, and it would be useless to attempt to put down in black and white the delicious taste of the members of the finny tribe which had found their way into the frying pans of Cook Tromley. Suffice it to say that they were consumed with all the relish that hundry Canadians always consume, fresh, well-cooked, bass and lunge, and that the meal left little that could be desired.

After the dinner, another ball game was pulled off, the particulars of which were closely guarded, and as a result the actual progress and result of the game must remain a secret. It is understood, however, that the game was very fast, and fairly sparkled with sensational batting and fielding achievements.

Before darkness set in all were en route for the city, and the first shore dinner of the Automobile Association was over, but the memory of it will be sufficient to guarantee a large turnout at the next one of its kind.

Fraternal Sunday Was Big Success Turnout Was Good

Despite the adverse condition of the weather, Fraternal Sunday proved itself a decided success. The shower of rain which fell at 6 o'clock retarded the assembling of the societies for a few minutes, with the result that instead of marching south as first intended the procession proceeded north from the Market Square. It is difficult to say how many men would have assembled had the atmospheric condition been favourable, as it was, while yet the end of the procession had hardly left the Market Square, the foremost men were passing George Street Church. There was no regular marching order, the men from the various societies inter-mingling in the procession. The 57th Band led off, and the Maple Leaf and Salvation Army Bands were placed at a suitable distance from each other in the procession. Chief Howard, Colonel Miller and Mr. Ernie Reid, the marshalls, kept splendid order, for the spectators were many. At 7 o'clock the procession broke up into sections, and attended the various churches where there were delivered appropriate addresses.

AT ST. JOHN'S.

Forms of service were issued to all visitors at St. John's Church, last evening and both the well-known hymns and responses were heartily joined in. In a few words of welcome Canon Davidson warmly endorsed this movement and commended the Health Fund. All Christians should be interested, he said, in the welfare of both the souls and bodies of men.

The sermon was based on the Text "Thou shalt be missed, because thy seat will be empty," 1 Sam. XIII referring to David's absence from his post in the Court of Saul. Applying the principle the message of the Preacher was: We have all been given places in the Court of the King of Kings. We are to make these our own by preserving effort and to remain in these places of privilege, which may be lost.

This included the keeping of our place in four departments of life:—work, the home, community life, and the Church. Many men needed to be urged to spend more time in their homes where there was too much absence through thoughtlessness. Men had also a place to take and keep in the life of the community, uplifting and brightening it with duties to all our fellow citizens, regardless of race and religion.

In this connexion the Preacher referred to the duty of voting conscientiously and intelligently. Men should not need to be pushed by others or driven to the polls to do a simple and important public duty.

Lastly each one was given a definite place in God's family, which it was theirs to keep. The object of coming to church was not so much to get good as to be in our place and do our duty, "giving the Lord the honour due unto His name." God did not exact worship in any sense as a tax, but welcomed it as an offering of loving duty. God did not need our worship, but we needed to give it, being thus placed in the line of blessing. Those absenting themselves from their place in church were missed by their Heavenly Father and also by their brethren. The church was thereby weakened and her powers of usefulness curtailed. Greater efforts should be made to collect the stragglers who were ineffective because separated, scattered all over, and to get them in line for the good of each one concerned and that of the church. The strengthening of our own forces would be far more effective than attacking others. On this account the present movement to get the fraternal orders into line with the church was most admirable.

Worship was, however, only one part, though an important one in Christian duty. Life in the week was to go with life on Sundays, the church with the home and the shop, and the preacher urged that in all departments duty should be faithfully done. Thus would they be missed when leaving one post for another or when life's work was ended. Some men went away btu were not in the least missed. Life went on just as before because they had done little but live for themselves. No place at church or in the community life was vacant when they departed, for they had not taken or kept any, and so they could not be missed. Such was a sorrowful ending to life and need not be the case if men did their simple duty and kept the place of opportunity given to them.

REG. TURNER'S GUESTS

Sign Writers Have a Jolly Time Down the River on the "San Toy"

Peterborough's Men of "Letters" were royally entertained by Mr. R. Turner this afternoon to a delightful river trip on his charming launch the "San Toy." After a two-hours' run they landed at a wharf and indulged in feats of natation. Then all set to work right earnestly in a fishing contest. Mr. Reg. captured a lovely bass between 3 and 4 pounds, and took the biscuit for the largest catch. His success was entirely owing to the sweet dulcet strains produced by Dad on the tin whistle enticing the finny tribe to speedy capture. On the return journey a call was made at Mrs. Caldwell's lovely home, where a sumptuous supper was awaiting the party. The charming genial hostess was most successful in her efforts to please and satisfy her guests, and were fully appreciated. After a most exciting foot race when the fattest man won the prize, all aboard for a lovely run home—about 60 minutes—all delighted with Mr. Reg's charming good fellowship and the knack he possesses of entertaining and making everybody happy.

A MAD SCRAMBLE FOR OIL SHARES

Peterboro' Man Visited Calgary and Described Scenes There

Mr. Wm. Harstone, Belmont Ave., has returned home after spending some months in California. Returning by way of the Pacific Coast and the Canadian West, Mr. Harstone spent several days in Calgary. Speaking to the Examiner Saturday morning, he stated that the crowds in Calgary, since the oil boom, have been unparalleled in the history of the city. It is almost impossible to get throught the streets, and police officers are kept busy regulating the traffic. The rush for shares in the various companies is like a mad scramble, and excited men and women with rolls of bills in their hands struggle to get near the brokers. Mr. Harstone was informed that ninety per cent of the savings accounts of fifty to two hundred dollars have been withdrawn from the banks to be invested in oil. An expert stated to Mr. Harstone that the oil struck is of the highest quality, and if found in commercal quantities would revolutionize the markets of the world.

Rev. J. W. Gregory Is Leaving Lakefield

Rev. J. W. Gregory, pastor of the Lakefield Baptist Church, for over four years, preached his farewell sermons on Sunday, June 28th. At the morning service his subject was, "The Response of the Watchman," and in the evening on "Mutual Interest." Next Tuesday, Mr. Gregory leaves for Hartford, Ont., to assume the pastorate of the Baptist Church there.

Utilities Commission Met Friday

At the meeting of the Utilities Commission Friday night a letter was read from the Employers' Liability Assurance Corporation regarding the accident to Victor Calo, saying that they did not consider there was any liability, but would consider a suggestion. The Secretary was instructed to reply that the Commission would suggest to offer him, without prejudice, the amount of his doctor's bill and hospital expenses, and wages for the time he is off work, and ask if they would approve of this.

W. Saxby was heard, and asked for a service for a house on Downey street, at the northeast corner of Edinburgh and Downey streets. As there is no main the Superintendent was instructed to lay one on Downey street from Smith street to serve the house.

An application was read for a two-inch main at the Roman Catholic School on Mark street, for which they would pay the expense of laying the main. Referred to the superintendent for a report.

The superintendent was instructed to lay a service and put a hydrant on the property of the Vermont Marble Co., in accordance with the agreement with that company.

An application was read from W. G. Morrow for a main on Hunter street from Belmont avenue to Walton. Not acted upon as the petition was not in complete form.

An account was read from Wm. Kennedy, Jr., for $387.32, including $365 for engineer's fees on account of the McDougall pump. The Secretary was instructed to reply that it would not be paid now as the pump was only provisionally accepted.

APSLEY, June 29.—Rev. Jas. A. Prosser, Methodist minister, who has been in charge of the Apsley Mission field for the past three years, has been removed to Castleton. Before leaving, the members of the choir presented him with a suit case and address. Also to Mrs. Prosser a silver fruit spoon and suitable address. Miss Dora E. Weir's school mates presented her with an address and handsome necklace. Mr. Prosser leaves here with the good wishes of not only his own congregation, but the entire community, and it was hoped that he would be reappointed for another term.

Injured By Blank Cartridge

Norwood Man is in the Nicholls' Hospital.

NORWOOD, June 26.— Richard Jones, C.P.R. sectionman, will probably lose the sight of one eye and his brain may also be affected as the result of being shot today by one of the soldiers of the 45th Regiment, Lindsay, who were returning from Petawawa. Several other men working along the tracks were also shot at. The cartridges were blank, but Jones, who was working about fifteen feet from the train, received one of the discharges in his eye, resulting as stated. He went to Peterborough for treatment.

Farm Hand's Claim For Wages Was Allowed

An interesting sitting of the Division Court was held in the town hall before Judge Huycke. Several cases were adjourned, and almost the whole time of the Court was devoted to the case of Dunn vs. Matthews. John Dunn sued James Matthews for wages, alleging that he was hired at $5 a month for the winter months and $8 a month for the summer. Mr. Matthews claimed that he was dealing with the Barnardo Home and not with the boy. He also claimed to have supplied many goods to the plaintiff and counterclaimed for damages for various things, including damages for kicking a cow and burning a heifer by spraying, and for foul smell of skunks and other things. The cross-examination of Mr. Matthews on his counterclaim was well conducted by Mr. Langley, and besides resulting in the disallowance of much of the counterclaim, afforded considerable amusement to those in the court room. Several other witnesses were examined and judgment was awarded for plaintiff for $50.50 and costs, and the judge directed the defendant to return all goods of the plaintiff in his possession. Mr. O. A. Langley acted for plaintiff, and Mr. Matthews conducted his own case.—Lakefield News.

BIBLE CLASS SOCIAL

The Examiner has been requested to publish the following:

THE BIBLE CLASS SOCIAL.

(At Max. Dennistoun's Jan., 1902.)

'Twas January, the stars were shining bright,
And the moon shone clear on the field's snowy white,
While the merry bells tinkled good night, good night;
We drove from the south, and we passed the Town Clock,
And along George street, we drove block after block,
'Till we reached a mansion fronting Water street,
Where our good host had a social party meet.

The social was held, for the Sunday School class,
The host being the teacher, the ac. could not pass,
Without thanks from the class, to the hostess and host,
The Warden's best thanks, may join in with the toast;
No happier time could any desire,
Two grand open grates both blazing with fire,
And electric lights made a brilliant show,
The social was a great success, this I trow.

A story was told interesting to me,
Of a wonderful man who sailed on the sea,
Tis name was Columbus, who first found this land,
Like Moses of old who was led by God's hand;
The story was told in an excellent style,
By a friend of our host the night to beguile,
While the boys of the class said hardly a word,
But thought their best thoughts for the Lady and Lord.

Long life to our host, and his dearest hostess,
For their kindness of heart may God ever bless
For both class and guests, will hold as a treasure,
The night with Columbus, and its great pleasure,
The good mansion seemed overflowing in mirth,
And all seemed to me like Heaven upon earth,
Please accept my best thanks for a treat so rare,
And the honour paid me through the whole affair.

WEDDING BELLS

IRELAND—KELLY.

On the afternoon of June 25th, 1914, at the home of Mrs. W. B. Kelly, Bridgenorth, the wedding of her daughter, Beatrice, was solemnized by the Rev. G. R. Clare, of Newcastle, assisted by Rev. J. F. Ireland, of Bridgenorth, father of the groom, when she was united in the Holy bonds of matrimony to Norval J. Ireland, B.A., of Albert College.

The marriage ceremony took place beneath an arch of evergreens and daisies and the house was tastefully decorated with a profusion of daisies and cut flowers. At 2:30 p.m. about fifty guests assembled in the drawing-room, when Miss Ida Sanderson, cousin of the bride rendered most skillfully the wedding march from "Lohengrin." The bride, who was given away by her brother, Mr. W. S. Kelly, looked very pretty in a dress of Ivory Duchess satin with lace and pearl trimmings, and her veil was arranged with sprays of lilies of the valley. She carried a beautiful bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. The groom's only sister, Miss Eva Ireland, acted as bridesmaid and was dressed in white, and carried a large bouquet of pink roses. The best man was Dr. B. E. Kelly, of Peterborough, brother of the bride. The bride's five little nieces who acted as flower girls and performed their part gracefully, added much to the interest and impressiveness of the occasion. At the close of the marriage ceremony Miss Sanderson sang a solo in a very pleasing manner, which was greatly enjoyed by all. After congratulations a very dainty lunch was served. In the midst of a deluge of rice, the bride and groom left for a short auto trip before going to the summer cottage, where they propose spending a couple of months. The bride and groom expect to make their home in Albert College after Sept. 1st, where Mr. Ireland will resume his work.

GREENLY—MATTRIES

On Wednesday, June 24th, at 12 o'clock, th e home of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Mattries on John street, was the scene of a very pretty wedding, when their younger daughter, Ethel Mildred, was united in marriage to Mr. James Greenly, of Campbellford, Ont.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore an ivory satin gown, and carried a bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Mildred Micks, of Peterborough, was bridesmaid, and wore maize silk crepe with bouquet of white carnations. Mr. Harold Nancarrow, of Campbellford, was best man, and Mrs. A. E. Micks, of Peterborough, played the wedding music.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. S. LaFlair under an arch of orange blossoms and ferns. The house was tastefully decorated throughout with palms, ferns and roses.

After the ceremony, about thirty guests enjoyed an enjoyable luncheon prepared by Hughes, of Port Hope. The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl and gold necklace, to the bridesmaid a gold bracelet, to the best man gold cuff links. The happy couple left for a western trip and on their return will reside in Campbellford. The guests from out of town were from Niagara Falls, Toronto, Peterborough, Colborne, Trenton and Campbellford.—Port Hope Guide.

The Poor Fellow Couldn't Sleep

The following story appears in the June issue of the Rod and Gun, and may be of interest to local people:

Three sports from Dummer, ardent admirers of the gun, wended their way across the rocky shores at the head of Stoney Lake and on pu into the country to the north, where they hoped to bag some game. Night overtook them as they neared a large beaver meadow, and here, in a little shanty used by the owner while gathering hay, they decided to seek shelter for the night. A fire was kindled, supper prepared, a hearty meal disposed of, and pipes lit, ere they climbed to "roost."

Now, John was a long, lanky, lean, individul, of few words, well satisfied ith himself and the world and a crack shot who would rather hunt than eat. Dick, by calling, a farmer, was a wiry man, a bundle of nerves, who took his vacation with all seriousness. Bob was a fat, massively built fellow, who looked as if he had never missed a meal nor lost a night's rest in his life. A great melancholy haunted him, however, for he was ever bemoaning the fact that he could not sleep.

A few spicy, hair-raising yarns were reeled off. At length Bob, with a heavy sigh, suggested that they roll in.

"All I hope is," says he, "that I sleep better than I did last night."

The shack boasted only of one bunk, into which the three crawled. It was not long before a heavy sleep spread its mantle over the trio, and the rafters were soon vibrating with their swelling snores.

'Twas midnight; John awoke with a start as he heard something walking on the roof just over their heads. He gave Dick a prod in the ribs, but it was quite unnecessary, for he, too, was intently listening, as best he could between Bob's snores, to see if he could make out what it was.

"Let's get up," whispered John.

Reaching up to the shelf he grasped the rifle and holding it straight up it erm's length ho let drive in the direction of the noise. To their consternation the monster fell with a heavy thud and rolled to the ground. Quietly replacing the gun Dick pulled the blanket up to his chin and proceeded to dream of the buck he was going to shoot on the morrow.

Morning came; already the sun was shining in through the window. John called to his companions to get up and pay for their beds. Bob was the last to regain consciousness.

Propping himself on one elbow he used the free hand to clear the cobwebs from his drowsy orbs. Taking a long, lingering look at his two pals, who were by this time almost dressed, he queried: "Well, boys, how did you sleep?"

"Fine," said Dick, "how did you get along, Bob?"

"Not very well, Dick, I rolled and tossed all night," groaned Bob.

John passed out through the door. "Come on out and see what we shot last night, boys," called John.

"Who was shot?" growled Bob.

"What Dick shot," sang John.

"Like the mischief you did," persisted Bob.

"Come and see, then," retorted John, as he poked his head in at the door.

Bob did not wait to finish his toilet, but sallied forth, muttering: "you guys have gone crazy."

His eyes nearly bulged out of his head as he beheld a huge porcupine lying on the ground.

"Well, I'll be blowed," stuttered he, as he stood there shivering, "when did you shoot that?"

"Last night," sang the pair.

Bob could not be convinced that a gun had been fired off at his head until he saw the hole in the roof.

As he sat down to lace his boots he spluttered:

"Well I'll be jiggered."

FIRST IMPRESSIONS

The following letter, entitled "First Impressions" was written for "The Alliance Weekly" by Mr. W. H. Johnston, a former Peterborough boy, who is now in Ecuador, South South America:

Four and a half months in the Province of Manavi, Ecuador, already. How rapidly the time has flown for one missionary recruit, desirous of settling down calmly, amidst curious and foreign missionary surroundings in a land shadowed darkly by clouds of revolution, on the purpose of language study. And although these two northern coa-t provinces of the republic, namely, Esmeraldas and Manavi, for the past three months have been the battling grounds of our latest internal war, I am happy in the certainty that the Lord our God in His own good time has sent me here.

Having been asked to give a statement of "first impressions" since arrival, my mind has been reviewing events of thep ast quarter year for this purpose. But really you can hardly imagine how difficult the proposition is. No sooner is the reflection of my experiences focused in a way satisfactory to print upon paper, but some new startling revolutionary movement, or an earthquake, or the news of another plague, or some other staggering native custom not previously met with looms up disconcertingly, enshrouding my previously prepared "first impression" in a blank fog of bewilderment.

However one "E.I." smiles cheerfully through the surrounding murkiness refusing to topple over into the general mental chaos. This is the happy welcome received from every side. Rev. Mr. Polk came aboard ship at Bahia and gave me a hearty Christian handclasp with a few words of hospitable greeting, making me feel at home before my feet had yet touched the soil. The necessity of the small boat's leaving for shore cut this happy meeting short. A few hours of further streaming and Manta, the destination of my voyage, was in sight. It sits well out on a peninsula of a few miles' length, as though beckoning ships to halt and cast anchor in its roads. Situated on a bare sandy hillside, a town of iron-sheeted walls and iron-sheeted roofs, devoid of shade trees, it reflects back the rays of a equatorial sun. Yet the uniqueness of the moments while I stood upon the ship's deck and was drawn silently closer and closer to it; the thoughts sacred, sweet, and secret between the Lord and me, with perhaps a little romantic consciousness of this crisis event occurring at that milestone in my humble career, together made that strange looking town seem pretty.

Rev. Mr. Crisman had overcome difficulties to arrive at port in time to meet the new arrival, and engineer the feat of getting a green traveller and his 1,350 pounds of outfit through the Customs. He so cheerfully and deftly succeeded as to leave me impressed with the thought that he also was glad to welcome more "harvest help." A few minutes of rather dream-like wonder as I took in some of the strange surroundings, and then we were off for Montecristi, journeying by horses. It was the first time in a saddle for me, but the Lord propped me up and made the new experience a pleasant event. I was able to observe the character of the surrounding country as we moved along; rather flat in the immediate coast vicinity, but quickly giving place to hill and valley formation. Strange was the knowledge to an easterner that the coast region has the least rainfall. In fact for nine months of the year in this section there is none at all, and as a result the land presents a withered, dried-up appearance accentuated by the tangle of low, naked trees and bushes grimly holding on to life until the cycling of the year presents them with another short rainy season.

Soon we were at our "desired haven," and I had met the delightful family of Brother Crisman. After a night's rest we started for a sixty-mile trip to Junin, a town in the interior of the province where a neat, commodious chapel (a credit to our Alliance) has been erected. I had arrived in Ecuador in time to be at its dedication. The first half of the journey was accomplished by rain, and the remainder on horseback.

Shortly after dusk the street lights of Junin (kerosene lights on poles) told us that we were almost at la Senora de Mondoza's home. Other Christians were there also. I soon learned these people could sing, testify, enjoy the reading of God's Word, and pray as heartily unto the Lord as those left behind. The new "mision-ero" was cordially received. The joy felt in my heart on first contact with these Ecuadorian brothers and sisters in Christ Jesus cannot be expressed. Brother and Sister Polk arrived the next day from Bahia, thus giving me the privilege incidentally of meeting all our small force in Ecuador during my first three days here.

The first chapel service was held on Saturday night. This was a memorable event as our Junin edifice is the first place in Ecuador dedicated solely for Divine worship in the form of public services. The tidings of the wonderful event had spread all over the countryside. So it was not surprising to find the place packed full of precious souls. The audience was well mixed, men perhaps being a little more in the majority. Rapt attention was given to the two addresses delivered through Brothers Polk and Crisman. Certainly a profound impression was made upon many hearts by the Holy Spirit. On Sunday three most wonderful services were held. How vivid an impression these made upon me. The morning and afternoon were given over to the native Christians. The memorial of the Lords' Supper at this time, when I was favoured with the unique privilege of communing with those whose earthly language I was not yet familiar with, will always live in my memory. The evening service was a glorious repetition of Saturday night. It was a most blessed way of being introduced to my missionary life. On Monday morning we exchanged farewells and separated for our various centres. A young woman, la Santa Pastora, is in charge of the Junin work for the present. Her ministry is being blessed with continued good attendance. Pray for our native helper.

I must not forget to mention that while in Junin, other happy Ecuadorians welcomed me also. The ticks, who are dwellers in the low bushes and long grass, jubilantly introduced themselves. We became blood relations in one sense of the term. Since then other good friends have presented themselves, the fleas, who have noticeably improved my habits through their fellowship, making me much more active and alert than I was on first entering the country. Just one more instance of the many sided welcome. Five visitors called upon me one pleasant afternoon about a month and a half ago. Fortunately it was only a passing call, and I was luckily out for a walk at the time. They were revolutionary bullets which passed in one wall and out the other of my combination drawing room, study and bedroom. One of them shed his steel jacket in the wall which he left by. In lieu of calling cards they left ragged tears in the plaster and paper. Do you think they are all glad I am here?

This last incident took place at a time when a small party of the revolutionists unsuccessfully attempted to capture the town from the loyalist garrison which has been stationed here during the entire trouble. Only two deaths and several wounded were the casualties in this melee of small guns. However, the town, which for the first part of the upheaval showed marked sympathy towards the rebel party, has been under strict military rule, and the storming party discovered their secret friends of Montecristi unable to assist them in their attack. The manifest unrest here, together with certain military restrictions have markedly influenced the attendances at our services in Montecristi. But things are again indicating a change for the better.

The revolution is happily abating. The bubonic plague has been swept clean from this vicinity. We have not experienced an earthquake shock for over a month, and I am falling into line with native ways. First impressions are over, and ever increasing lasting impressions are affecting me. But this is exceeding my subject. Oh! the miseries, the thick spiritual darkness, the deadness of national and individual conscience, and the mighty sway of immoral sin which prevent their seeing, and hearing, and being saved. Yet, thank God for the bright proofs over this province of Manavi that He is able to do exceeding abundantly amongst those who will open their hearts and let the Prince of Life come in and sup with them. Pray with us for the burden which is too heavy for five missionaries to bear alone.

ROYAL PAIR SLAIN

Student Shoots Archduke Ferdinand of Austria and Wife

IN THE CAPITAL OF BOSNIA

SARAYEVO, Bosnia, June 29.—Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir to the Austrian-Hungarian throne and the Princess of Hohenburg, his morganatic wife, were shot dead in the main street of the Bosnian capital by a student yesterday, while they were making an apparently triumphant progress through the city on their annual visit to the annexed provinces of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

The archduke was hit full in the face, and the princess was shot through the abdomen and throat. Their wounds proved fatal within a few minutes after reaching the palace, to which they were hurried with all speed.

Those responsible for the assassination took care that it should prove effective, as there were two assailants, the first armed with a bomb and the latter with a revolver. The bomb was thrown at the royal automobile as it was proceeding to the town hall, where a reception was to be held, but the archduke saw the deadly missile coming and warded it off with his arm. It fell outside the car and exploded, slightly wounding two aide-de-camps in a second car, and half a dozen spectators.

It was on the return of the procession that the tragedy was added to the long list of those that have darkened the pages of the recent history of the Hapsburgs. As the royal automobile reached a prominent point in the route to the palace, an eighth grade student, Gavrio Prinsip, sprang out of the crowd and poured a fusillade of bullets from an automatic pistol at the archduke and the princess. Both fell mortally wounded.

Prinsip and a fellow conspirator, a compositor from Trebinje, named Gabrinovics, barely escaped lynching by the infuriated spectators and were finally seized by the police who afforded them protection. Both men are natives of the annexed province of Herzegovina.

The first attempt against the archduke occurred just outside the girls' high school. The archduke's car had restarted after a brief pause for an inspection of the building when Gabrinovics hurled the bomb. This was so successfully warded off by the archduke that it fell directly beneath the following car, the occupants of which, Count von Boos-Waldeck and Col. Merizzo, were struck by slivers of iron.

Archduke Francis Ferdinand stopped his car and after making enquiries as to their injuries and lending what aid he could, continued his journey to the town hall. There the burgomaster began his customary address, but the archduke sharply interrupted and snapped out: "Herr Burgomaster, we have come here to pay you a visit, and bombs have been thrown at us. This is altogether an amazing indignity."

After a pause, the archduke said: "Now you may speak."

On leaving the hall the archduke and his wife announced their intention of visiting the wounded members of their suite at the hospital on their way back to the palace. They were actually bound on their mission of mercy when, at the corner of Ruldolf strasse and Franz Josef strasse, Prinzip opened his deadly fusillade.

A bullet struck the archduke in the face. The princess was wounded in the abdomen, and another bullet struck her in the throat, severing an artery. She fell unconscious across her husband's knees. At the same moment the archduke sank to the floor of the car.

The assassins were interrogated by the police during the course of the afternoon and both seemed to glory in their exploit. Prinzip said he had studied for a time at Belgrade. He declared he had long intended to kill some eminent person from nationalist motives.

Prinzip is 18 years of age. Nedeljo Gabrinovics is 21 years of age. He told the police that he had obtained the bomb from an anarchist at Belgrade, whose name he did not know.

International Trouble Feared.

VIENNA, June 29.—It is feared that the Sarayevo tragedy will still further embitter the none too friendly relations existing between Austria and Servia. Both youth who fired the fatal shots and the bomb are Servians with close associations with Belgrade. The bombs also came from Belgrade.

It is likewise remarkable that the first news of the assassination received at Belgrade came from the Servian capital.

King and Queen Bombarded.

LONDON, June 29.—Militant suffragettes circumvented the police on Saturday and bombarded King George and Queen Mary with leaflets at the entrance to Hyde Park. A bundle of the papers struck the King's hat and knocked it sideways, while that Queen's parasol caught another shower of pamphlets.

Two women were seized by the police and carried away struggling violently.

Boats Collide.

KINGSTON, Ont., June 29. — The passenger steamer Alexandria, on her way from Kingston to Charlotte, collided off the lake about two o'clock Saturday morning, with the steamer Querida loaded with pulpwood.

Neither boat suffered much damage, as both were able to proceed on their way. The Querida was on her way from Anticosti Island to Thorold.

PRINCE IN SHAM FIGHT.

He Covers Himself With Glory at University Manoeuvres.

LONDON, June 28.—The Prince of Wales won a slice of glory Saturday in the annual sham fight between the infantry troops of Oxford and Cambridge. The duel took place near Aldershot where, with the advantages of entrenchments added to a naturally strong defensive position, the Cantabs should have held the Oxford warriors at bay. This they would probably have done but for the activity of the prince and the scouts under him. The prince received orders in the scout district between the Oxford concentrations and the light blue trenches. He and his man kept up a consistent trot for miles, and were able to bring their advance guard to a position so advantageous that had the fight continued Oxford could have followed the Napoleonic dictum of destroying its opponent in detail.

He discovered a cycle patrol from Cambridge, sent him back with information to his captain, and then sprinted ahead again with such rapidity that in half an hour he knew as much about the Cambridge defences as he would have done if he had observed them from an aeroplane.

The army training manual lays it down that a scout's first duty is to obtain all the information he can from the people of the country, and this regulation the prince carried out to the letter. Cabmen, cyclists, railway porters and pedestrians were all interrogated. One native in an endeavor to make the directions as explicit as possible, seized the prince by the collar of his tunic and twisted him around as he pointed out the way.

"THE TERMS OF SURRENDER"

By Louis Tracy

"It's the Scots blood in me," he explained, when people rallied him as to his saving habits. "My great-grandfather lost a sixpence one day in Belfast an' the family has been makin' good ever sence. That ain't no sixpentes here; so I run a dime bank. Another thing," and his bulging eyes challenged dispute, "it's a fine bully notion ter let well enough alone. This yer proposition is goin' along O.K. Let her rip!"

Power, of course, was accumulating wealth with every turn of the rolls in the reduction mill. The name of the mine became a standing joke in Colorado. "What price the El Precb outfit?" men would say, and spoke with bated breath of the millions it would bring in the open market. Not only were there almost unlimited supplies of rich ore in sight, but the very granite containing the main vein itself yielded handsomely under low-grade treatment. It seemed impossible that the undertaking should go wrong at any stage. If water was tapped, it went to irrigate new lands which MacGonigal had added to the ranch. If a new shaft was sunk, sufficient pay-ore was taken out of the excavation to meet the cost; whereas, in ninety-nine mines among a hundred, the charge would have fallen on capital.

For three months Power lay fallow at Dolores. His bodily vigour was unimpaired; but his mind demanded the restorative tonic of peace. A Chicago bookstore sent him the hundred most important books which had been published during his absence from civilisation, and, with their aid, he supplemented Marquerite's lessons, and soon brought himself abreast of contemporary thought. Beyond establishing a maternity hospital in Bison, and renewing the grant to Dr. Stearn's poor, he did not embark in philanthropic schemes to any great extent. Still, he found pressing need of a secretary, and secured an excellent assistant in a Harvard undergraduate, a young man whose brilliant career in the university was brought to a dramatic close by an automobile accident which crippled him for life. He was one of the first victims of the new force. Power had never seen a motor car until he reached New York. The industry had sprung into being when he was immured in the Andes. Even yet it was in the experimental stage, and his secretary, Wilmot Richard Howard, was testing an improved steering-gear when he was smashed up by a hostile lumber waggon.

The post Power offered him was a veritable God-send, and he, in his way, became infinitely useful to his employer. A curious sympathy soon existed between them. The limitations of Howard's maimed body caused him to understand something of the cramped outlook before Power's maimed soul. Moreover, within a month, his wide reading and thorough acquaintance with the world's current topics filled gaps in Power's knowledge which books alone could not repair. When Power quitted Bison in the spring of the year none who did not know his history would ever have suspected that he had dwelt so long apart from his fellow-men.

The two travelled together. Halting in New York for a few hours only, they crossed the Atlantic in the Lucania. They remained in London a week, living in one of those small and exclusive West-end hotels, whose patrons come and go without the blare of trumpets in the press, which is the penalty, or reward, of residence in the more noteworthy caravansaries. London, it is true, is the one city in the world where a millionaire can mingle unnoticed with the crowd; but Power took no risk of undue publicity. Once, in later years, a newspaper divorced him, and blazoned forth to all and sundry the status he occupied in Colorado; thence forth, Howard arranged matters in his own name, and hotel managers and hall porters bowed to him as the holder of the purse.

From London, reinforced by a first-rate valet, the pair went to Devon. There, in a wooded comb looking out over the Atlantic, they found Dacre, the one man living in whose ears Power could to some extent unburden his heart. From him were forthcoming certain details as to Nancy's end; for he had happened to dine one evening with the physician who attended her constantly after her arrival in England, and the doctor, little guessing how well informed his neighbour was as to Mr. Marten's antecedents, had entered into particulars of what he described as "a case that presented unusual and baffling features."

"From what he told me, I gathered that she must have pined away from the moment she left you in the Adirondacks," said Dacre. "I realise now that she not only fretted herself into a low state of health, but practically gave her life to her child. No wonder the doctor was puzzled! He could not diagnose her ailment, for who would have suspected that a young, beautiful, and rich woman was resolved to die? Now, knowing what we do know, we can see that it was better so. She would never again have lived with Marten as his wife, and there was bound to be trouble sooner or later. Dear lady! I have often thought of her, and of you. Sometimes, when that most misleading faculty called commonsense urged that you, too, must be dead, I have pictured your meeting in the great beyond. Indeed, it is the hope of such reunions that accounts for mortal belief in immortality. Remember, I also have paced the Via Dolorosa, and I prize those hours, above all others, in which I dream of a kingdom where wrongs are adjusted by an all-wise Intelligence, and the wretched failures of earthly life are dislodged from memory by some divine anodyne."

There was silence for a while. The two men were talking in a restful old-fashioned room which commanded a far-flung view of the Atlantic. Howard, whose acute sensibility might always be trusted in such moments, had betaken himself to the garden with an amiable collie, and the friends were free to talk without restraint.

Then Dacre essayed a cheerier note, "We can't help dwelling on these things," he said; "but I would remind you that you are still a young man, and it is a nice question, whether, when all is said and done, you are justified in binding yourself for ever to a pale ghost. It is a poetic conceit; but the eugenist would tell you that you ought to marry."

"I shall never marry," said Power.

Nancy's secret would be buried with him, and that fact alone barked any reference to Marguerite Sinclair. Dacre was exceedingly shrewd, and could hardly fail to reach the correct conclusion if he heard that "the other woman" did actually exist, and that circumstances of recent discovery alone prevented the contemplated marriage.

"Ah, well!" sighed the older man, relapsing into Power's mood. "This is a genuine instance of the pot advising the kettle not to be black. How do you purpose spending your time?"

"I'll tell you. I mean to do some good in the world. But I have not come here to bore you with humane projects. I've not forgotten that you are a yachtsman. Say you agree, and I'll hire a yacht to take us up the west coast of Scotland and across the North Sea to the fiords."

"Spoken like a prince! It is the very thing I'm longing for; but my purse won't run it, and I'm rather too old to fraternise with Cockney excursionists on David MacBrayne's steamers or Cook's tourists in Norway."

So the friends passed an enjoyable summer, and liked the yacht so well that they cruised south by way of Holland, Belgium, and France, and wintered in the Mediterranean. Then Power and his secretary hied them to Bison again; whence their next journey headed east. They visited flower-laden Honolulu, panting Japan, grey China, and golden India. Pitching his tent where he listed, Power saw mankind in the mass. Everywhere, even in climes where Nature is prodigal of her gifts, there was misery to be softened, suffering to be alleviated, men and women in want and worthy of help. His methods were simple in the extreme. Attracting little or no attention by display of wealth, he and Howard studied every problem that seemed to call for solution by money wisely applied. At the last moment—often when he had departed to some far distant place—Power would send the needed sum to the right quarter. Thus, remaining almost unknown, he left a trail of well-doing behind him in the four corners of the globe. Sometimes, when the written or printed word insisted on making him famous, if Bison was too remote a sanctuary, he would disappear for many months on end, either hobnobbing with Dacre in Devonshire or elsewhere, or taking protracted tours in out-of-the-way countries like East Africa, Siberia, or the Balkans.

Naturally, he had adventures and misadventures. No man can scour the earth, year in and year out—be he rich as Croesus or kindly as Francis d'Assisi—without enduring vicissitudes, whether they arise from the haphazard casualties of travel or are the outcome of sheer human perversity.

In Nairobi, he had the narrowest escape from being mauled by a lion; his boat was wrecked in a rapid of the Yang-tse-Kiang, and a Chinese coolie saved him from death by diving after him when he sank, stunned by collision with a rock; in the town of Omsk, in Eastern Siberia, he was lodged in a fever-stricken prison for interfering between a brutal Cossack officer and a female political prisoner whom the man was flogging mercilessly with a knout. On this occasion Howard rescued him by bribing every official in sight. His worst experience came in a Rumelian Christian village. Howard found that certain saline mud baths on the coast of tse Adriatic exercised a highly beneficial effect on his injured spine; so Power left him there, to undergo a complete course of treatment, and travelled alone in the interior. By ill luck, he was benighted in a miserable hamlet near Adrianople. During the night the Turkish authorities learned that smallpox was rife among the inhabitants. They established a cordon, and drove back at the point of the bayonet all who attempted to leave the place. For six weeks Power lived in a pesthouse; but the Andean rap rose again in his bones, and he reorganised the habits of the community so thoroughly that its survivors regarded him as a man sent by God for their deliverance.

Thus, doing god by stealth, and ever widening his knowledge of mankind, he passed thirteen busy years. It would serve no useful purpose to go more fully into the records of that long and fruitful period of his life. Though crammed with incident and rich in the vivid tints of travel in many lands, it calls for none other than the briefest summary in a narrative which, at the best, can deal only with the chief phases of a remarkable career.

He was in his forty-eighth year, and was paying a deferred visit to Dacre, when he entered upon the last, and in some respects the greatest, of his trials. Howard was in London, showing the sights to some relations, and Power had elected to motor to Devonshire. His chauffeur, a tall, well-built youngster, who answered to the name of Maguire—being, in fact, Rafferty's grandson—was eager to test a car which was suposed to possess every mechanical virtue, and Power was not disinclined for the run through a June England. Nothing daunted by the prospect of twelve hours' continuous excess of the speed limit, master and man determined to reach Devonshire in the day. But the machine decided differently. Two burst tyres cost them a couple of hours on the road, and a speck of grit in a valve caused such trouble that it became necessary to stop for the night in a town where careful overhauling of the engine was practicable; so they ran slowly into Bournemouth, and there, in one of the big hotels on the cliff, Power met his own daughter.

He thought, and not without reason, that he was the victim of hallucination. He had halted for a moment in a softcarpeted corridor to look at a sprited painting of wild ponies in the New Forest, when a door opened close at hand. He heard no footstep; but the rustle of a dress caught his ear, and he moved aside to permit the passing of some lady of whose presence he was only half conscious. But a sudden impulse—perhaps due to the action of the magnetic waves which link certain kindred individualities without their personal cognisance—caused him to turn and look at the stranger, and he saw—Nancy!

The light in the corridor was dim—for instance, he had been obliged to peer closely at the picture before he could decipher the artist's signature—but there was no mistaking the extraordinary resemblance which this girl bore to the Nancy Willard of the Dolores Ranch days, the Nancy with whom he used to gallop along prairie tracks where now ran the steel ribbons of electrically-propelled street cars, Nancy as he knew her before he had won and lost her twice.

The shock of recognition was so unexpected that he reeled under it. Then, seeing that the girl was evidently wondering why he was looking at her so strangely, he forced himself to walk on toward his own apartment.

Exhausted Nerves Were Fully Restored by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

When the nerve force expended in the day's work and in the act of living is not replenished by restful sleep at night you have cause to be alarmed, as physical bankruptcy stares you in the face. This letter directs you to the most satisfactory cure for sleeplessness.

Mr. Dennis Mackin, Maxton, Sask., writes:—"I have just finished using the sixth box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I must say that when I commenced using it my nerves were so bad that I could scarcely get any sleep. I would lie in bed nearly all night without sleep, and anyone who has this trouble knows the misery of sleepless nights. The Nerve Food helped me from the start, and has built up my nervous system wonderfully. I now enjoy good, sound sleep, and instead of feeling tired in the morning I am strong and healthy, and well fitted for my daily work."

A WONDERFUL CURE OF AN ABSCESS BY Burdock Blood Bitters.

Mr. A. W. Dryden, Amherst, N.S., writes:—"I am going to tell you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for us. My son "Vance," when only nine months old, got an abscess on his cheek bone. I took him to a doctor in St. John, N.B., and he lanced it, and told me it would get well in a few days, and wanted me to keep it squeezed out. It did not seem to get any better, so my wife took him back. The Doctor told her to take him home and it would soon get better. It would gather and break, and it went on that way until he was over four years old.

"He lost four pieces of bone out of where it was lanced, and two pieces came from his mouth; he has lost all of his cheek bone, and his eye was drawn down. I took him to doctors in St. John, Moncton, and Amherst, and all wanted me to let him go under an operation. He was so small I told them that if he was going to die he might as well die as he was as to go there and be all cut to pieces, so I declined to have the operation done. I told them I was going to try Burdock Blood Bitters, as I had heard my mother talk so much about it. I got a bottle, and when it was about half gone noticed it was doing good, and before many days the sore stopped running, and healed up, and the abscess has never broken out again. This happened nearly six years ago, so you can see I have great faith in Burdock Blood Bitters, and I can say with all my heart that it is the best blood medicine in the world."

Amber Diamond Cut.

An amber diamond, weighing 178 1-2 carats, which was found in Cape Colony by Mr. H. Bowker last October, is in London from Amsterdam, where it has been cut. It now weighs 60 carats. The cutting took three months and cost $1,250.

Mr. Bowker tried in vain to sell the diamond in its rough state, owing to the risk of cutting it. An expert describes it as "a wonderful stone."

I.B.S.A. CONVENTIONS NEW JERSEY-OHIO-IOWA

Over 2,000 Delegates in Attendance at Each.

CREATION DRAMA IS EXHIBITED

In Discourse Pastor Russell, Association's President, Discussed Eloquently, "Repentance First, Then Consecration," and Pointed Out From Scripture That the Gospel Is For the Contrite of Heart Only—"Suffering With Christ"—Ultimate Purpose of Trials and Afflictions—Glory to Follow.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its insertion.]

Asbury Park, N. J., June 28.—Pastor Russell is here in attendance at a big General Convention of the International Bible Students' Association, which began its sessions Friday and will continue twelve days. Three General Conventions of this Association are now in progress, the other two being at Columbus, Ohio, and Clinton, Iowa. Upwards of 2,000 delegates are in attendance at each Convention. Being President of the Association, Pastor Russell expects to be present three days at each of the assemblies.

Two sessions are held daily in each of the cities, and the Pastor's famous Creation Drama is exhibited each evening. There being four parts to the Drama, three full presentations will be given.

Pastor Russell's theme to-day was one of great interest. The discourse set forth the philosophy of the untold sufferings of Christians throughout this Gospel Dispensation. Part IV. of The Photo-Drama of Creation, now on exhibition both at home and abroad, depicts the unwritten history of the Church of Christ, and enables those who see it to realize to some extent what it has cost true Christians to "follow His steps." The Pastor's text was, "Jehovah hath appointed Me to preach good tidings to the meek, to bind up the broken-hearted."—Isaiah 61:1.

The Pastor opened his discourse by drawing attention to the statement that the Gospel Message is for the meek, the broken-hearted. During the Millennial Reign of Christ God will take away the stoniness of heart from mankind and will give, instead, hearts of flesh. Under the blessed conditions of the Kingdom, hard, selfish hearts will gradually become soft, tender, kind, gentle. But now, in advance of Messiah's Kingdom, God is seeking those who are seeking Him. Those who are not especially seeking Him are not likely to find Him.

Preaching the Gospel to the meek is the work of this Age. This is the only class which God wishes to have now. He is seeking the class that desire to be of the Bride of Christ, Jesus' joint-heirs in the Messianic Kingdom. Therefore the Message is not such as would suit the hard-hearted. Only the tender-hearted care to know about the love of God, the mercy of God, the forgiveness of sins, the privilege of returning to the Father's House and of having Jesus as their Saviour.

The Pastor believes that in the past we have had a wrong idea as to whom the Gospel Message is to go. We went out into the highways and byways to find those who were very wicked—blasphemers, etc., thinking that these were the ones with whom we were to deal. The Scriptures do not authorize any such idea. A person living in unrepented sin is not in the proper condition to receive God's great Plan of the Ages, the speaker claimed. God has declared that "none of the wicked shall understand." He does not wish them to do so. The very reverse is true.

Suffered Intense Agony With His Back.

Kidneys Were The Cause.

Weak back is caused by weak kidneys, and on the first approach or evidence of kidney trouble Doan's Kidney Pills should be used, and serious trouble avoided.

Mr. John Briggs, Whitewood, Sask., writes:—"I am sending you this testimonial out of pure gratitude, as I am not a believer in patent medicines, but I got so run down, that I became quite willing to give anything a trial. I paid a visit to our local druggist, and told him I was suffering intense agony with my back. He told me I had kidney trouble, and handed me a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, saying it was the best thing he could possibly give me. I tried them, and the effect was certainly marvelous. They are worth $10.00 a box of anybody's money, and I would not be without a box by me. I certainly owe my present condition to Doan's Kidney Pills."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

All purpose is to bind up the broken-hearted.

God's Message speaks peace to those who are in trouble and who are looking to Him, seeking the righteousness which He provides. Some apparently have made a great mistake in thinking that the Gospel is a sledge hammer with which they are to break men's hearts. The speaker does not know of any Scriptural commission for any of the people of God to break the hearts of men. On the contrary, he thinks that the Devil does most of such work.

There are two conversions, declared the Pastor. The first is a turning from sin; the second, a turning to God. Those desirous of approaching God are seeking to leave sin. Those who are living in sin wish to be away from God. We cannot go in two directions at once. The course which God would have any pursue is this: When one finds that he is a sinner, he should repent and turn away from sin; then, when he learns that God has made an arrangement by which sinners may be reconciled to Himself he should ascertain what steps he should take in order to obtain his share in that reconciliation.

While turning from sin may in some respects be called a conversion yet it is not the principal conversion. Only those who take the step of full consecration to the Lord may receive the Holy Spirit and obtain a clear view of the Divine Plan. As the Apostle says, "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned."

Then the Pastor explained that those begotten of the Holy Spirit are Scripturally called children of God, heirs of God, joint-heirs with Jesus Christ. If faithful unto death, they will be glorified in the First Resurrection. Meantime they are to grow in grace, knowledge, love and all other fruits and graces of the Spirit—grow by their trials, by their obedience, by striving against the world, the flesh and the Devil. All this must be done before this class will be ready for their resurrection change. In the present time, however, all who are begotten of the Holy Spirit not only belong to the Church in general, with all others of the people of God, this one Brotherhood of Christ on the spiritual plane, but they are also reckoned as members of the Body of Christ on the fleshly plane — the earthly plane.

From this view point, Christ has been suffering in the flesh throughout the Gospel Age. St. Peter says that the Prophets of Israel testified beforehand of the sufferings of The Christ and of the glory to follow; and hence he urges the Church to arm themselves with the same mind that Jesus had. St. Paul speaks of filling up that which is behind of the afflictions of The Christ—all the members of His Body. After these sufferings are filled up, then the glory will follow. The sufferings are not yet complete.

The speaker went on to explain how trials and discipline are means of developing Christian character, preparing the child of God for future service in the Kingdom. The privilege of suffering with Christ in the flesh is something to be appreciated. Whoever has trials in the flesh because of Christ, because of being His disciple, has occasion for rejoicing. Such should continue faithful, in order that by and by as a polished jewel he may be ready for a glorious setting in the immortality of the future. An uncut, unpolished jewel is not worth much. Its real worth is brought forth in the cutting. So the Lord gives His jewels the cutting and polishing necessary to enable them to reflect the glorious light of the goodness of God.

Jewels do not all require the same amount of polishing, declared the Pastor. A small diamond can be cut and polished more easily than can a large one. Those of the people of God who undergo severe trials and afflictions may hope that they will be accounted large jewels in the hands of the Lord. The larger the diamond, the more work in cutting and polishing.

Then the Pastor discussed the terms upon which one may make his calling and election sure to a position in the glorified Body of Christ beyond the veil. From the time when one's consecration is accepted by the Father and he is begotten of the Holy Spirit, his name is written in the Lamb's Book of Life as a member of the Body of Christ. To these our Lord declares that if they are faithful He will not blot their names from His Book. These are to remain faithful to what they agreed to do—to give their little all in sacrifice. On that condition they were accepted and had their names recorded.

But if any such deny Christ, He will deny them. If they continue to confess Him, He will confess them. To confess Christ is to live for Him day by day—confessing Him in the way in which one uses time, influence, money, talents; confessing Him in business, in everything that is either said or done. But if any consecrated child of God should deny Christ by seeking to live after the world, by neglecting the Covenant of Sacrifice, such would thus demonstrate his unworthiness of a place in the Bride class—the Church in glory.

Should any one ask the Pastor why he lays so much stress upon consecration, he would reply that, according to Scripture, God is not now dealing with the world in general; that in order to bring our petitions to the Throne of Heavenly Grace we must get into relationship with God; and that there is only one way by which this can be done—consecration. To emphasize his point the speaker used the illustration of a wedding in the time of our Lord. On such occasions it was customary for the host to furnish all the guests with a plain white linen garment which was to be worn over their own garments. Whether the guests were rich or poor raiment, the wedding garment covered everything, and made them all brethren for the time being; for they were guests of the same host.

Applying his illustration, Pastor Russell explained that all consecrated Christians have accepted God's invitation to the marriage of the Lamb—the Son of God. But no matter how well we may arrange our own garments, each must put on the wedding garment or else remain away from the feast. The moment of consecration is the moment of receiving the Robe of Christ's Righteousness, and only those who continue to wear that robe will have entrance to the wedding. By nature mankind are sinners. There is only one way to get rid of sins—by belief in the Lord Jesus Christ, and full consecration to do the will of God. Whoever really believes that Jesus died for his sins will act upon his belief by presenting his body a living sacrifice.

Continuing the figure of the Wedding Garment, the Pastor declared that the robe put on by the Christians who desired to have entrance to the Marriage of the Lamb was white and clean, representing his full justification at the moment of consecration—all blemishes of the flesh being covered with the merit of Christ. The Scriptures tell us that those who ultimately enter in to the Marriage will be those who have kept their garments unspotted from the world. Since all unrighteousness is sin, every sin is a spot upon the robe, whether it be committed wilfully or ignorantly. All faithful children of God should use all diligence in keeping their garments free from blemish. This may be done by daily thinking about the robe, and nightly asking the Lord to remove each spot—to forgive each failure made that day. The blood of Jesus Christ keeps cleansing all who ask that they be cleansed.

This is the Heavenly Father's arrangements for His children. He desires them to walk circumspectly, watching where they tread. Thus they learn every detail in respect to their own imperfections. No one can live for even one day without trespassing upon the perfect Law of God; for by nature we are all imperfect. In heart the child of God does not sin; the New Creature does not sin. It is merely that the flesh is weak. But we have the comforting assurance of the Scripture that "if any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Righteous." Our Lord is there to make good with the Father for all the Adamic weaknesses.

The Pastor then discussed two kinds of sin, one of which he declared to be forgivable and the other unforgivable. If to any extent the mind consents to the deed, to that extent the sin is wilful. Then only that portion which was not wilful will be forgiven. Whatever part was not forgivable is punishable. The individual will receive stripes, punishments, of one sort or another, proportionate to the degree in which the will consented to the sin.

There is naturally such sympathy between the flesh and the mind that sometimes even the will of the New Creature permits the flesh to take it by force, as it were. This should not be; the will is responsible, and because of its carelessness will receive stripes of some kind. But so long as the individual feels sorry as soon as the yielding to temptation has passed, he may know that his will does not love sin. Should his will ever change and perfer sin, he would not be sorry after the sin was committed.

It was then shown that every consecrated child of God must be an overcomer in fighting the good fight of faith, and in obedience to God must put down everything that pertains to sin and unrighteousness in himself, and stand for that which is pleasing in the sight of God. This is the test of our loyalty to Him and to the principles of His righteous Government. Many sins are really weaknesses of the flesh which overcome the will momentarily. Just here the New Creature must conquer in the fight. He must get the victory over the flesh. If we sin, if we trespass, we must go to the Fountain of Grace and be forgiven.

The great difficulty, the Pastor declared, seems to be that after we have had some experiences of this kind, we properly enough feel ashamed that we have not done better. This is the time when the Christian is in danger. He is liable to fail to ask forgiveness at the Throne of the Heavenly Grace; for he feels that already he has been forgiven perhaps many times for the same trespass. Therefore he may try to forget the spot, to forget the "robe," almost to forget the Lord. Gradually a veil comes between him and God; the Father is not so near and so dear as once He was. While He is still his Heavenly Father, willing all the erring ones trusts in Him, nevertheless there is a lack of the fellowship of the Spirit. Earth-born clouds have hidden the Father's face.

This is the experience of hundreds of the people of God; for they cannot be in His presence with spots upon their robes, and they do not resolve that they will not live away from Him. They cannot have fellowship with the Lord while their robes are spotted, nor can they have proper Christian life while absent from the Lord. The lesson on this point, the speaker declared, is that we watch and keep humble. To come to the Lord and say, "O Lord, another time I have failed! How ashamed I am!" is to take the right step. Humility is one of the very foundations upon which all other graces must be built. So the Apostle Peter says, "Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that He may exalt you in due time."

The number of those without spot or wrinkle or any such thing is very small, said the Pastor. Many Christians have not kept their wedding robes with sufficient care, and thus have shewn their lack of appreciation of the wedding and of their invitation to attend. If the attention of such be called to the spots, they try to put them out of sight, to ignore them, to declare that everybody has spots on his robe. This is an unwise procedure; for the robe is our passport into the Kingdom. If the spots are not removed, they gradually become more and more a hindrance to those who seek to be accounted worthy of a place in the Bride class.

The Pastor then reminded his audience that when the Christian first received his robe, it was pure white, with a certain design stamped thereon; and that he was expected to embroider it with the character-likeness of the Lord. If he has gotten the robe spotted and bedraggled, he should go to the Lord in prayer, and persist until he has assurance of forgiveness and cleansing. We read, "If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." It is not merely a matter of love, but of justice, on our part. The Heavenly Father made the arrangement; Jesus has died, paid our penalty and imputed of His own merit sufficient to cleanse all unintentional spots. Forgiveness is to be had for the asking.

NO PAY FOR TEACHERS.

Judge Says French School Employes Must Wait.

OTTAWA, June 27.—The bilingual case before Justice Lennox was adjourned yesterday afternoon until such time as the statistics and information being prepared by the Provincial Department of Education is ready. Accordingly no definite date could be fixed for the case to be resumed and argued.

Before the adjournment, A. C. MacMaster, acting for the defence, asked that an order be made allowing the schoolboard to pay the teachers for their services up to date. Of the bilingual teachers, 20 were not qualified, since their permits had not been renewed. In addition, the plaintiffs claim that the other teachers in the bilingual schools are not qualified, because they have not complied with the regulation to teach only English in the higher forms. Accordingly, all the teachers in the bilingual schools, it is the contention of the plaintiffs, are disqualified, except those in the first forms.

The judge held that he would not interfere with the injunction at this time and consequently these teachers could not be paid. He said he understood that some good friends had advanced them loans and they were in no real hardship.

"It is manifest," the judge said, "that to some extent at least some of the teachers have taken sides." He pointed out that Mrs. Dumas, principal of Garneau School, had said that she used French in the higher classes, thereby not complying with the law, but whether it was a wise course and whether the regulation was ultra vires or not was something to be argued later."

Consequently the teachers in the bilingual schools covered by the injunction cannot be paid. If the judgment is given before September and the case finally disposed of the teachers will be in a difficult position. If they teach they are liable not to get their salaries if the defence side of the case fails.

Cloudburst In Minnesota Turns Lanesboro Into a Lake.

LA CROSSE, Wis., June 27. — A cloudburst at Lanesboro, Minn., during the night made the village, which has a population of 1,000 persons, a lake six feet deep. The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway tracks are under three feet of water for 3,000 feet, according to announcement at the division offices here. Railway service is abandoned.

Lanesboro cannot be reached by telephone, and rescuers are obliged to go in boats. No reports of loss of life have thus far been reported.

Greek Naval Reserve to Mobilize.

ATHENS, Greece, June 27.—Seven classes of the Greek naval reserve were called to the colors, the official explanation of the mobilization being "the increase of the fleet and the naval manoeuvres to begin next week."

The real reason of the step taken by the Ministry of Marine, however, is understood to be the determination of the Greek Government to be prepared for all eventualities, although there is an apparent slackening of the tension between Turkey and Greece.

Three Lives Were Lost.

SALEM, Mass., June 27. — Three persons are known to have perished in Thursday's conflagration. Mrs. Jennie Cunningham perished in a tenement house, and Sam Whitby, a G. A. R. veteran, in his home, while a third body was found in the mill district.

The great majority of the 10,000 men thrown out of work are French-Canadians and Polanders.

Boric Acid.

Boric acid in considerable quantities is generally recognized as an original constituent in the waters and gases given off with volcanic emanations. In fact, the Tuscan fumaroles in Italy have been an important commercial source of boric acid for a long time, and in the past, possibly even to the present time, almost all the boric acid brought into the European market has been derived from this source. There is an abundant evidence of the presence of boric acid in volcanic emanations in many parts of the world. On the other hand, boron is so rare a constituent of rock forming minerals that it forms an inappreciably small percentage of the earth's rock mass as a whole.

"Plea" In the Legal Sense.

In the legal sense the word "plea" is grossly misused. One reads that the lawyer during a trial "delivered an eloquent plea to the jury." He did nothing of the sort. He delivered to the jury an argument or an entreaty that may or may not have been eloquent. A plea is properly used only of the pleadings or arraignments before a trial, not of the "argument" at the trial. A plea is invariably addressed to the court; an "argument" may be addressed either to the court or the jury. The same applies (still in the legal sense of the words) to the verbs "to plead" and "to argue."

Making Sure.

Lord Suffield went with the then Prince of Wales to India in 1875. At one place the governor felt nervous because among his people there were a number of political and religious fanatics who might be expected to make trouble when the prince passed through. He was strongly tempted to lock them all up, but this would have been a somewhat high handed action, and the governor hesitated to enforce it.

"But why not give a garden party, papa?" she replied at once. "Invite them all and keep them entertained until the prince has passed through."

So a fanatics' garden party was given with great success—in the grounds of the jail.—London Express.

A Pious Advertisement.

The following advertisement was printed in the Pennsylvania Gazette for June 23, 1787. The author of this little masterpiece is supposed to be no other than Franklin himself. "D. F." then, stands for Deborah Franklin:

"Taken out of a pew in the church some months since a Common Prayer Book bound in red, gilt and lettered D. F. on each cover. The person who took it is advised to open it and read the eighth commandment and afterward return it into the same pew again, upon which no further notice will be taken."

Drowned Bodies.

No human body after drowning can remain sunk longer than ninety or ninety-six hours. Although all sin has been expelled from the lungs by the inhaled water, the drowned body will be floated by the gases which begin to form in any dead body immediately after dissolution.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The friends of radium should publish a list of folks who have been cured by its use to offset the list of deaths.

STICK INSECTS.

They Sleep in the Daytime by Going Into a Rigid Trance.

One of the most curious inhabitants of the insect world is what is known as the stick insect, about which Professor Schmidt of the Imperial University of St. Petersburg has been making some strange discoveries.

This queer insect remains in a quiet state during the hours of daylight. Until now it has always been supposed that this was slumber, but Professor Schmidt says it is really a state of catalepsy, or trance, which the insect has developed as a means of protection against its enemies.

When in one of these trances the insects will remain for hours in most abnormal positions—standing on their heads, fast on their backs or with their legs extended high in the air and the body arched in the form of a bow. Only some prolonged excitement of the nervous system will rouse them from this rigid cataleptic state, but when the trance is over they show no signs whatever of muscular fatigue.

The stick insect passes all its days in a trance and feeds at night on the foliage of plants where it lives.—Exchange.

Amateur Headsman.

Most of us are wont to think of the beheadment as a relic of the dark ages, but the last decapitation which took place in the British Isles was no later than 1820. The victims were two unfortunates who had taken a part in the Bonnymuir rising and were convicted of high treason. The sentence was carried out in Stirling, Scotland. The headsman, who was masked and wore a berge gown, was a small, nervous man who did his work so badly that it was not until the third stroke that he decapitated one of the unfortunates. The assembled crowd yelled "Murder!" and the miserable headsman was heard to remark, "I wish to heaven I had not it to do." For a long time his identity was a mystery, but it later developed that he was a young medical student of Glasgow. The ax and the mask which he used on the occasion may still be seen.—New York Sun.

Relief at Once Cure Certain

Conclusive Evidence That Dr. Chase's Ointment Cures Itching Piles.

Mr. John G. McDonald, Picton, N.S., writes:—"I used Dr. Chase's Ointment for itching piles, and found that the first application gave relief. After using a few boxes of the ointment I was completely cured, and can recommend it highly to all sufferers from this disease. You have my permission to use this letter for the benefit of others."

Mr. James M. Douglas, Superior Junction, Ont., writes:—"For about six years I suffered from piles, and often could not work for two or three days at a time, so great was the suffering from pain and itching. Doctors treated me in vain, and I tried many treatments before I came across Dr. Chase's Ointment. Two boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me, and for several months I have had no return of this annoying ailment."

There can be no doubt that Dr. Chase's Ointment is the most effective treatment obtainable for every form of piles. 60 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Of Interest to Maid and Matron

THE FASCINATION OF GARDENING * * *

WOMEN WHO HAVE TAKEN UP THE SCIENCE OF FLOWER CULTURE AS A PLEASING HOBBY

THERE never was a time in this country when the interest in gardening was so widespread and when enthusiasm ran as high as at present. The recently organized International Garden Club will not only give a stamp of official approval to the efforts of amateur and professional gardeners, but it will bring Americans in close touch with the gardening interests of other countries.

The president of the club is Mrs. Charles Frederick Hoffman, of New York city, whose gardens in Newport have such a fascination that no one who gets a glimpse of their glories through the open gate can pass them without a more intimate acquaintance, and any one who shows a genuine interest will be welcome to view at his leisure the roses and the other flowers that present such alluring vistas. There are paid gardeners at work, but Mrs. Hoffman is the inspiring genius of her own gardens.

Mrs. James L. Breese, Mrs. Albert Boardman and Mrs. Henry Fairfield Osborn are vice presidents of the club; Miss Mary Kearney, secretary, and Judge William A. Day, treasurer, and there is a large Board of Directors, made up of prominent men and women. Moreover, the Commissioners of the parks in several boroughs have signified their intention to co-operate with the club wherever it is possible. As the proposed headquarters, the organization has been fortunate in obtaining the old Bartow mansion in Pelham Bay Park, N. Y. It is a picturesque place and its immediate surroundings will lend themselves admirably to a demonstration of gardening effects at different seasons of the year. The spring planting has just been started.

Mrs. Philip Martineau, whose visit to this country last winter helped the gardening propaganda immensely, arrived last week with her husband, a distinguished lawyer of London, and will go first to Brookline, Massachusetts, to supervise work on the gardens of Mrs. John Longyear, which were laid out under her supervision last autumn. She will then visit Newport, New Haven, Southampton and Baltimore in the interests of gardening, and may go as far west as the Pacific coast.

Mrs. Martineau, since her former visit to America, has supervised the laying out of gardens for Baron Robert de Rothschild at his place at Deauville and also the formal gardens connected with his splendid Paris residence. She herself has wonderful gardens at her country estate, Hurst Court, Berks. She took up gardening professionally after she had made a reputation for herself as an amateur which widely attracted the attention of garden lovers. Her success is stimulating to garden lovers who are considering the possibility of turning their taste and skill to financial account.

All over this country garden clubs are springing up and there is a widespread desire to have the kind of co-operation among them that has made the English societies so successful. The new International Garden Club aims to supply this and will have on its Board of Directors a representative of the British Royal Horticultural Society in order to make the co-operation between the two countries the more effective.

One of the evidences that American women have awakened to the pleasure and profit of gardening is to be found at Ambler, near Philadelphia, in the school which has been established there similar to several in England, notably the one of which the daughter of Lord Wolseley is the head, and the Studley School of Horticulture for Women. English women have had a big start in their appreciation of gardens and in the art of developing them. They have had special gardening schools and the advantage of beautiful Old World gardens to serve as object lessons and laboratories. There has been ever before their eyes the stimulation of formal and informal gardens of rare and historic beauty.

America has comparatively few gardens of that kind, but the people are catching the enthusiasm and the spirit which will ensure wonderful gardens for the future. The Pennsylvania School of Horticulture for women at Ambler has been established with the avowed purpose of "increasing the number of women who wish to be able to combine their occupation with their home life and for those who are looking for newer and wider fields of remunerative activity. Many women who have tastes of this kind already possess an academic or collegiate education along general lines. They desire to live in the country and have an occupation, but do not wish to invest capital nor to enter upon a definite industry without that special knowledge and training necessary for success in any undertaking."

It has been shown that not only England but Germany, Belgium, Italy, Denmark and Russia have schools of gardening for women that have long passed the experimental stage and now have a recognized position in the educational world. Some of the graduates manage their own estates, others are responsible managers of private or public gardens or have found profitable work as consulting horticulturists or lecturers.

There is a growing demand in this country for managers of private estates or of small farms and for supervisors of home and school gardens. Heretofore it has been extremely difficult to get the practice necessary to prepare them for such positions. The school at Ambler meets this need. Here educated women may receive scientific instruction and enjoy the advantage of living in close daily contact with their work throughout the varying seasons of the year. The farm at Ambler includes about seven[illegible] acres, twenty of which are devoted to [illegible] crops for practice and demonstration work. There are an orchard, a vineyard, a large asparagus plot, about two acres of strawberries, extensive flower and vegetable gardens, nurseries, a greenhouse, hotbeds, cold frames, a model poultry plant and a bee colony. The school offers a splendid opportunity to study the various phases of marketing, as hampers of fresh fruit and vegetables are packed and shipped daily and the students share in this part of the work.

The school is within easy distance of several large nurseries, seed gardens and noted estates having lovely gardens. On the farm is a characteristic old Pennsylvania stone farm house, which is the main school building. It is a beautiful place, but entirely inadequate to the demands of a growing school. The dormitory contains rooms for only eight students, as that no more can be accepted as boarding pupils. Even for the day pupils the class rooms are entirely too small. Part of the money has been raised and it is hoped that the remaining will soon be forthcoming for the erection of a large building, the plans for which have already been drawn by a firm of architects well known for their artistic work in the suburbs of Philadelphia, and a part of the money has been pledged.

Although most of the pupils are from the neighborhood of Philadelphia, there have been applications from all over the country, and as soon as the school has more room it can fill it with eager students. In so far as possible, the new building will harmonize with the style of the old farm house, the neighborhood and simple life of the students. The dining room and kitchens will occupy one wing and the offices and large hall another, the two connected by three class rooms. The porch connecting the two wings on the south will be glassed in and paved with red tile. When decorated with plants and flowers it will make a pleasant resting place after a day of hard work.

Probably the east wing and one class room will be built this summer. In order to raise the money for this building the friends of gardening are making strenuous efforts. With the growing interest in gardens it would seem as if this would be an easy thing to achieve.

At a meeting held in the home of Mrs. H. F. Hadden, in New York, Mrs. Craig Biddle, Miss Emma Blakiston and Miss Jessie T. Morgan told an interested and enthusiastic audience of the needs and achievements of the Pennsylvania school, details of the work being shown in moving pictures. These made it very clear that the women students of the school are real gardeners, for there was no part of the digging, planting and cultivating that they were not engaged in. They seemed to enjoy it, too, and there were many expressions of interest and admiration among the women present who had a taste for gardening. Mrs. Mary Rutherford Jay, who has been engaged as field secretary to interest more persons in the work, has succeeded in raising almost $6,000. Mrs. Russell Sage having recently contributed $2,500 and Mrs. Frederick F. Thompson a like amount.

Among others on the Board of Directors are Miss Jane B. Haines, Cheltenham, Pa., president; Miss Elizabeth L. Lee, Philadelphia, vice president; Miss Hilda Justice, Germantown, Pa., secretary; Miss T. P. Stewardson, Chestnut Hill, treasurer; Mrs. Edward W. Biddle, Carlisle, Pa.; Miss Emma Blakiston, Philadelphia; Miss Anna L. Bright, Philadelphia; Mrs. Robert Gordon Butler, Philadelphia; Miss J. A. Clark, Smith College; Mrs. Charles E. Coxe, Malvern, Pa.; Miss Mary L. Fisk, Princeton, N. J., and Mrs. Thomas Wistar, Germantown.

Although the school is young, its methods and aims have received warm commendation. Dean R. L. Watts stated that he believed that women would make better horticulturists than men, and that in his opinion the breadwinning in many homes would be greatly improved if the men minded the baby and the women attended to the garden and horticultural work. Mr. H. B. Fullerton, whose wife is his able assistant in the work which he carries on at the experimental station on Long Island, is of the opinion that women make the best gardeners and that no garden is complete without them. And the Rt. Rev. David H. Greer, in giving his approval to a school of horticulture for women, says:—"It is a kind of industry for which they are, in my judgment, especially fitted, and it is gratifying to know that a school has been established to give them the necessary training for the prosecution of this useful and important work."

Auction Bridge

By Prospero.

IN a recent article I ventured to voice a somewhat startling proposition in regard to the scoring of honors. Should honors be scored at all? They represent luck pure and simple. I went so far as to suggest they be marked the very opposite to prevailing custom—that is, for side not holding them in positive declaration; for the hands holding them (the aces) in the negative position. It would be a sort of compensation for the facility, or difficulty, of contract entered upon. Comments of various shades have come to hand; for it, against it; many failed to see the point.

Chicane.

Having launched the topic of reform a few words on that feature of scoring for chicane. While honors score for hands holding them the patent weakness of not holding a single trump card is recognized by being given simple honors to score. The ill favor of luck obtains a slight reward. Going a step further, at no trumps four aces in one hand get 100 above line—that is the highest count as to honors. And aces being the strongest cards at no trumps the want of aces in three hands should obtain recognition. That want in two hands is reciprocated and mutually cancelled. The third hand, sans ace, the most bitter of chicane, scores nothing for it. For suit trumpers chicane registers a count; for no trumpers it goes without acknowledgment.

These considerations, do they not argue the motion:—

Dispense with all honor scores.

Some of my correspondents express impatience at the tardy discussion of test hands. Turning back to test hand No. 4,

Record of bidding:—Z a royal. A 2 clubs. Y 2 diamonds, as partner's royal not suitable. B 3 clubs, with one face card in clubs and both bids of opposition overwhelmingly surpassed. Z 2 no trumps; poor reasoning; still has ace of suit bid by A B, an honor in partner's bid of diamonds and with 2 no trumps a lighter contract than 3 clubs. A goes to 4 clubs, on the raise from partner and in view of score. 4 clubs would take rubber. Y is misled by partner's no trump and says 3 no trumps. B double. Closed.

Please try this hand and tell me all about the grand defeat suffered by Y Z.

This bidding illustrates the trust placed in a lighter contract, as 2 no trump 20, after 3 clubs, 18.

What do you think of B's final double?

The "Saratoga Four" send the following solution, which is entirely to my taste, and shows excellent judgment:—Z a royal. A 2 clubs. Y, 2 diamonds. B 2 no trumps. Z 3 diamonds. A 3 no trumps, as B had announced stoppers in two suits. From Springfield "4, C. C." ventures the reply that bidding closed with 4 clubs for A. B.

In regard to the appellation nullos for negative bids I admit it is novel, expressive. Its fluency carries much in its favor.

The word nolens followed by the trick number your contract calls for, to be deducted from your book of seven, would be found more definite, distinctive and sounds so different from all other declarations that a misunderstanding would be likely to ensue.

Hands That Will

For the purpose of conveying information [illegible] hand to [illegible] your partner in the various "conventions" have been introduced, sacrifice high spades is adopted. While it may be

THE STAGE IN ALBANIA.

SINCE the Albanians obtained their independence they have shown an extraordinary fondness for literature and the drama, neither of which existed during the Hamidian epoch.

Tolne, if he were alive, would have pleasure in verifying his celebrated description that the art of a people develops out of its great emotions.

Until now there has been no organized theatre in Albania. A corps of amateur players, who partake other callings for a living, like the people of Chimarra, have raved about the [illegible] of native plays. But no permanent theatrical building has been erected.

Score:—Rubber game, A B 12; Y Z 22 and 200 ahead in penalties.

Z is [illegible] and begins bidding with what?

Seeing Paris with Raphael

THINGS theatrical in every sense, other people's automobiles and a lazy life are the recreations of John N. Raphael, author and correspondent. The lazy life must be something he still looks forward to, for the work he accomplishes precludes his indulgence in this direction.

Lately Mr. Raphael has been describing Montmartre, that most fascinating section of Paris for many American visitors.

Raphael's description begins at one o'clock in the morning, when, with friends, he finds "the Place Blanche in its usual state of dishevelled repair, as though it would never be clean again. The Moulin Rouge dancing hall was pouring its thousands into the street, and there was the usual nightly marvel of hairbreadth escapes from cab accidents. We sat down near the door on a little hard bench covered with American cloth. A waiter came and wiped the stone topped table.

"'Trois soupes à l'oignon,' I said to the waiter. Her nose wrinkled in pretty disgust when it came, and she looked at the huge spoon with dismay. 'You needn't put all of it into your mouth,' I suggested. It was very real onion soup, steaming and strong, and well lined with stringy Gruyère cheese. To eat gracefully is an impossibility, but we showed her how to twirl it around the spoon, and she said it reminded her of Naples and the beggars who eat macaroni there.

"In the middle of soup Bibi Aksar came in and deposited three peanuts on our table. Bibi muttered guttural greetings and put two fingers to his fez. 'Salaam Aleikoum, Bibi,' said I. 'Ta guele,' replied Bibi, who I think was born in Belleville. 'Whatever do I do with these?' she asked, deserting the soup and fingering a peanut. 'Is this man an American millionaire, and [illegible] this for fun?' she asked for Bibi was wandering round from table to table dispensing peanuts, three on each, and receiving compliments as he went.

"'No,' I said. 'He is the real original little Tom Thumb, and he wants to find his way out of the forest.' 'I'm sure the birds will eat the nuts,' she twittered, and crunched one between her white teeth. Bibi came back, gave her a little paper bag of them, and received copper coppers. 'How did he know I wanted some?' she asked. 'You bid for them,' I explained. 'It's as simple as a nod at Christie's. If you eat a peanut you buy more.' Then we paid for our soup and moved on.

"The next café, which is nearly next door—cafés are as thick as peanuts in Montmartre—had no American cloth on the seats, a zinc counter, and a gentleman in command who wore Monday's shirt-sleeves and beard still. 'But,' she said, 'we are in evening dress.' 'And in Montmartre,' I explained. 'Clothes don't matter.'

"After a crème de menthe, 'Why do they call it menthe verte here?' was her question, and her brother was rude enough to explain that it was because it happened to be its real name. After some cold and crisp fried potatoes we decided to move on.

"At the next café we indulged in olives—a selection of the fat Spanish ones and the little Italian olives, which are so much more tasty—and three little crayfish each. He's quite a dear,' she said about the olive and crayfish man. He is certainly a character. I have never found out what he does in the daytime, but his boots look as though he walked to Bayonne and Spain and Italy between daylight and midnight to fetch his crayfish and his olives. He can tell you all about them, but it is advisable to prevent him from picking the olives up to explain their excellence.

"As we went out, somebody suggested real food to finish up with, so we crossed the road to a bar in the Rue Fontaine and courted indigestion with a Welsh rarebit and Belgian beer. 'I know something of Montmartre at last,' she said, as she got into her cab. 'Whoever would have thought these places and this food existed within two minutes' walk of L'Abbaye? You only knew the visitors' Montmartre before.' I explained as I kissed her little hand and said good night.

"The real Montmartrian always goes home."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Millie Won By Strategy

A Wedding Under Difficulties.

By W. CRAWFORD SHERLOCK.

"Millie, I have requested Mr. Mitchell not to come here any more." Mrs. Thompson purred rather than spoke the words, but her keen black eyes were fixed intently upon her niece as if expecting the news would provoke a storm. She was not mistaken.

"What do you mean, Aunt Hetty?" demanded Millie, her blue eyes flashing and her voice quivering with anger. "Why should you tell Jack not to call upon me again? I am not a child and can see no reason why you should object to his visits if I don't."

"You forget yourself, Millie," returned Mrs. Thompson in the same soft, purring tone. "I am your aunt, your father's sister, and he requested in his will that you should make your home with me until you are either married or have reached the age of twenty-five. That makes me your guardian, morally if not legally, and I deem it my duty to break up your intimacy with Mr. Mitchell."

"Why did you not object to Jack when I first met him? Why did you permit him to call here time and again after we met? Why did you wait until we are engaged to be married before you offered any objections to his visiting me?"

"I am not compelled to answer such questions, Millie Gray, especially when asked so disrespectfully," purred Mrs. Thompson, "but I will do so. I thought Mr. Mitchell was a very estimable young man when you first met him. This impression remained with me until lately, when I have had reason to believe him otherwise."

"What is your reason?" demanded the girl sharply.

"I decline to tell you," replied Mrs. Thompson. Her voice was still soft and low, but her thin fingers twitched nervously as if she were imbued with a strong desire to scratch the girl as boldly confronting her. "Mr. Mitchell shall not come here again. That is all I have to say. Of course, as you are of age, I cannot prevent you from meeting him clandestinely, but so far as my own home is concerned I shall endeavor to do my duty."

The suggestiveness of her aunt's words puzzled Millie, but their purport became clearer to her as she reflected.

"I think I understand it all now, Aunt Hetty," she said slowly and scornfully. "You have deliberately planned this thing, knowing that my father, who hated the very mention of runaway marriages, provided that I must be married at your home if I am married before I am twenty-five. If I am married anywhere else one-half of my fortune will go to you. My father made this strange provision, believing it would prevent me from eloping with any one before I had reached years of discretion. You introduced me to Jack Mitchell and encouraged him to come to see me. Now when we are almost ready to be married you trump up some objection to him in the hope that I will run away and get married, thus allowing you to become possessor of half my fortune. Aunt Hetty, I have never loved you, but I did not think you were capable of such a scheme."

"Believe what you please," retorted Mrs. Thompson, purring no longer, but speaking harshly and discordantly. "Mr. Mitchell shall not come here again. You may do as you please."

"I am going to marry Jack Mitchell," replied Millie quietly, "and I shall be married in your home. That is all I have to say." And, turning, the girl walked to her own room, leaving her aunt to reflect over the last words.

Bolting her door to guard against any intrusion, Millie reflected over the situation. She was now twenty, and by waiting five years until she came into possession of her fortune it would be possible to prevent Mrs. Thompson from obtaining any of the property, but the girl's mind revolted at the idea of waiting so long. She had known Jack Mitchell for two years and had been engaged to him six months. Five years seemed a lifetime, and she dismissed all thought of such a plan.

Aunt Hetty should not profit by her marriage to Jack—upon that at least Millie was resolved—but how could she possibly be married in her aunt's home? Aunt Hetty, having been discovered in her scheme to secure a part of the fortune, would spare no effort to prevent her niece's marriage in her home.

There seemed no way to solve the problem, and Millie arose to take a walk, thinking the fresh air might bring some relief to her troubled mind. As she stood before the mirror arranging her hat she noticed the reflection of men moving about the adjoining house, and she turned to investigate. Men were taking up the carpet and moving the furniture out of the room opposite hers, while others were on the floor below, similarly engaged. Could it be possible that the Jacksons were going to move? If they were the adjoining house would probably be for rent, and—Millie raised her window quickly and reached out her hand. It almost touched the window of the adjoining house. The houses were joined together in front, but in the rear a small space less than three feet wide separated them to admit light and air. A solution of the problem flashed across the girl's mind as she lowered and fastened the window. It might be possible to frustrate Aunt Hetty and not wait five years either.

During the next week Millie spent much of the time at home. Aunt Hetty, always on the alert, viewed this unusual proceeding with suspicion and remained indoors herself to guard against any possible invasion by Jack Mitchell. Instructions were issued to the servant to admit no one, and Mrs. Thompson felt confident of being able to frustrate any attempt on Millie's part to marry according to the provisions of her father's will.

Millie smiled complacently, but said nothing, as she noted her aunt's actions. Things were progressing finely, and at last the plan was ready for execution.

Locking and bolting her door, she spent two hours in putting on her prettiest gown. When this task was completed to her satisfaction she raised the curtain and opened the window.

"All ready, Millie?" he asked, restraining a strong desire to spring across the intervening space and take her in his arms. "Here's the Rev. Mr. Walker, an old friend of mine, and two witnesses, Bert Latimer and Frank Long. We are all ready if you are."

Millie nodded, and the minister directed them to join hands across the space of separation. The marriage service was read in slow, measured tones, and they were pronounced man and wife. Jack would have come over to join his wife, but she prevented him.

"No, no, Jack; this is Aunt Hetty's house, and she has forbidden you to come here. Just wait for me at the door."

Mrs. Thompson, listening, as was her wont, at the keyhole, had heard the sound of voices and felt that something was wrong. Vigorously and viciously she had pounded on the door of Millie's room, demanding admittance during the ceremony, but the Rev. Mr. Walker, previously apprised of the situation, had not heeded the interruption. As Millie unfastened the door Mrs. Thompson's angry face confronted her.

"Who is in your room, Millie?" demanded the aunt, glancing around in quest of the intruder. She found no one in the room, but caught sight of Jack's face across the way. The bridegroom had waited to see what developed when the door was unfastened.

"What is that man doing in the Jackson house?" continued Mrs. Thompson angrily. "I shall request Mrs. Jackson to forbid him coming there."

"Mrs. Jackson has moved, Aunt Hetty," said Millie calmly. "But you have been so busy watching me that you failed to notice it. I, or, rather, we, have taken the house."

"We! What do you mean?" inquired Mrs. Thompson excitedly. "I have nothing to do with that house."

"I mean Jack and myself, aunt. We have just been married. I stood in my room, and Jack stood in the room of the house next door. I was married in your home and have complied with the condition of my father's will. Good-by, Aunt Hetty. Come over and see us. We will be at home on Tuesdays of next month."

But Mrs. Thompson was too much discomfited by the defeat of her well laid plan to make a reply.

APPEALS TO POWERS.

U. S. Minister at Athens Busy In Albanian Trouble.

ATHENS, June 27.—George F. Williams, American Minister to Greece, yesterday sent to the newspapers a report of his investigations in Albania, which he visited recently by the authority of the Washington Government. In his report, Mr. Williams adds that he saw the Epirote insurgent leader, Zographes, and placed himself at the disposal of the international commission of control, which, however, gave him no reply.

Mr. Williams says he considers the conditions in Albania anarchical, and declares the present regime impracticable owing to anti-Mistic rivalry. He appeals to the Powers to create a neutral state with an essentially local government.

Situation at Durazzo Grave.

LONDON, June 27—There are conflicting reports concerning the situation at Durazzo. A belated despatch from that city says that insurgent leaders have arrived there to negotiate terms. Other despatches represent the situation as extremely grave. The Prince of Weid, who occupies the throne of Albania, has, it is said, appealed to the Powers to send international troops to restore order in Albania.

Austrian Volunteers.

VIENNA, June 27. — A volunteer force of retired officers and men is being formed here to go to Durazzo to protect the Prince of Weid. Already 1,600 men have been enrolled for this purpose.

Siegel and Vogel To Be Tried.

NEW YORK, June 27.—Henry Siegel and Frank N. Vogel, prime movers in a chain of department stores which failed some time ago, and under indictment for grand larceny and violation of the state banking laws, will be tried in Genesee, Livingstone County, in October. This has been decided by Supreme Court Justice Blanchard here. Recently the defendants were granted a change of venue on the ground that the public was influenced against them in New York City. Thousands of poor depositors had their funds tied up in the failure of the Siegel private bank.

Identified by Artificial Limb.

LONDON, Ont., June 27.—A body taken from the Detroit River Sunday afternoon has been identified as that of Herbert C. Green, coal and wood merchant of London. Green's identity was established through an artificial limb he wore, the manufacturers in Chicago being able to furnish the owner's name.

THE BURDENS OF AGE

The kidneys seem to be about the first organs to wear out and fail to properly perform their work. The result is weak, lame, aching back, rheumatic pains and failing eyesight. Many people of advanced years have recovered health and comfort by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They ensure the healthful action of liver, kidneys and bowels.

JUST DRIFT, SAYS CARSON.

Ulster Leader Criticizes Policy of Government.

LONDON, June 27.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Sir Edward Carson has issued the following statement regarding the Home Rule amending bill:

"It is the old offer, which is described as hypocritical sham, and which was only allowed and offered us because it was known we could not possibly accept it. Moreover, the bill demonstrates during all these months that no progress has been made by the Government in framing details for the separate Government of Ulster. It is somewhat ludicrous to provide that Ulster is to accept any administration that the Lord Lieutenant, who will be subject to the advice of Dublin Ministers, desires to set up. The whole thing shows in every line a policy of drift. It looks to me as if there was to be no effort at statesmanship to solve the present situation."

Montreal Boy Found Dead.

MONTREAL, June 27.—With his feet embedded in the mud and lying on his back, the dead body of three-year-old Arthur Duhaine, who had been missing from his home, 394 Monk Boulevard, Villa Emard, since nine o'clock Thursday morning, was found at noon yesterday in a mud hole, amongst the brush, in a field at the extreme end of Halton street.

IVORY NUT TREES.

Once considered useless, the ivory nut has become an important product and now adds considerably to Ecuador's export trade. Something like 20,000 tons are shipped from that country each year, worth about $1,700,000, while Colombia and Panama are both increasing their output.

The tree is a stunted palm fern with a short thick trunk which grows slowly to a height of ten to twenty feet, marked by spiral lines or scars left by fallen leaves and fruit stems. The leaves resemble large gorgeous green feathers and are like those of the cocoanut palm, while the blossoms are of pure white and very fragrant. The seeds or kernels resulting from these are first in the form of sacks of sweet, refreshing liquid that changes into a soft, delicious, edible pulp and finally becomes the hard nut of commerce. The nuts mature very slowly, requiring from blossom to ripeness fully a year. The gathering of green or unripe tagua nuts is prohibited by law in Ecuador.

Hundreds of natives, called taguaros, make a business of gathering these nuts from the wild trees of the interior of Ecuador, collect them on rafts and float them down the rivers to Esmeraldas or other Pacific ports, where they are sold in open markets to the exporters.—Argonaut.

Boiling It Down.

They had been married just one year. That was why he risked losing his train by allowing her to fasten a bunch of violets on to his coat. But his foot tapped the floor impatiently, nevertheless, and he frowned as he wondered if his wife's kindly thought would cost him his cozy corner seat. "George," said his wife tremulously, "you don't love me as you used to!" "My darling heart of hearts," he exclaimed, desperately eyeing the clock, "what makes you say that?" "Because, George," she answered, "when we were first married it used to take you a whole hour just to say goodby, and n-now"—tears interrupted her words and ran down her cheeks—"you can k-kiss me and c-catch your train all-in four minutes!"

He Took No Chances.

A physician known for his coolness and skill in surgery went to a dentist to have a tooth extracted and other work done on his molars.

"Will it be painful?" asked the physician quakingly.

Grabbing up his hat hurriedly, the physician remarked as he started toward the door: "I forgot I had an engagement in my office for this hour. I'll see you later, doc."—Indianapolis News.

Cheap Wives.

Among the Ainus the price of a wife is a bear ham. The Kaffir price varies from four to eight oxen. In Uganda a wife can be obtained for a score of cartridges. The Australian black obtains his helpmate for her weight in butter, and in Turkestan the Tartars can buy as many wives as they please for a box of matches each.

What He Left.

Residing in a little village is a lawyer who is famous for drawing wills, in which branch of business he has long enjoyed a monopoly of the country for miles around.

A few months since a wealthy man died. There was much speculation as to the value of the property, and the town gossip set about to find out the facts. He hunted up the lawyer, and, after a few preliminary remarks about the deceased, he said rather bluntly:

"I suppose you made Brown's will?"

"Yes."

"Then you probably know how much he left. Would you mind telling me?"

Did His Share.

"It is my belief, and I venture to assert it," he declared, "that there isn't a man in this audience who has ever done anything to prevent the destruction of our vast forests."

A rather timid, henpecked looking man quietly arose in the rear of the hall and said:

"I—er—I've shot woodpeckers!"—Everybody's.

An Idyl.

"He is my ideal and I'm his idol," said the girl.

"And your love affair?"

"Is an idyl."

"And your fiance?"

"He's idle, according to papa."—Ladies' Home Journal.

ROYAL YEAST MAKES PERFECT BREAD

Better Protection for Royalty.

LONDON, June 29. — When the King leaves London, the whole system of protection at Buckingham Palace, will be overhauled. There is, of course, no need for panic, but recent events have shown that the palace is by no means as secure as it ought to be. Not only has a man got inside, but the militants have smashed a window, and others got across the court yard before they were captured.

The household, and Scotland Yard as well, hails the removal of the court with profound relief.

Death May Follow Quarrel.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., June 29.—H. Heikina, Finlander, is in a serious condition in the hospital here as a result of a shooting sixteen miles out, on the Dawson road. Eye-witnesses say that the man was shot by a farmer named Matt Suvi, after a quarrel at the farmer's homestead. Suvi was driving Heikina to a neighbor's farm to work, and a quarrel is alleged to have started on the road. Both men were drinking. Heikina is in a critical condition, and it is feared that death will ensue.

Summer-Spoiled Skin Removed By Absorption

As undue summer exposure usually leaves an undesirable surface of tan, dust or grease, often freckles, too, it is more sensible to remove such surface than to hide it with cosmetics. There's nothing better for this than ordinary mercolized wax, which actually absorbs an unwholesome complexion. The thin layer of surface skin is itself absorbed gently, gradually, so there's no peeling evidence, no detention indoors. Spread the wax lightly over the entire face at bedtime and take it off in the morning with warm water. If you will get one ounce of mercolized wax at the drugstore use for a week or so, you may expect marked improvement daily. When the underlying skin is wholly in view your complexion will be a marvel of spotless purity and beautiful whiteness.

Don't let those summer wrinkles worry you; worry breeds more wrinkles. Banish them by bathing the face in a solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in ½ pt. witch hazel. Used daily for awhile this will be found wonderfully effective.

ENQUIRY ADJOURNS

Wreck Commissioners Will Now Deliberate on Verdict

LAWYER ASSAILS KENDALL

QUEBEC, June 29.—The Empress of Ireland wreck enquiry was Saturday afternoon adjourned sine die, to allow of the commission considering its finding. The last day was marked by an able address to the commission by C. S. Haight, who has conducted the case from the point of view of the owners of the Storstad, the collier which rammed the Empress, a reply by Butler Aspinall, K.C., who has acted for the C. P. R., and a general review of the evidence by Edmund L. Newcombe, K.C., who has represented the Dominion Government.

Mr. Haight sought to lay the blame for the tragedy at the door of the Empress of Ireland, claiming that the vessel's steering gear broke down and that after this had happened and Captain Kendall had been forced to stop his ship, he lost his head when he found that he had done so right in the path of the Storstad. Mr. Haight said it was not to be expected that Captain Kendall would acknowledge this in face of the world. Mr. Haight also emphasized the fact that the present heading of the hull of the vessel is northeast. Whereas the Storstad's officers had all along given the direction of the liner as her hull had been found. Evidence for his contention that the steering gear of the Empress had been broken down, he claimed, was to be had in the testimony of Gallaway, the quartermaster, who had withstood th unsparing use of the lash fairly well, and the stories of the crew of the Alden, who contended the ship had swerved, the quartermaster swearing the helm had jammed on the night of the disaster. He contended the Empress' witnesses had told a story that was false.

Mr. Arpinall said that he could not understand why Mr. Haight had indicted Captain Kendall, when, if it was true that the steering gear had broken down, he could not be blamed for the collision and would have absolutely no reason to commit perjury. He invited the court to find against one or the other, and not to blame both, and he thought the Storstad was at fault.

Mr. Newcombe said that probably neither the officers of the Storstad nor the Empress had intentionally lied. He thought, however, that both were to blame, the Storstad for having ported her helm in a fog and the Empress for stopping when the navigation regulation only called for her to slow up. He suggested that the rapid founderin of the Empress was due to the watertight doors not being closed, in a large measure, and he thought if it was found that portholes had enabled water to reach the interior of the ship, never again should is be possible for them to be a contributory cause to a disaster. They should be closed on a signal from the bridge the moment a fog appeared. The same applied to watertight doors.

CANNOT AVOID HOME RULE.

Unionists Would Have to Pass Bill Says Birrell.

LONDON, June 29.—(C. A. P. Cable.) — "Home Rule is inevitable," declared Irish Secretary Birrell, speaking in Yorkshire Saturday.

If the present Government disappeared to-morrow the first thing the Unionist Government would have to do would be to promote the Home Rule bill. Whatever they might be pleased to call it and what it was called, Ulster knew the present bill was secure. He deeply deplored that any portion of Ireland should be separated, from another for six years, and did not believe any party in Ireland wanted it.

Any other proposals would be carefully considered by the present Government.

HEADACHES ALMOST DROVE HER WILD.

NEWBURY, Ont., May 29th, 1913.

"About four years ago, I was in a dreadful run-down condition, weak and hardly able to walk up stairs. Weakness peculiar to women was the chief trouble. I had Headaches that almost drove me wild, and most distressing constipation. I took many dollars' worth of medicine from the doctors without any good results.

A neighbor advised me to take "Fruit-a-tives" and they proved to be the best medicine I ever got and the only medicine to do me any good. Today, I feel as a young girl, and am able to go about my household duties as usual. My health is splendid and "Fruit-a-tives" is the cause of it". MRS. WM. CRIM.

SIDE WALL FALLS.

Nobody Is Hurt In Accident at St. Catharines.

ST. CATHARINES, June 29.—A 60-foot side wall along the rear half of the newly-changed and enlarged semi-ready store on St. Paul street, four storeys in height, fell to the bank of the hydraulic raceway Saturday night while the place was open for business, causing a section of the floors about twenty feet wide to go down along with several tables of men's clothing. At that particular moment no customers or salesmen were upon the part of the floor which collapsed, no person was injured, but a loss that will reach at least $10,000 was caused to the building and contents, rain falling shortly afterwards.

Sliding of the bank on which the building was constructed thirty-eight years ago is believed to have been the cause of the collapse. Recently the two stores were made into one, although the dividing brick wall from the three storeys below was allowed to remain, and this prevented a more serious disaster. Building Inspector Barley states that he notified the owner some time ago that the building was not safe. The property is owned by Thomas Niham.

FRANZ NOT POPULAR.

New Heir To Throne of Austria Is Better Liked.

LONDON, June 29. — News of the assassination of Franz Ferdinand and his wife reached London early yesterday. Special editions of the Sunday papers were published, creating a painful sensation. The archduke was personally known here, having visited London several times in the past few years. The last occasion was in the spring, when he was entertained, with his wife, by the Duchess of Portland, who gave a magnificent ball in their honor.

The Duchess Hohenburg by her beauty and gracious manner made herself popular wherever seen, but Franz, with his sullen, heavy aspect, created an unfavorable impression. He was devoid of animation or charm, his leading characteristics being intense pride and a highly jingoistic conception of Austria's mission to Europe.

The aged emperor is the special object of sympathy, who has thus had the uniquely horrible experience of his wife and both heirs apparent dying tragic, untimely deaths.

It was always understood that he never care overmuch for Franz Ferdinand and of late years their estrangement was notorious.

In Austria-Hungary the critical time will be when the Emperor dies. The new heir to the throne, Archduke Karl Franz, enjoys great popularity both in Austria and Hungary and his accession is considered less likely to produce a disrupting effect on the dual monarchy than that of Franz Ferdinand.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Evelyn Hurst, two years old, at Chatham, choked to death in a spasm of whooping cough.

Ex-President Taft and Mrs. Taft and party are summering at Murray Bay, Que., for the sixteenth time.

Jos. Arlien, of St. Thomas, went in bathing at Port Stanley yesterday and was drowned. He is supposed to have taken cramps.

Hydro-electric power was officially turned on in St. Catharines Saturday night for the first time by Mayor Petrie in the presence of the Hydro Commissioners, aldermen, city officials and citizens.

The wash from the propeller of the steamer Jacques of Montreal caused the lower portion of the head gates of lock 8, Welland Canal, to unship Saturday night, totally tying up navigation until yesterday afternoon.

James Weller, 66 Manning avenue, Toronto, while addressing the gathering in the Salvation Army Citadel, Tecumseh street, yesterday was stricken with heart failure and died before assistance could be procured.

The charge of perjury against Thomas Grimshaw, a Conservative worker in Guelph, for affidavit that Alex. May was a resident, was dismissed on Saturday. Liberal workers say they will not let it drop, however.

J. Kenneth Duncan Is Dead.

THAMESVILLE, June 29.—Widespread sorrow has been occasioned here by the death of J. Kenneth Duncan, who has passed away at the home of his parents on Victoria street. Mr. Duncan, who was only thirty-two years of age, had been ailing for some months and though his death was not unexpected, it came as a severe shock to the whole community. He was one of Thamesville's most popular young men and was well known throughout the district. He has been assistant postmaster for a number of years. He leaves his parents and one sister, Miss Catherine, at home.

LINER IS AGROUND

California in Bad Plight on Rocks Off Irish Coast

GUNBOATS OFF TO SCENE

LONDONDERRY, June 29. — The Anchor Line steamer California is on the rocks off Tory Island and calling for assistance. Gunboats have left Londonderry to assist the steamer.

LONDON, June 29.—The California's bows are badly damaged, and she is taking in water through two holes.

It is reported that the passengers destined for points in Ireland already have been transferred from the vessel and are expected to reach Londonderry at noon to-day.

The Anchor Line steamer California sailed from New York June 20 for Moville and Glasgow. On board the vessel were 131 cabin and over 300 second-class passengers.

Tory Island lies off the northwestern coast of the County Donegal, Ireland. It is a rocky reef two miles long and half a mile wide. On the northern end of the island is a lighthouse.

Found Steamer on Shore.

BATAVIA, Java, June 29. — The British steamer Kintuck of the China Mutual Steam Navigation Co., reported overdue Friday after a violent earthquake in Sumatra, was found Saturday by the steamer sent out to search for her. She had been driven ashore in the Straits of Sunda between Java and Sumatra by heavy seas caused by a submarine disturbance. The Kintuck was crowded with native emigrants.

Gothland Off the Rocks.

MONTREAL, June 29. — James Thom of the Canada Line received a cablegram from Antwerp Saturday that the company's steamer Gothland, which ran on the rocks off the Scilly Island a few days ago, had been floated and was proceeding to St. Mary's, Scilly Islands, in tow of tugs.

Lake Steamers All Safe.

DETROIT, June 29.—Reports from the important great lakes stations last night are to the effect that although Lakes Superior and Michigan were swept Saturday and Saturday night by a gale which in some localities reached a velocity of 90 miles an hour, all boats known to be out are reported safe in port or in sheltered harbors.

The general hoisting of storm signals all along the chain of lakes at noon Saturday gave mariners ample time to prepare for the blow, and those boats too far out to obtain the port signals were notified by wireless what weather they might expect.

On Lake Superior the force of the gale was most severely felt. At Superior the steamer Mataafa, of Buffalo, went hard aground on Superior Reef, and only after some hazardous work by harbor tugs was she released and towed into the Great Northern ore dock.

PICTURE THEATRE HIT.

Lightning Bolt Causes Panic In Chatham "Movey."

CHATHAM, June 29. — During a heavy electric storm Saturday evening a moving picture hall was struck by lightning while a performance was on, and for a time it seemed as if a panic would happen. The lightning struck the transformer just outside the building, and the electric light service in the theatre was immediately cut off. The lightning traveled along the wires leading into the building and filled the theatre with a dull blue light.

Several women screamed and fainted and a number of them jumped up and tried to scramble for the door. A man in the gallery raised the cry of fire and proceeded to climb down from the gallery to the floor of the house. It was with the greatest of difficulty that the attendants prevented a panic.

The rain fell in torrents and it is impossible at this time to estimate the damage which will be done to the crops. The rain was very hard on the young corn crops, for the plants are just coming to stand up in the fields.

Galt Boy Hurt.

GALT, June 29. — Cecil Chamberlain, the nine-year-old son of W. Chamberlain, Lansdowne avenue, on Saturday evening at the entrance to Dickinson Park was knocked off his bicycle by a baby buggy and run over by an automobile, owned by Hall Bros., Galt. The driver apparently did not know he had run over the lad, for he backed the machine over him a second time. The boy was picked up and hurried to Dr. Dakin's office in the car. Although the machine passed over the lad's abdomen no bones were broken, and so far as could be seen the boy was only badly shaken up and bruised.

STATE BALL POSTPONED.

British Court Goes Into Mourning Because of Tragedy.

LONDON, June 29.—The news of the assassination caused a deep impression in London. When word came from the British embassy at Vienna the King despatched telegrams of sympathy and ordered all court affairs cancelled.

The King has ordered court mourning for a week. The state ball, which was to have taken place to-day, has been postponed.

In unofficial London the opinion seems to prevail that the crime could not be attributed to any political intrigue, but rather to the inherent hatred of the Serbs for their Austrian neighbors, which has become more bitter since the recent events in the Balkans, in which the Serbs charge Austria with taking part against Servia.

Big Gift For Shackleton.

LONDON, June 29. — Sir James Roy Caird, the millionaire jute manufacturer of Dundee, has donated $120,000 to Sir Ernest Shackleton for the forming of his Antarctic expedition. Caird made the gift after Shackleton had personally explained his program, which he hopes to carry out. Shackleton says the donation puts the expedition in a sound position. Now, there is no fear that it will not start well-equipped.

He Knew.

"I can't imagine why I ever eloped with you," she said.

"I can," he coldly replied. "I was the first simpleton that ever asked you a favor." (Chicago Record-Herald.)

ARCHBP. BRUCHESI RETURNS.

He Says the Pope Is Better Than Some Time Ago.

MONTREAL, June 29.—His Grace Archbishop Bruchesi returned to Montreal Friday night from a four months' trip to Europe.

"I had several audiences with his holiness and found him alert to the state of the church the world over," said his grace. "I found him more healthy and stronger than on my last visit. His mind is as keen and his interest as lively as if he were thirty years younger. I saw him several times and his appearance and vitality certainly contradict the sensational reports about his failing health. He is over 80 years of age, but strong and full of enthusiasm and zeal."

She Bought a Piano on a Train

ON being asked her reason for selecting a certain "make" of piano, a woman explained that while she did not get her piano till December, she really "bought" it on a train in July.

"It was like this," said she—"I had not thought much about pianos until I was about to be married and furnish a house of my own. Last summer, soon after I became engaged, I had to make a train journey. The daily paper I bought contained a striking advertisement of the Blank Piano. It ended by saying "Investigate thoroughly before deciding." I did investigate and became convinced that the Blank Piano was the best piano I could get for $500.

This woman was right in stating that although she did not actually own her piano until Winter-time, she really "bought" it in July. She bought it on a train—she selected it that day she read the advertisement which so forcibly impressed her.

Pianos are not the only things people think about long before they have them sent home.

Every important purchase is considered long before the article is ordered. And we are just as likely to be convinced by an advertisement we read in the Summer as at any time.

EDITORIAL COMMENTS ON RESULT IN PROVINCE

What Different Papers Have to Say of the Voting in Ontario Yesterday --- Will Whitney Give Up Premiership.

BECK AS LEADER

Examiner Special:

WINDSOR, Ont., June 30.—The Windsor Record (Liberal), has the following editorial comment on the election: "If Mr. Rowell is to continue as leader of the Liberal Opposition he must realize the futility of making the abolition of the bar a chief or even minor issue in any more elections.

"The only logical thing for Mr. Rowell to do is to drop the temperance question issue and devote his energies to the preparation of a more constructive platform that will lead to the attainment of the Matterhorn of political success in this province."

Whitney to Resign?

OTTAWA, June 30. — With the Conservatives once more safely in the saddle in Ontario for another term, there is considerable speculation in Ottawa among prominent politicians as to the probable reorganization of the present provincial cabinet which may ensue. The opinion prevails here that Sir James Whitney may give up the premiership and be appointed a member of the Senate here. It is believed that Sir Adam Beck has the inside track over Hon. W. J. Hanna for the leadership in Ontario, and there are strong rumours that the latter will drop out of provincial politics and become a member of the Borden Government. The resignation of Hon. T. W. Crothers as Minister of Labour, and his transfer to the bench at an early date is predicted, and it is strongly presumed that Mr. Hanna may take his place and add strength thereby, to the present federal cabinet for a short time at least, though it is not expected that the Provincial Secretary will remain long in that capacity, but that at a future reorganization will get a more important portfolio.

Herald's Opinion.

MONTREAL, June 30. — The Herald says on the election: "Although Mr. N. W. Rowell's policy to abolish the bar throughout Ontario has been decisively defeated at the polls, there can be no doubt that the stirring campaign which our sister province has experienced, will have far-spreading results. Whether Mr. Rowell's policy is simply in advance of the times, or whether at heart, the people are afraid that abolishing the bars would result in still greater evils from the cafe system, is a matter that the temperance advocates will doubtless seriously consider."

Toronto Telegram.

TORONTO, June 30.—The Telegram (Conservative) says: "Only one interpretation is possible of the triumph of the Conservative party at the polls—that is—that the people of Ontario want good government, appreciate good government, and by such overwhelming majority as was given yesterday, will reward good government."

Party To Principle.

HAMILTON, June 30.—The Hamilton Times (Liberal) says: "Figures cannot disguise the fact that neither the church nor the temperance people voted anything like solidly for the cause. A large number must have preferred the party to principle."

Cannot Divorce Party.

OTTAWA, June 30.—The Ottawa Citizen (Conservative), which supported Rowell in the recent campaign says to-day: "It is an enlightening illustration of the strength of party feeling and unison that the voters, in themselves of highest character personally, are nevertheless unable to bring themselves to endorse issues which, when divorced from party association, merit their approval and sympathy."

'PETERBORO' MAN IN THE TOILS

Arrested in Connection With Shooting Affray Which Occurred at Claremont

Joseph Carbone, of Claremont, Ont., is in the Western Hospital, Toronto, with a bullet in his back, while Joseph and Raffilo Ferri, of Toronto, and Joseph Lovrett, of Peterborough, are in the cells on a nominal charge of vagrancy. The shooting occurred in a boarding car at Claremont early Sunday morning. Immediately after the affray the three men who are under arrest took a train for Toronto. A telegraph message was sent ahead, however, and the three were placed under arrest by P. C. Hunt as they stepped off the train at the Union station. Carbone was brought in later and removed to the hospital. He will recover.—Warder.

ALL BRITISH SUBJECTS ARE TOLD TO LEAVE

British Consul Has Advised Them to Get Out of Mexico Immediately as Situation is Serious

MAY BE MASSACRE

Examiner Special:

WASHINGTON D.C., June 30. — The seriousness of the situation in Mexico City is evidenced by the fact that the British Ambassador has advised that all British subjects leave the country immediately. The fears are entertained in the Mexican Capital that the Carranza-Villa forces may reach there almost any time and their approach would probably mean the massacre of all the English speaking citizens as the Mexicans firmly believe that Carranza is backed up by the United States and Great Britain.

TO TAKE RECESS

Special to The Examiner:

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., June 30—After a long conference this morning, it was announced that the A B C mediators would take a recess and hold no more sessions until various factions in Mexico had had an opportunity to consider certain internal problems. This means it is thought here that Carranza and Huerta have arranged parleys and that the Mediators do not care to proceed with further conferences till some settlement of the revolution is arranged, if possible.

CARD OF THANKS

To the Electors of East Peterborough

I desire to publicly thank the large number of voters who cast their votes for me in the contest just ended, and I wish particularly to thank the Conservative voters who cast their votes in favour of the principles that I represented."

I desire also to acknowledge with pleasure, the splendid service given to the cause of Temperance by so many of the Clergy and temperance laymen of both political parties, and I wish to express my heartiest thanks to the many willing workers and speakers who assisted me in the campaign.

Yours respectfully,

BOTH CITY AND COUNTRY UNITED FOR GILLESPIE

MR. GEO. A. GILLESPIE, M.P.P.
Who won West Peterborough for the Abolish-the-Bar Policy.

But Early Hopes of Rowell Win Were Squelched Before They Had a Chance to Look Around.

A GOOD EXAMPLE SET

Another election is ready for the archives and for West Peterborough mark the winner, George A. Gillespie. While the local representative will not enjoy the pleasures of sitting with the party in power, he is enjoying the sweets that come from a hard contest cleanly and squarely won. The vote was a big one in both the city and rural sections, and from the outset old-timers called the turn for the winner. "If we hold the city down, we'll take the country." That was the manner in which they had the situation figured out. Then came the first results, forerunners of a close fight, and the predictions based on the first returns were realized for th city gave Mr. Soden a small majority.

The close margin in the city proved that both the citizens and country people united to place victory on Gillespie's shoulders. A previous Conservative majority in East City was cut down and turned into a Liberal majority. Then the flow of the local tide stirred the hope that it was an illustration of what the province was doing. But hardly had such hopes begun to glimmer than they were rudely snuffed by returns which came in a bundle from other ridings. A couple of gains in Ottawa and Essex had fanned the flame. Then came "good old Toronto" with a solid front and then the spiritous deluge. That is what the temperance people remarked. The Conservatives said it was but a recognition of "good honest government," and the old-time Liberals said nothing but "Oh" and "Ah," and took as much satisfaction out of the Gillespie victory as they could.

The Gillespie forces hastily prepared a celebration of their victory, and while Mr. R. R. Hall broke the news at the Opera House that the Government was in statu quo, the audience realized that such a condition sounded ominous for the Abolish the Bar policy.

Disappointing the whole may have been, but out in front as far as this riding is concerned, was the example of a band of earnest, intelligent, sincere citizens who departed from party to support principle. Some may question their step, but none can cavil at their motives. Their immediate end was not achieved, but they do not need to be told that their example will be remembered when the other facts of the contest are forgotten. The tendency to independence of thought and action was given a little forward movement by their actions.

CELEBRATED GOLDEN WEDDING AT LAKEFIELD

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Webster Were Married 50 Years Ago To-day---Receive Many Congratulations

AN APPROPRIATE POEM

Examiner Special:

LAKEFIELD, June 30—Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Webster celebrated the anniversary of their golden wedding at their home in Lakefield, on Tuesday, June 30th.

Mr. Thomas Webster and Miss Webster (nee Mary Ann Finnie) were married on June 30th, 1864. Both were residents of the Township of Otonabee. After their marriage the happy couple settled on a farm on the 7th concession of the same township. They resided there for four years, and then moved to the Township of Dummer, where they resided for forty-two years.

During this period six sons and three daughters were born and who are all alive to celebrate their parents' anniversary of their golden wedding.

Mr. Webster was a member of the Dummer Township Council for seventeen years, and a member of the County Council for two years. During his term in the County Council the County House of Refuge was erected, he being on the building committee during its construction.

The members of the family who are at home for the celebration are: William, of Puyallup, Washington; Mrs. Beavis, matron of the County House of Refuge; Mr. Clysdale of Lakefield; James and Ellen of the Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough; Robert, Chief of Police, Lakefield; David of the State of Louisiana, U.S.A.; Albert, of Dummer, and Lorne of Smith Township.

Mr. Thomas Webster is a staunch Liberal and is a member of the Methodist Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Webster moved to Lakefield five years ago, where they still reside, enjoying the best of health.

Your Golden Wedding.

Long years ago in the month of June,
The happy bells rang all in tune,
Upon your wedding day;
But the skies are just as blue o'erhead,
As on the day when you were wed,
In Peterborough, far away.

Your stalwart lads and lassies sweet
E'er make your joy on earth complete
And free from any fear.
A charm divine hath lent its grace
For you have not one vacant place
To dim your eyes with tears.

Perhaps your bairns may for a time
In South Dakota's rugged clime,
Or sea-girt islands stray,
But where so e'er their steps may roam
Their thoughts will ever wander home,
In June, the thirtieth day.

If backward, o'er the years' expanse
In remembrance, you should glance,
What pleasure it doth hold!
How like a rare and beauteous flower
Whose petals open hour by hour,
Your married life unfold.

Or, like a happy joyous song,
Or a snow white cloud that floats along
Upon an azure sky.
The sunshine gilds its edge with gold,
Which makes it fairer to behold,
As it goes drifting by.

Your dreams of youth were sweet and fair;
And like a castle in the air,
Which in splendour, disappear;
Around your life they've left a maze
Of golden hours and golden days,
For fifty golden years.

SPENCE AND WHITNEY ON THE RESULT

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, June 30—Speaking of the results of yesterday's polling throughout the Province, Mr. F. S. Spence of the Dominion Alliance, says he takes the showing to be a highly satisfactory one, taking everything into consideration. He said: "Mr. Rowell will go back to the House with 25 members pledged to the cause of temperance. It is the beginning of an upheaval."

Sir James Whitney, in another statement to-day says the outstanding fact of the election is that the people of this Province declined to be coerced by demagogic clergymen who used the temperance question as a scourge to drive his government out of power.

THE ELECTIONS.

The result of yesterday's voting in West Peterborough, was the election of Mr. G. A. Gillespie by a mapority of 235. This result is highly gratifying to Mr. Gillespie and his friends, and the cause he represented. Mr. Gillespie is to be congratulated upon his success. In one sense it is a personal triumph. He was a strong candidate, of irreproachable character, and he waged a manly clean fight, and maintained a consistent, steady and unwavering attitude, of adherence to the position he took in the opening of the campaign. He is held in warm esteem in both city and country, and to his high personal character and his popularity he owes a large share of his success. As to the other elements that promoted his return they were somewhat disappointing in their extent. While he got strong and unswering support from many of the friends of the chief issue in the campaign, it is evident that there was a considerable proportion of the friends of temperance that did not accept that as the main issue; or if they did so, they did not apply it logically through their votes, but were apperently swerved by other considerations.

The results in the province at large are frankly disappointing. Mr. Rowell made a manly and gallant fight and if he did not attain the goal of his ambition, he placed his leadership and his statesmanship standing upon a higher plane. Before this election he was comparatively unknown to the electorate at large; but now he is well known and has gained influence and the respect of the electorate, independently of political feeling. Even his political enemies admire his high character as a man and his large capacity for public usefulness and high service. That he did not win is no surprise, considering the forces allied against his policy. He had arrayed against him the solid strength of the liquor interest, whose activities and influence upon the electorate were by no means confined to moral suasion methods. He had to combat an irrelevant sectarian issue, imported into the contest at the last moment; he had against him the sympathy devici, which somewhat played upon the personality of Sir James Whitney, though as a matter of fact, his active influence in the government is likely to be a negligible quantity. With the added disadvantage of a gerrymander of seats, with necessarily defective organization and opportunity to develop the strongest candidates, Mr. Rowell has a tremendous handicap and that he made a distinct gain in position in the house, is something of a triumph in itself and, emphasizes him as an outstanding figure in the public life of the province. True Mr. Rowell had the higher moral sentiment of the community for his side, but there is reason to feel, that its support was more moral than material—that the moral support was not made effective through the logical channel, the ballot. Mr. Rowell may not have made great numerical gains, but the moral and social interests he championed, and the economic interests incidentally included have, though tempararily obscured, been advanced to a permanent place among the great questions whose solution is the business and concern of the near future. People have been set thinking and will continue thinking upon these problems, and in this regard the educational features of the camment of the community on his side, ginning, acquire a very large importance.

RETRACING STEPS.

A man or a political party or a government that is in the right, will stick to the policy that is right. The Laurier government conceived a truly Canadian and imperial naval policy, and though the power to implement it was taken from him, he and his party still adhere to it. Mr. Borden and his party were at one on the Laurier naval policy to such an extent that it was to be regarded as more a national than a party policy But Mr. Borden and his advisers chose, in order to gain power, in order to get the support of an element that was hostile to any form of Canadian share in imperial defence: to overthrow for the moment the national naval policy and substitute a policy of contribution—compounding our loyalty from cash. But Mr. Borden hadnt' the courage to abolish, as he promised to do, the Laurier Naval Act.

Mr. Borden has now gone back to the position in naval affirs he and his party patriotically occupied in 1909, when Parliament unanimously, irrespective of parties, voted for the principle embodied in Laurier's Naval Act. The ships of the "tin-pot" navy that was ridiculed with the deepest scorn, are now to be used for training ships to train a body of naval reserves. This was the object with which the ships were purchased, and Sir Robert Borden is now giving them their proper use. But much valuable time has been wasted, and if Mr. Borden had been more true to his country and the empire than he was to party claims, and had put the Naval Act into force: if he had acted upon the tenders for ships that the Laurier government had called for, but could not deal with on account of its defeat—if these had been acted upon—we should now have two or three first-class cruisers of a Canadian-Imperial fleet ready for use, If the Niobe and Rainbow had been used since 1911 for the purposes they were intended, we should have had a Canadian naval force to man them. Sir Robert Borden now sees that he was in the wrong; for, after three years' wasted time, he is reverting to the Laurier naval policy, or, rather, the Canadian national naval policy, unanimously adopted in 1909.

Another case in which the right policy has been abandoned and resumed is in regard to the Transcontinental railway. The Laurier government spent a great deal of money to make the road perfect, a wise thing to do because it gave the full benefit of the line from the beginning and provided a permanent condition of economy of operation. It was spending money wisely at first, to save it for all time in the matter of operation and to make the railway of the greatest developmental value. But the Borden government preferred to make political capital and appointed a commission to find fault, and after spending $35,000 uselessly on a commission, which reported falsely that forty millions had been wasted in building the line too well, the Borden government now confesses itself wrong and comes back to the Laurier policy and proposes to rebuild, according to the original standard, the portions of the line it had degarded. Thus the government itself gives the lie to the findings of the Lynch-Gutelius commission.

There is far too much partyism in Canada. Government by party is a correct principle if it is not abused in application: but for the government of one party to oppose and undo the work of another party for the mere sake of opposition, is carrying the party principle too far. Both great parties should have a standard that should be observed—the good of the country. No matter how much parties may, and indeed should, differ in details, in modes of application of principles, the good of the country should be the chief consideration.

THE WIDTH OF ROADWAYS.

The Dominion Conservation Commission is an important body; to be regarded as an expert in the special departments of its functions; and its authoritative opinions and conclusions should be respected. In another part of this issue of The Examiner is reprinted from "Conservation," the organ of the Commission, an article upon street evolution.

While this article is, in the abstract, of great interest, its chief interest to Peterborough lies in the fact that one of the illustrative cuts sustains The Examiner's frequently advocated idea as to the width of roadways constructed on our residence streets. It will be noticed, by reference to cut No. 1, that in a 60-foot residence street the roadway—the driving surface is twenty-four feet, with two boulevards ten feet wide and two eight feet walks.

This plan could be applied to many of our streets, but especially to the streets on the Burnham tract, between King and Charlotte streets. Elias avenue is awaiting walks and roadway construction. If plan No. 1 were applied to it or some modification of this plan we should be making a good beginning.

On this avenue about midway between King and Charlotte streets, there are some magnificent elm trees. If the sidewalks are laid down on this avenue on the same plan as on the other avenues, giving a roadway of the absurd width of about forty feet, these trees will be sacrificed. According to the plan presented, the trees will be saved and a roadway sufficiently wide will be provided, and conditions created superior to the other way.

Elias avenue is 66 feet wide, and the space for grass and trees outside the walk shown in the cut, as eight feet wide, could be made eleven feet, or the additional three feet added to the lawns of property owners, which being unfenced, would practically be a part of the street for purposes of beauty and public enjoyment.

There seems to be no use making roadways 40 feet wide entailing great additional cost for construction and maintenance, where a little more than half of that width is ample. The city could as well afford to macadamize and make permanent a 24-foot roadway as it could afford to properly gravel a forty-foot roadway. The study of the plan, cut No. 1, is commended to our readers and the authorities. Is it not time we began doing things right, and gaining better results from a smaller expenditure of money?

THE EVOLUTION OF A BUSINESS STREET EXPLAINED

Evil Effects of Lack of Foresight---How a Municipality May Acquire Land for Widening at Minimum Cost.

The following interesting article on the evolution of a business street appears in "Conservation," the monthly bulletin of the Commission of Conservation:

Criticize the congested main street of a town as being too narrow and a resident will probably tell you "Yes, that is all right, we realize that now, but, when that street was laid out, no one ever thought it was going to be a busy thoroughfare. Why, I remember the time when all this portion of the street where we are standing was lined with private houses." We can all of us think of dozens of examples of this sort of thing. The cessary is to establish a restriction prohibiting the use of land for building beyond an established line. Legally, of course, this involves compensating the property owners, but the damages can be distributed over a long period in a simple way. No property rights need be acquired by the municipality until application is made for a building permit on an obstructive site, and then the restriction can be imposed and paid for. In this way the public thoroughfare is gradually widened at exactly the same rate as the growing commercial interests require. At no time is it necessary to pull down buildings. When any considerable number of problem is to so plan residential roadways that they may be gradually transformed into business streets at a minimum of expense. One way in which this may be done may be understood by a glance at the accompanying illustrations.

The upper diagram shows a street 60 feet wide and suitable for a residential section. The roadway is of moderate width, sufficient to accommodate the light traffic of delivery waggons, carriages, etc., that serve the houses on either side. A boulevard and trees give it a pleasant appearance, and, also, the houses are set back 20 feet from the property line, with gardens or lawns between them and the sidewalk.

If commercial interests should invade this region, property owners would, under ordinary circumstances, property owners require it, the walk may be moved over to the building line and the roadway widened. The trees should be left as long as possible, and, unless a street railway is constructed, should be a permanent feature.

The lower diagram shows the ultimate development of the 60-foot street into a 100-foot thoroughfare. Safety for pedestrians crossing the wide roadway is provided by "islands" at the base of each pole holding the electric wires. Motor cars may run up and down the middle unimpeded by slowmoving waggons and drays, while the latter have ample room to pass between the street car tracks and standing vehicles by the sidewalk.—P. M. B.

build forward to the sidewalk, partly to use the extra space, but chiefly to bring store windows flush up to the causeway. A portion of the street in process of transformation presents a very ragged appearance, due to the lack of a uniform building line. When the process is complete, the once beautiful residential street has become a congested business thoroughfare with narrowed walks and a 44-ft. roadway. To widen it would necessitate the tearing down of valuable buildings and would be a heavy expense to the taxpayers.

Foresight would obviate this undesirable development. All that is necessary is to establish a building line and to prohibit the erection of buildings beyond it. Legally, this involves compensation to the property owners, but the damages can be distributed over a long period in a simple way. No property rights need be acquired by the municipality until application is made for a building permit on an obstructive site, and then the restriction can be imposed and paid for. In this way the public thoroughfare is gradually widened at exactly the same rate as the growing commercial interests require. At no time is it necessary to pull down buildings. When any considerable number of property owners require it, the walk may be moved over to the building line and the roadway widened. The trees should be left as long as possible, and, unless a street railway is constructed, should be a permanent feature.

The lower diagram shows the ultimate development of the 60-foot street into a 100-foot thoroughfare. Safety for pedestrians crossing the wide roadway is provided by "islands" at the base of each pole holding the electric wires. Motor cars may run up and down the middle unimpeded by slowmoving waggons and drays, while the latter have ample room to pass between the street car tracks and standing vehicles by the sidewalk.—P. M. B.

In connection with the above it is interesting to compare the following extract from a recent address by Mr. Raymond Unwin, F.R.I.B.A., before the Victoria League Imperial Health Conference in London: There are certain requirements of town planning which are fairly obvious and generally applicable, such as the prevention of the overcrowding of dwellings, and the fixing of such a building line on all the main buildways radiating out of the town into the country, as will prevent buildings being erected so near to these roads that future widening can only take place at excessive cost after demolition of the buildings."

HONESTY ITS OWN REWARD

When you pick up a piece of lost property on the street, in Massachusetts, a cat or a jewel or whatever it may be if it is worth $3—to you—you are bound to post your discovery in some conspicuous place or send the town crier about announcing it. You must also give notice of your treasure trove to the town clerk and pay him 25 cents for making the entry thereof in a book he keeps for the purpose. If the findings are worth more that $10, you must cause a notice thereof to be posted in two adjoining cities or towns. If the property is not reclaimed in two months then you must have the clerk appoint two appraisers and the owner if he comes within a year shall have full restitution of the goods or money or the value of the lost animal, allowing you to deduct a reasonable sum "for keeping, notifying, crying and appraising and for necessary travel in the case." But if no owner turns up, the finder may keep the property, but one half its value must be paid to the city or town treasurer. If a finder does not do all this he forfeits the full value of the property he found, unless he delivers or accounts for it to the owner; and in that case he pays a forfeit of "not more than $20."

Thus it is clear that before the law in Massachusetts finding is not keeping, and "halvers" is the town's rule if the owner does not come forward. There is a page and a half of statutes about found property, including the care and disposal of animals, in the Massachusetts revised laws. This shows that the finder is the keeper of his brother's possessions and that to retain the property of other people which one finds is to be a wrongdoer in the eyes of the law.

This lends points to an instance lately cited in a magazine for children to show that even to accept reward for returning found goods is to lower a little one's standard of honesty. Reward paid for returning in such cases is usually supposed to be proportioned to the value of the thing found rather than to the amount of trouble taken in restoring it. To pay for time and expense given on the part of the finder is of course simple justice; but to reward his act of honesty as if there were some doubt as to his responsibility in the matter is to establish a wrong standard. Few people, however, know that they are liable under the law in many places to return found articles and even to take considerable trouble about their return. This puts a new face on the question of reward. The case cited as noted above showed a working woman utterly astounded and even hurt when money was offered her for returning a pocket book with thousands of dollars in it. She said that she had merely done what was right, for she had in her own eye no claim whatever on the property of other people, so she refused the reward.

Two farmers met in a Western town a day or two after a cyclone had visited that particular neighbourhood. "She shook thinks up pretty bad out at my place," said one, stroking his whiskers meditatively. "By the way, Hi," he added, "that new barn o' yourn hurt any?" "Wall," drawled the other, "I dunno; I hain't found it yet."

Two More Bodies Have Been Found

One of Empress Victims Identified as Maud E. Smith

RIMOUSKI, Que., June 29.—When the Lord Strathcona came slowly to the wharf here last night after the first day spent wholly in the search for bodies, on the sunken Empress of Ireland, two of the caskets stored aboard her were occupied. The remains of two more victims have been discovered. One of these was identified as Maud E. Smith. That is all that is known of her here, identity was made by a money order which was found in a pocket in the underclothing which she was wearing.

OTHER BODY NOT KNOWN.

The other body is that of an older woman. She wore some clothing and a raincoat, but there was nothing that would give any clue to her name or from what part of the continent she came. She was, it would seem, about forty years of age and had light hair. Beyond this, little is known.

Both bodies were discovered between the funnels. That of Miss Smith which was found by Whitehead, one of the men from the cruiser Essex, was caught in a peculiar manner. One foot was jammed between what seemed to be two pipes and the head and shoulders were deep in one of the huge ventilators. It was difficult work to free it, but this was finally accomplished. The other body was found nearby. One foot in this case was caught in a bight of a rope. No other bodies were found, but all the divers are confident that there are many more about the decks. None of the men to-day landed in a favourable place to make explorations.

HAD TRIED TO LAUNCH BOAT.

Henry Chincken, a new man from the Yankee Salvage Company, of New York, who made his descent today, landed in a lifeboat. The grips at one end had been freed, but the tackle at the other was caught, showing that an attempt had been made to launch it. He was unable to make his way about because of the tackle and gear which might easily have fouled his lines.

The final mooring was fixed on Saturday when John Devane, a diver from the New York company, landed on the bridge of the liner and made fast a rope to the ship near the port light. He then was hauled up and Keeler, the naval man, went down the rope. The mooring chain was led to him, and he made it fast. It was not the best day for working there, one hundred feet below the surface. All morning, the wind, which had for three days blown a gale, had not quite died down, and only this work was accomplished although the ships, the Lord Strathcona and Marie Josephine remained on the scene all day. Still this was an invaluable achievement in that no real work of examination could be done until this buoy was moored. This will be fourth of the lines to be laid to the buoys which are made fast to them, marking definitely the position of the ship one on each side, one at the propeller, and this last one well forward, the Marie Josephine, from which the divers worked is moored, thus, with the schooner held absolutely in place, the daring men may descend with some degree of safety assured.

And so, when sudden morning broke clear and bright without cloud of ill promise staining the blue of the sky, the waters of the Gulf stretching out like a great white pond, it was felt that on this day much would surely be accomplished, and so, scarcely before the sun had lifted, the two boats cast off their lines and sailed down the path of gleaming ripples that the sun soon scattered along the surface.

Regularity

of the bowels is an absolute necessity for good health. Unless the waste matter from the food which collects there is got rid of at least, once a day, it decays and poisons the whole body, causing biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches. Salts and other harsh mineral purgatives irritate the delicate lining of the bowels. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills—entirely vegetable—regulates the bowels effectively without weakening, sickening or griping. Use

GIRL CRIES OUT AGAINST LAWYER IN DIVORCE CASE

NEW YORK, June 29—Miss Eleanor A. McGill, who is being sued for $50,000 in the supreme court, Jersey City, by Mrs. Mary Mayer, the wife of Miss McGill's chauffeur, Walter Mayer, created a scene in court today when Alexander Simpson, counsel for Mrs. Mayer, began to sum up for the plaintiff.

"Posing as an innocent girl,' shouted Simpson, "she has plotted to take this woman's husband away from her and from his five-year-old son.

"I want to recall to your minds, gentlemen of the Jury, some of the facts testified to in this case.

"The defendant discharged all of her seven servants except the chauffeur, Mayer. There was no one in that house but the defendant, Mayer, the chauffeur, and the defendant's aunt, who is seventy years old and almost blind.

"We have had testimony here that the defendant, who has an income of $30000 a year, did all the housework and made up the beds, including the bed of Mayer, the chauffeur."

Miss McGill, gowned in a blue tailor-made gown and with a bonnet of the poke variety fastened by velvet strings, furnishing a charming frame for her pretty face, suddenly threw herself on her knees in front of the jury box with tears streaming down her cheeks.

"Don't believe that," she screamed "I didn't do that! It's a lie!"

Her counsel, Mr. Collins, sprang to her aid and lifted her to her feet, urging her to be calm. It was some time before she recovered her composure.

Mr. Simpson did not modify the bitterness of his attack as he proceeded with his address to the jury.

Waverly had just returned from an extended Eastern trip. "Were you in many of the old New England towns?" asked Marcello. "Nearly all of them of any size." "And did you see Plymouth Rock?" "Had my picture taken standing on it." "What did you think of the rock?" "Oh, it's all very well in its way, but why on earth do they have it in such a dinkey little town?"

When it will spin a thread, remove from the fire, and stir until it begins to cool; do not allow it to harden. Then add slowly the stiffly beaten whites of 2 eggs and 3 tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Spread between the layers, and sprinkle thickly with some finely chopped nutmeats. CORNED BEEF BALLS.

Two teacups finely chopped corned beef, 1 onion minced very fine, 3 teacups mashed potatoes, salt and pepper to season, 1 egg; beat all together well, form into balls, roll well in flour and fry in deep fat, as you would fry doughnuts; garnish with parsley or celery leaves and serve hot.

A CHEAP BUT TASTY DISH.

For an expensive luncheon dish buy two calves' hearts, which are enough for an ordinary sized family. Slice these as one would a tomato, dip in flour, salt and pepper and brown in half butter and half lard, or fry in bacon grease. Serve with curls of bacon and garnish with water cress.

DUTCH SAUCE.

One ounce of butter. One ounce of flour. Three-quarters of a pint of milk. One yolk of egg. One teaspoonful of vinegar. Heat the milk and add it to the butter and flour. Stir until it thickens, remove it from the fire and add the yolk and lastly the vinegar.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

GILLESPIE SUPPORTERS GAVE HIM GRAND RECEPTION IN OPERA HOUSE LAST NIGHT

Feeling of Gratification That the Strong Fight For a Moral Cause Had Been Sustained in Peterborough

SOME OF SPEAKERS

When the friends of G. A. Gillespie realized last evening that their candidate's election was assured, preparations were made for the usual "See the Conquering Hero" comes parade, with the 57th Regimental Band tromboning into "O Canada" and other patriotic airs. It did not take long to arrange the procession. The necessary automibiles and cabs were quickly called out and the Band appeared with a promptiude that suggested to the casual observer that they were expecting the summons from one or other party. Thanks to the electors, the honour of being the central figure of the celebration fell to Mr. Gillespie and he accepted it with characteristic modesty.

The crowds on George Street gave Mr. Gillespie a whole-hearted reception, and at the Opera House his popularity was affirmed by rounds of cheering from those who gathered to share in the present pleasures of victory. But there was missing that boisterous, kick - the - lid - off spirit which has usually marked past political successes. The Orchestra played with a swaying lilt "This is the Life" but this was the only faint suggestion of the idea of starting something. There was elation in the air, but the soft pedal was down on it, or rather the victors were not the hat-smashing species. Their cheers were spontaneous and full-throated, but the real rough stuff was absent.

The spirit of gratitude permeated the meeting. A Conservative majority of over six hundred had been transformed into a Liberal surplus of two hundred and it was realized even at that hour that the Peterborough gain was standing out conspicuously before the Province. The fact that the force of fusion had contributed largely to the local turn-over was fully recognized, and the strange anomaly was presented of Conservatives actively sharing in the extemporaneous celebration. The sentiment displayed in this election will surely have a permanent force. Last night's meeting was primarily a compliment to Mr. Gillespie. Secondly, it provided former political adversaries an opportunity of a parting handshake upon the success of their united efforts. Then there was the great satisfaction that a lofty principle had been sustained and there was a feeling of pride that men had set aside party inclinations for a high ideal, and, lastly, there was disappointment that another expression of Peterborough's strong temperance sentiment was stripped of its fruit when a local victory held out the bright promise of success.

Mr. Gillespie Grateful.

Mr. J. J. Hartley presided at the Opera House meeting. In a neat, brief speech he referred to the forces which combind to win the election, and then called upon Mr. Gillespie. The new M.P.P. was cheered to the echo. When he was defeated by Mr. T. E. Bradburn, a few years ago he tasted the bitters of defeat, but it was with a smile. Last night Mr. Gillespie returned the warm greetings of his friends with a smile which doubtless was not diluted with a thought that the rally around Rowell had not been exactly a riot.

"I assure you, ladies and gentlemen," Mr. Gillespie began, "that it is a pleasure to have been elected as the representative of West Peterborough. I want to thank the ladies, for I believe that in this election their influence affected many votes. I thank those Conservatives who supported me and I thank the Liberals and all who worked in my behalf. I also wish to thank the Temperance Associations who worked so hard and so faithfully in the cause of temperance. I had the assistance of as fine a body of men as I ever saw. Their enthusiasm and support kept me up, and I feel as fresh now as when I took up the work. (Voices: "We all do; and that's going some.") I hope I will have a chance to work in their behalf and to work with them again. This was one of the hardest fought elections in West Peterborough. We were successful and we have nothing to regret. I have no ill feeling toward Mr. Roden nor to any of those who worked against me. I don't think either party has any cause to regret anything."

Mr. Gillespie concluded by repeating his gratitude to those who had united with him and by assuring them of his best efforts in their behalf.

Mr. A. B. Cunningham.

"I congratulate the Liberal party upon providing a candidate whom the temperance Conservatives were not ashamed to vote for," said Mr. A. B. Cunningham, who had been one of Mr. Gillespie's most faithful supporters. "The temperance people have been accused of not delivering the goods, but it seems to me that this was the first occasion on which they had a man to deliver them to. I congratulate the temperance men who were not Liberals by politics. In Mr. Gillespie we have a man who does not represent merely the Liberal party, but also the temperance people and the more intelligent part of the Conservatives, who believed that temperance was the greatest issue in this campaign. We have met defeat in the past five years, but we will never be stopped until we are through with Ontario, and after that it will be on to Ottawa. To-night politics are on a higher plane than ever, and I hope it will be kept there so that the best citizens including the ministers, will not be ashamed to take a place on public platforms."

Mr. Leader.

Mr. George Leader said that he looked on Gillespie's election as a triumph of temperance in Peterborough. He declared that he had entered the contest because of his temperance sentiments, and there was no one who could question his sincerity. He concluded with a hope that legislation would be given in keeping with the sentiments of the people.

Alderman Duffus said that the supporters of Mr. Gillespie had reason to feel elated because of the victory of the moral issue which had been before the people of the riding. Everyone who could question his sincerity, feel sure that he would represent the ideas and know the wants of the whole riding.

Mr. F. D. Kerr, Mr. J. F. Thornton, Mr. R. R. Hall, Mr. Navey and Mr. Anderson, all made short speeches referring to the candidate, and congratulating Mr. Gillespie. The meeting was concluded with cheers for the King and the new M.P.P.

Carnival Week

Washburn's Mighty Midway Shows at Exhibition Grounds, Under the Auspices of the Peterborough Central Exhibition

A big week will begin next Monday when the famous Washburn Midway Shows will pay a visit to this City. The coming of the big carnival on its own special train of 28 sixty-foot cars will arrive on Monday morning.

The Galt papers speak very highly of the attraction and the class of shows that are placed before the public. Among the midway attractions are the big trained wild animal show, with its male and female trainers, that make the lions, tigers, leopards, panthers and groups of bears go through their different tricks. The great air ride, the trip to the moon, with its up and down ride, is one big scream; not to overlook the great hair rising rides of the Motordrome and the three riders that risk death at every performance, and keeps the onlooker pitched to the very limit of excitement.

Move on to the Athletic Show, with the Greek middleweight wrestler, John Kilopies, as the feature, and the lady wrestlers that give bouts at every show; then there are the lady boxers that show how clever women are with the gloves.

At last we come to the famous Coney Island Dreamland sideshow, with the many freaks that are on view to the patrons, among them Frank, the ossified man, actually turning to stone, and the most wonderful human being alive today and on exhibition.

Prof. De'Almas' Dog and Pony Circus, with its many trained animals and the funny mules and clowns is a great treat for the children, as well as the grown folks.

At last we come to the roars of laughter and find ourselves in front of the Barrel of Fun, and the famous $10,000 Crystal Maze, one big laugh and well worth a visit if you are looking for fun and amusement.

The many rides are in the centre of the Midway, and among them are the big steel Ferris Wheel, Krase's famous carry us all and the Ocean Wave.

The stellar attraction and free to the public is the world's champion lady high diver, Miss Elma Meier, who twice daily dives from a ladder, 100 feet into a tank of water and gives fancy exhibitions of swimming.

The Ladies International Military Band gives concerts afternoon and night.

"Y" Boys Are Off To Camp

In the afternoon a game of baseball was held, and after that sports were run off. Dry Goods Merchants Decide To Discontinue Offering Discounts

The retail merchants of Peterborough have made a forward step toward sound business by determining to discontinue the granting of discounts to employees of other stores, ministers, nurses and others who have been accustomed recipients of this favour. The primary reason for this action lies in the fact that the manufacturers and wholesalers have reduced their discounts from in many cases 10 p.c. to 20 p.c., besides reducing the time for payment. In other words they have been turning the screws on the retailer who in turn is forced to protect himself as much as possible. It is felt that in most cases all those who have been receiving the discounts are well able to pay the regular prices. Ministers receive fair stipends and it must be said that not a few of them refused to accept the discounts, once in their case it will simply be a further extension of the ideal of full prices. Some nurses asked for and accepted discounts. Their salaries are regarded as decidedly large and those who have been asking for discounts will be requested to join their sisters who were contented to pay regular prices.

Dressmakers, too, come under the new ruling. Some of their patrons who visit a dry goods store get samples shown them to a dressmaker who would then proceed to the store, buy the necessary goods and ask for the discount. Hence it will be recognised that the retailer was in such cases merely keeping his doors open for the unsatisfactory privilege of having something to keep him employed.

In short, the retailers have been forced to protect themselves. All the leading retailers have agreed to offer no more discounts, and th old char- no more discounts, and the old char- July 1st.

Crippled With Rheumatism

And Skeptical After Trying Many Medicines — Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Cured Him.

When the kidneys fail to purify the blood the poisons left in the system cause pain and suffering, such as backache, lumbago and rheumatism. Read how this skeptic was cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. F. W. Brown, Kingsbury, Que., writes:—"I have been completely cured of backache and lame back by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I also recommended the pills to a man who was a cripple from rheumatism. He was skeptical, as he said that he had tried nearly everything on earth. Finally he consented to try them, and to his surprise was greatly benefited in the first week, and the pains left his legs until he was so supple he could walk without pain or difficulty. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have worked wonders in this place, and we think there is no medicine like them."

Mr. Gillespie Speaks To His Constituents

To the Electors of West Peterborough,

Gentlemen,

I would be insensible of my duty to the Electors if I did not embrace the earliest opportunity of giving expression to my grateful thanks for the honour conferred upon me yesterday by Electing me as your Representative for West Peterborough in the Ontario Legislature.

If there is any one feature more than another in connection with the contest which affords me great satistion, it is the fact that the campaign in this Riding was conducted in such a good spirit. I owe much to my ardent workers for this better conduct of a political campaign; and trust that nothing has been said or done that would tend to estrange one citizen from another.

I have to congratulate my active friends and workers upon their good organization and enthusiastic efforts on my behalf. I thank the press, the pulpit, the ladies and my Conservative friends, and especially the young men of both parties, for their zealous stand and forceful work on behalf of my candidature.

If the result of the campaign to Abolish the Bar in Ontario has not borne the fruit so anxiously looked for, an impulse has been given to the Temperance Cause, which cannot but leave its impress upon future legislation.

I believe that in all respects the will of the people must be had before good Government can be enforced, and I desire no higher honour than that which you have given me, by placing me in a position where I will have an opportunity of giving a good account of my stewardship.

Sincerely yours,

Geo. A. Gillespie

JUNIPER ISLAND WHARVES

Ample Accommodation for Motor Boats Has Been Provided

STONEY LAKE, June 29 — The Stoney Lake Cottagers' Association is to be commended for the splendid wharves they have provided at their property on Juniper Island for the use of the public. They no doubt will find a hearty response from the cottagers this year when they make their appeal for membership fees, particularly from motor boat owners, for their requirements in the way of wharf space have been well provided for.

The wharves are a credit to their builder, Mr. Hamilton of McCracken's Landing. They are constructed of cedar throughout, the logs being a particularly fine lot.

Mr. Wm. Irwin, Vice President of the Association, superintended the placing, which was done by the Government boat gang. Large anchors (with chains attached), in the form of cement blocks, each weighing 1200 pounds, were dropped in the lake at the required positions.

Two sections of 75 feet each are placed at the south end of the Government Wharf, and extend out into the Lake, thus providing accommodation on both sides. One section of 75 feet is placed against the shore south of the pavilion, in the place of the former narrow yacht wharf. Two sections of 75 feet each are anchored to the north of the store, about 20 feet from the present shore line. This wharf is for canoes and skiffs, the others being for launches and sail boats.

That Norman Gaele
Is "out on bail"
Is greatly exaggerated.
The truth is he took his sail boat, "Angel's Wings" to Peterborough last Thursday, behind the Steamer Manita to have some repairs made, and she was leaking so badly that
Norman Gaele
Had to bail
With a pail
All the sail,
Nor dare he fail
Or he'd have a whale—
Of a time.

Rev. Mr. Bingham and family are occupying "Stockholme" for a time.

Mr. Douglas of "Northcote Farm," below Young's Point, is camping on an island in Cassidy's Bay.

Mr. Murray Carlisle paid a short visit to "Upsidedown," Kawartha Park.

Dr. Husband of Hamilton has taken possession of his new cottage, Kawartha Park.

Mr. John Hunter has had great luck fishing. He has caught several members of the Maskinonge family.

Mr. E. Wyley Grier of Toronto, has joined his family at their summer home, "Woodonga."

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Edmund of Toronto, accompanied by their son, Charles, and Mrs. Edmund, Sr., have located for the season at Kawartha Park.

Mr. George Blackmore of Toronto has arrived for the summer and is assisting Contractor Ayotte in putting on the finishing touches to his new cottage.

The advance guard from the Y. M. C. A., Peterborough, arrived at Sandy Point, Friday, to prepare for the reception of the boys on Monday. They will hold their annual field day July 3rd, and on Saturday evening they will enjoy a motor ride around the Lakes.

Misses Lillian and Leah Rogers, accompanied by Mrs. Fairweather and Miss Jean, have opened their cottage for the summer.

Mr. Lowes, who has purchased "Glenwood" from Mrs. Breeze, has made extensive improvements to the buildings and equipment and is preparing for a busy season.

TEN MINUTE CAR SERVICE BEGINS

And Indications Are That It Will Prove of as Great Convenience as Promised—Better Connections Made

Yesterday the ten-minute car service was inaugurated in Peterborough and already local citizens who use the street cars are beginning to realize something of the advantages of the new system. In the first place a car leaves every point of the system every ten minutes instead of every fifteen minutes as in the past, thus giving a quicker service from every part of every line. Then, too, as the north and south bound George Street cars pass at Charlotte Street, the Jackson Park and C.G.E. lines make direct connections with both the south and north lines, and both north and south lines make direct connections with the rail car going west and south.

Indications are that the ten-minute service will be all that is promised, and it is evident already that it is easily possible for the four George Street cars, by means of the new turnouts, to keep up to schedule even in the busiest part of the day. It is asked, however, that all passengers enter and leave the cars as quickly as possible after they have stopped at the crossing, and that they lose no time in changing from one car to another at transfer points. The new car is not ready for service yet, but will be on the line in a few days.

MAY FIND SEAT FOR DR. REAUME

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, June 30—It is understood that the Government will try to find a seat for the Hon. Dr. Reaume, Minister of Public Works, who was defeated yesterday. In default of this Dr. Reaume may go to the Senate or be given a $5,000 registership, now vacant, in Essex. If Reaume leaves the Government the possibilities for the vacant Cabinet position are G. Howard Ferguson and T. W. McGarry, with chances that Hon. J. S. Hendrie might get the portfolio of public works.

LEFT ESTATE OF OVER MILLION

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, June 30—One million and forty six thousand dollars, including in cash only $72, is the amount of the estate left by the late William Harris, of the Harris Abbattoir Company. Mr. Harris was well known all over Ontario and Manitoba as a cattle buyer. His estate is divided, by his will, among his children and his wife. The will states that as his wife helped him build up his fortune he always considered it as much her's as his. He came from England years ago without a penny.

OF COURSE YOU NEVER DO.

Real Wonder-Worker For Wrinkled Face

Those who have tried all sorts of so-called "wrinkle-removers" in a vain effort to lose those unwelcome traces of age, illness or worry, can scarcely find words to express their delight with the wonderful saxolite formula, once they have given it a trial. The success of this method is due not alone to its marvellous effectiveness—upon the deepest lines and crow's feet, as well as upon the very fine ones—but also to its surprisingly quick action and its entire harmlessness. Its simplicity and its inexpensiveness are other commendable features, for one needs only dissolve an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel, and bathe the face in this solution. At once a remarkable transformation is beheld.

It is not only the effect on wrinkles and creases that is so noticeable, but facial contour is remarkably improved and the face looks much younger. One should be sure to ask the druggist for the powdered saxolite. The lotion, being so refreshing, is particularly grateful to tired faces these warm, depressing days.

Four Local Young Ladies Successful

Pupils of Mr. J. H. Renwick All Pass Toronto Conservatory of Music Exams.

Four local young ladies have been successful in passing the Toronto Conservatory of Music examinations this summer. All are the pupils of Mr. J. H. Renwick, who, as well as the successful students themselves, are to be congratulated on the splendid showing made. Mr. Renwick's pupils were the only ones in Peterborough to try the Toronto Conservatory examinations this season, and it is interesting to note that all were successful and three out of the four took honours in the examinations. The successful vocalists were:

Intermediate—Miss Lottie Hanson (honours.)

200 Killed in Riots

Examiner Special:

BUDAPEST, HUNGARY, June 30.—More than two hundred persons were killed and wounded to-day in Herzegovina, in the battles between the Moslem Croats and Christian Serbs. The situation is very threatening and troops have been sent in large numbers to try to restore peace. The riots were the direct result of the assassination of Archduke Ferdinand Emperor Franz Josef is stated to be very feeble to-day and a serious apprehension is felt on his behalf. He had a conference to-day with Archduke Charles Josef, who is now heir apparent to the throne.

CAR DERAILED

The derail on the west side of the G.T.R. track on Charlotte street prevented what might have been a serious accident this afternoon about ten minutes to two. A Jackson Park car was coming east at a fair rate of speed and when nearing the gates the motorman noticed that they were closed. He tried to stop the car, but was unable to do so.

Citizens who saw the affair said that there are not sufficient cars on Charlotte street now that the ten minute service has been inaugurated. It was stated that the car was travelling very fast at the time.

WHERE TO GO TO-MORROW

LOCAL LACROSSE MATCH

With nothing to do but go to-morrow the citizens will have an opportunity of enjoying themselves around town or on the water. The method of stirring up in the minds of the youths not to mention adults a recognition of Dominion Day and what it stands for has not been made public, but possibly each and every man, woman and school boy will pick up his history to find out the why of Confederation Day, or at least to rekindle his memory. Doubtless, too, there will be a good deal of flag-waving by the ultra-loyal.

However, for those who simply intend to take a quiet holiday it might be suggested that the lacrosse team plays the fast team from Tweed tomorrow afternoon at Riverside Park, commencing at three o'clock. This should give the people a chance to see the locals.

There are the usual excursions up the Lakes, including one to South Beach, under the auspices of the True Blues. There are trips down the river with the big annual picnic of St. Peter's T.A.S., as a leader. For those who like cricket there will be an all-day game at the Oval between St. Alban's, of Toronto, and the local team. Of course the hour's ride car and other homey entertainments will be the same as usual, and large numbers of the electorate will likely spend the day within sight of the city's limits.

A Special Train will leave Port Hope at 11 p. m. for Peterborough, to-morrow, July 1st. to enable people attending the Port Hope Celebration to see the Evening Performance.

RECORDS FOR PAST WEEK IN FOUR LEAGUES

The work of the Providence Greys was the feature of the past week in the International League. Donovan's ex-Tigers showed the way with a great spurt of speed, and with good pitching won six out of eight games. The Leafs had a poor week, with only two wins out of seven games.

The Giants had only a fair week in the National, winning four games out of seven games. Good old Christy Mathewson won two out of the four.

Toronto Beavers, Ottawa, and London are tie. with the same number of wins and losses.

It was a wonderful week for the Windy City club in the American.

FIGHTERS ARE ACCUSED OF FAKING BOUT

PARIS, June 29.—Disgust at the hippodrome staged at the Velodrome D'Hiver by Jack Johnson and Frank Moran was marked here to-day by open charges of fake. Several of the newspapers made flat charges that Moran was allowed to stay the 20 rounds by the negro for the moving pictures, and that Moran knew before he entered the ring that he was not to be knocked out.

These statements were based largely on the opinions of those who saw the fight, which are unanimous that Johnson could have put Moran away at any time he chose. They were added to by an alleged confession of Jack Adams, one of Johnson's trainers, who declared Tom Flanagan, Johnson's adviser, was in the plot to let Moran stick through the mill.

Adams was quoted as saying that Moran was sent back to America to work up interest in the fight, that Johnson went into the ring at 214 pounds, and that the whole fight was cut and dried before the first bell rang.

It was stated here to-day that Johnson and Langford are to meet in October, Johnson having agreed to meet the Boston tar baby for $30,000.

Is After Jack Forbes

No. 20 McCaul Street,
Toronto, Ont., June 20, 1914.

Dear Editor,—I saw Jack Forbes' wrestling challenge in your paper to wrestle any man in the world up to 130 lbs. Little Hack preferred. For the last two weeks I have been located in Toronto trying to do business with him, but he evidently doesn't want anything to do with me, saying that a bout in Toronto wouldn't pay. I am prepared to meet the Scotchman in Peterborough, Toronto or anywhere he likes and am willing to put up $50 to $100 on my chances. Forbes is at present meeting all comers in Toronto at 122 lbs. and has repeatedly refused to wrestle me, saying I am over weight. Now, if Forbes means business let him accept my challenge and I will wrestle him in Peterborough or any place he would like to name. Ibeg to remain,

Yours respectfully,
JACK BATES.

Street Car Schedule Is Working Smoothly

The new Street Railway schedule was put into operation on Monday, beginning a service that is a credit to the city. The George street cars worked smoothly and regularly, the Jackson Park cars were usually on time, but the turn out on the C.G.E. line in front of the Edison works is too far south. The uptown going cars had frequently to wait a minute or two at that point, and then try to make up the time on the way to George street. If the switch were south of Sherbrooke street there would not be the same delay, and the uptown going cars would be that much nearer the city when the south car passed it. Otherwise there were no apparent flaws in the system. The service on George street was particularly good, and the entire system is fitted with a sound, smooth roadbed, modern cars, and in most cases, with an efficient crew.

What Good Roads Mean

An increase in the value of farm land ranging from $5 to $25 per acre.

A more intensive agriculture, owing to the fact that a much greater variety of crops can be profitably marketed.

Hence, an improvement in soil fertility due to better farming methods.

The advantage to the farmer of being able to sell at the most convenient time, instead of waiting for good weather conditions.

The marketing of perishable goods in fresher condition.

Bigger loads and fewer trips to town.

Less wear and tear on harness and waggons.

Greater feasibility for gasoline traction.

THE PLEDGES WE MADE.

Beware ye trustees in whose keeping
The shield of our honour is placed.
For clear are the words of the Future.
When the years of your power are fled:
In the ears of the Steward Unfaithful
The voice of the Master is dread.
Far better a grave on the Isthmus.
In the depth of the ditch we have dredged.
Than for profit of gold and of silver.
We break with the word we have pledged.

We are judged in the Court of Our Children,
Which will pass all our deeds in review.
And we shall account for the ending
Of work we have trusted to you.
It will know not the glamour of cargoes,
The struggle of shipping with rail,
And only to win our acquittal.
The witness of Right shall avail.
For you the bright blade of stern Justice
With the vengeance of God shall be edged.
If ye fail in the hour of trial.
To stand by the word we have pledged.

—Celwyn E. Hampton.

BROTHERS KEEP VOW OF SILENCE

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., June 29—Robert and Joseph Miller, borthers, spoke to each other this week for the first time in fifteen years. All of this time they have lived in the same house, eaten at the same table, slept in the same room and been partners in the produce farm which they own. They are well-to-do.

Fifteen years ago when their stock in trade consisted of a run-down little truck garden they had a falling out over who did the most work and Joseph vowed that he would never speak to his brother again until Robert spoke first. Pride prevented each from being the first to break over.

When they had anything to say to each other they did it through the medium of a third person.

"Ask Joe if he is going to town today or whether I shall go." Robert would say to a hired hand, even though Joseph were within a few feet of him.

"Tell Bob I am going because there is some private business I want to see about," Joseph would reply through the same medium.

During their resting hours and through the long winter evenings the two played cards together, but each sat stolidly smoking a pipe and neither spoke to the other. With other people about they would talk freely and easily, but never to each other.

The silence between them was broken when Robert was buried underneath a slide of cordwood which he was piling up. Joseph rushed up.

"Oh, Bob, are you badly hurt?" he asked. Afterward he said that he did not realise that he was breaking his vow.

"No, Joe," was the reply, "but this wood is holding me so that I can't get out without help."

Then the two men laughed, shook hands and began to converse about getting Robert out of his unpleasant captivity.

C. P. R. OPERATOR WAS INJURED

WHITBY, June 29.—Happy Heele, night operator at the Canadian Pacific Railway station at Myrtle, ten miles north of here, was seriously injured in an automobile accident, when his car skidded in the road and threw him out, pinning him underneath the top. Heele and a young lady were returning from Uxbridge, and Heele, desirous of reaching Myrtle station in time to report for duty, speeded up his car. His headlights would not burn, and he was forced to run in the dark. When nearing Manchester, a few miles north of Myrtle, the car skidded in some newly-graveled road, swung completely round and turned over on its side. Heele was pinned underneath the cover, but the young lady was thrown clear. In the darkness the girl extricated the man, and called for help at a nearby house. Physicians were summoned, and the young man was found to have sustained concussion of the brain, besides a badly cut head. No bones were broken. The young lady was uninjured.

He was brought to the Ross Memorial Hospital to receive the best medical treatment possible.

No New Features.

FREDERICTON, N.B., June 30.—The royal commission enquiring into the Dugal charges held their first session in Fredericton yesterday, sitting for about three and one-half hours. The session was productive of no interesting features, and many of the crowd of spectators who assembled, expecting some of the lively scenes such as ensued at St. John last week, left early, very much disappointed.

Returns from the East Riding were hard to obtain to-day but inquiry over the telephone from Havelock and Norwood show that Jas. WEDDING BELLS

ANDERSON—LILLEY.

A quiet but pretty wedding took place at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, Auburn Street, between Florence, daughter of Mr. Wm. Lilley, and Stuart Anderson, the Rev. H. G. Peever performing the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson will reside in Peterborough.

DEVLIN—FINN.

A very pretty wedding tok place at the Church of the Annunciation, Enterprise, on Wednesday morning, June 17th, at 10 o'clock, when Miss Gertrude Monica Finn, daughter of Mr. Anthony Finn, of Enterprise, became the bride of Mr. Patrick J. Devlin, youngest son of the late Roger Devlin of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father McDonald, in the presence of immediate friends of the bride and groom. The bride was becomingly attired in a gown of white brocaded satin, and was assisted by her sister, Miss Loretta Finn. The groom was supported by his cousin, Mr. Wm. Smith, of Peterborough. After the ceremony the happy couple drove to the home of the bride's parents, where a dainty wedding breakfast was served, after which they left on a wedding trip to Toronto, Niagara, Buffalo and New York. The bride travelled in a suit of navy blue whipcord. On their return the happy couple will reside at 477 Mark Street, Peterborough.

CHANDLER—STALKER.

An exceedingly pretty and charming wedding was solemnized this afternoon at Knox Presbyterian Church, at 2.30 o'clock, when the Rev. Mr. Keith joined in the bonds of Holy Matrimony, Miss K. B. Stalker, formerly of Bridge of Earn, Scotland, and Mr. J. Norman Chandler, formerly of Wiltshire, England, before a large number of friends and acquaintances of the couple. Mr. George Keynon, organist of Knox Church, played the wedding march. The bride was beautifully attired in a gown of white satin, with pearl trimming, and wore a veil, caught with lilies of the valley. She carried a bouquet of white carnations, and was attended by Misses Reta and Dorothy Head, who were attired in pretty white embroidery dresses. The bridegroom was ably supported by his cousin, Mr. S. Watts, of Toronto. After the ceremony the couple returned to 111 Stewart street, where a dainty wedding repast was served, after which Mr and Mrs. Chandler left per the C.P.R. 4.38 p.m. for a week's trip to Toronto and other points, after which they will take up residence in Cobalt. The going-away dress of the bride was a suit of grey, with a white hat, and ostrich plume.

Both were the recipients of many beautiful presents.

Port Hope has a calithumpian procession for to-morrow. A lot of the country folk will be on hand.

If the Council had accepted Mr. Munroe's offer for a street flushing electric driven tank there would have been no complaints from the merchants.

PIKE INDIA COMBINATION OILSTONE

It doesn't groove, nor glaze if properly oiled and even dropping won't break it. It's two stones in one—one side coarse, for fast cutting, the other fine, for finishing. Here's convenience and a money saving—two stones at the cost of one. In big machine shops and manual training schools all through the country, this stone is rapidly replacing all others. We guarantee it to you because its makers guarantee it to us. Come in and look one over. This is only one of the many Pike sharpening specialties we sell.

A WONDER WORKER

"It heals like magic," is a favourite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly, stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barbers' itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic, it prevents blood poisoning.

Government Is Returned Liberals Make Gains

Rowell Party Make Advances Throughout the Province Against Heavy Odds and Reduces Many Majorities

REAUME DEFEATED

TORONTO, June 30. — After a hard contest, in which the province evinced more enthusiasm on both sides than for many years, the voters of Ontario returned Sir James Whitney to power with a majority of fifty-seven seats. The latest returns indicate that the standing in the new House will be as follows:—

Conservatives	81
Liberals	26
Labor	1
Independent (Evanturel)	1
Total	111

The standing in the last Legislature was:—

Conservative	85
Liberal	19
Labor	1
Vacant (Prescott)	1
Total	106

One Minister of the Crown was defeated in the person of Hon. J. O. Reaume, Minister of Public Works, who lost the convention nomination in the new riding of Windsor and ran as an Independent Conservative. The straight line candidate, O. E. Fleming, was defeated and the seat went to Rev. J. C. Tolmie.

All the other Ministers were re-elected with increased majorities.

The Liberal gains are: North Brant, South Brant, North Essex, South Essex, North Middlesex, East Ottawa, West Ottawa, West Peterboro, Prince Edward, and South Wellington—10.

One of the most surprising events of the election was the return by the electors of Prescott of Gustave Evanturel, the discredited Liberal who was read out of the party after the sensational episode of last session and who resigned his seat in the House.

HON J. O. REAUME
The Only Minister Who Went Down to Defeat.

For all the number of independent candidates, temperance, labor, socialist, and one anti-temperance, who appeared on nomination day, only two outside of party lines were returned, Evanturel and Allan Studholme (Lab., E. Hamilton).

There will be few changes of importance in the personnel of the House. Four of Mr. Rowell's followers in the last Legislature were defeated at the polls, namely: Dr. McQueen (North Wentworth), Messrs. McCarthy (East Lambton), Anderson (North Huron), Sinclair (South Ontario). Mr. C. Kohler (Haldimand) did not go up for re-election.

The changes on the Ministerial side were much more extensive. Not a few prominent Conservatives retired voluntarily, and members like Messrs. McNaught (North Toronto), Pock (West Peterboro), Norman (Prince Edward), Gaine (Parry Sound), and Ebbs (South Lanark), were defeated by the nominating conventions. Among those rejected at the polls yesterday were: Hon. J. O. Reaume, Minister of Public Works; Messrs. Anderson, South Essex; Westbrook, North Brant; Brewster, South Brant; Champagne and Ellis, Ottawa; and Schofield, South Wellington.

The elected candidates with their approximate majorities are as follows:—

The bill can be brought before the House again in regular order. Irish societies in the United States have protested against it.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Prince Alexander of Teck is to represent King George at the funeral of Archduke Francis Ferdinand, and not Prince Arthur of Connaught, as had been reported.

The Hebrew Christian Alliance of America was organized at a meeting held yesterday in Brooklyn, N.Y. Rev. B. B. Rohold, Toronto, Ont., was elected president.

Father Loiselle, parish priest of Loiselleville, which was formerly Canard River, who was suspended by Bishop Fallon, has been re-instated following his withdrawal of accusations he had made.

From the middle of the cantilever bridge spanning the Reversible falls at St. John, N.B., Mrs. Harold Climo fell 80 feet into the river. She was rescued and will live.

Despite continued expressions of hope that the plans for Mexican mediation will not fail, considerable apprehension was shown yesterday in official quarters at Washington.

When the Liner Campania arrived in New York yesterday, three on board were under the care of the surgeon and a fourth, Mrs. Anna Nichol of Glasgow, who had slashed the others with a pocket knife, was under careful surveillance.

Health and cheerfulness mutually beget each other.—Addison.

RINGWORM ON FACE IN SCALY SPOTS
Around Mouth and Chin, Spread All Over Face in Big Disfiguring Blotches. Burning and Itchy. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Ringworm Disappeared.
Burnt Church, N. B.—"For about four years I was troubled with ringworm on my face. It first made its appearance in little scaly spots around my mouth and chin which would last for about a week, then would disappear and in two or three weeks' time would appear again. As the little scales or scabs came off it would get like a cracked sore which was always increasing in size and eating into the flesh. It was always getting worse until it had spread all over my face in big disfiguring blotches which did not disappear at all. They would have a burning itchy soreness. The ringworm disfigured my face very much for the time being and was always very irritating.

"I tried all the known household remedies I could think of besides some recommended ones without any effect. A friend told me of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and I obtained a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. The first application afforded relief. I washed with the Cuticura Soap and warm water as directed, then applied the Cuticura Ointment. In a week's time the ringworm had entirely disappeared." (Signed) Miss Marjorie E. Morrison, May 26, 1913.
Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. For a liberal free sample of each, with 32-p. book, send post-card to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. D, Boston, U. S. A.

FUTURE IN BALANCE

Austria's Welfare Depends on Life of Emperor

NEW HEIR HAS HARD TASK

VIENNA, June 30.—Since the occurrence of Sunday's tragedy at Sarajevo the opinion has gained ground in authoritative circles here that the future of Austria-Hungary now more than ever depends upon the health of the venerable Emperor Francis Joseph. It was pointed out in high political circles that if the Emperor is permitted to reign only a few years more, everything may continue as usual and Archduke Francis Ferdinand's death will have little lasting material effect upon the foreign domestic affairs of the dual monarchy.

EMPEROR FRANCIS JOSEPH.

It was argued that should a youthful and inexperienced ruler like Archduke Charles Francis Joseph, son of the late Archduke Otto, suddenly be called on to take the reins of government a period of anxiety might supervene.

The young archduke, now heir apparent to the throne, and his wife, who was Princess Zita of Parma, are both extremely popular among all classes of society, and everybody from the Emperor down is said to be prepared to do his utmost to help them in every way to rise to the responsible position so suddenly thrust upon them.

The bodies of the murdered Archduke Francis Ferdinand and the Duchess of Hohenberg are to reach the Austrian capital to-day, and will be buried in the middle of next week at Anstetten, upper Austria, in accordance with the wish of the late heir to the throne.

It has been decided that the bodies are not to lie in state in the court chapel here as the duchess was not regarded as a member of the imperial family. The lying in state therefore will take place either at St. Stephen's Cathedral or the Belvedere Chapel.

A Chance To Reform.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 30.—The comments of the Russian press yesterday on the assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his consort reflect the bitterness of the anti-Austrian sentiment of the Russian nation. Some of the newspapers refer to the assassination as "an opportunity for Austria to change her course," and they declare that the murdered archduke "bore in himself the spark which was to kindle a European conflagration."

Times Foresees Explosion Later.

LONDON, June 30.—The London morning papers editorially express the strongest indignation and sorrow at the manner of Archduke Francis Ferdinand's death. The Telegraph says:

"His death is, we believe, a serious loss to Europe at large, as well as to Austria."

The Times fears that Sunday's events must assuredly add clouds to the political outlook in Austria-Hungary. It thinks that the dual system of Austria and Hungary will probably be strengthened for a time, but that the more the southern Slavs see their hopes recede the greater will be the danger of an ultimate explosion.

Tuftness Had Previous Disaster.

MONTREAL, June 30.—The fact that Chief Officer Alfred Tuftness, who was on the bridge of the collier Storstad when she rammed and sank the Empress of Ireland on May 29, had had a previous and almost similar experience was acknowledged by him yesterday. Mr. Tuftness said he was on a Norwegian collier which rammed and sank an English collier in the North Sea seven years ago. Several lives were lost.

Mr. Tuftness, though reticent about the accident, said a court of inquiry held into the accident exonerated his ship from all blame.

Drowned From Canoe.

WINDERMERE, Ont., June 30.—W. J. Kennedy, milk dealer of 171 Simpson avenue, Toronto, was drowned in the lake here about eight o'clock yesterday afternoon. Mr. Kennedy was only missed about three minutes before the alarm was given. Len Newton, manager of Johnston's boathouse, was the first to miss him, and went out and found his empty canoe with a paddle floating nearby.

LONDON, June 30. — A wireless message to the Main Head Station early yesterday from the Anchor Liner California, which is ashore on Tory Island, stated that the vessel struck at 9.30 o'clock Sunday night in a dense fog. In response to her distress calls the steamer Cassandra and three torpedo boat destroyers rushed to her aid.

The Cassandra and the destroyers, the message stated, experienced some difficulty in locating the Californian, owing to the fog and treacherous nature of the coast. The destroyer Lynx was the first to arrive at the scene of the accident, and by the aid of a searchlight from the Lynx the Cassandra was enabled to approach the California.

The 1,016 passenger on the California commenced disembarking at daybreak, being taken aboard the Cassandra.

SOUTH AFRICANS COMING.

Big Party of Farmers Will Tour Canada and the U. S.

LONDON, June 30.—An extensive tour of Canada and the United States has been arranged for the party of 63 South African farmers, under the leadership of Johannes Adriaan, a member of the Parliament of the Union of South Africa, which recently arrived here. After visiting all parts of the British Isles and Holland the farmers will sail from Liverpool for Quebec.

The members of the party are to be the guests of the Dominion of Canada, and will visit the eastern and western provinces and afterward go to Minneapolis to study grain handling and the elevator system. They will then proceed to Wisconsin to gather ideas on dairy farming, and later to Chicago to inspect the stock yards, ending their tour with a visit to the Department of Agriculture at Washington.

Some of the farmers intend to remain in the United States for a time to study fruit farming in California.

Many Are Penniless.

OTTAWA, June 30.—According to an official report to the Labor Department from its special agent, J. D. McNiven, who investigated the Hillcrest disaster, 86 married men and four widowers, leaving children, lost their lives. The fatherless children number 155.

"PEBLO"
The Glass of Quality
We haven't any doubt but that most people value their eyesight sufficiently to want to take the best care of it. That is why we went to the expense of securing for our Optical Trade the Highest Grade of Lenses that can be made and which we handle exclusively under the trade mark "PEBLO." We believed our patrons would appreciate having their eyeglasses fitted with this superior quality lense, and after two years exclusive use of "PEBLO" Lenses, we are well satisfied with the result, judging by the hundreds of satisfied customers whom we have fitted with these beautiful lenses. It is interesting to know that in spite of the expense of procuring "PEBLO" Lenses the prices to our patrons are no more than when we used other makes of lenses, this being due to the large quantity we buy at a time. We manufacture these "PEBLO" Lenses from the worst "PEBLO" glass, in our own lense grinding department.
Any kind of lense duplicated while you wait, and all work guaranteed.

"THE TERMS OF SURRENDER"

By LOUIS TRACY

There, when calmer thought became possible, he realised that he had seen Nancy's child, a girl now in her twentieth year. She was so like her mother at the same age that there was no possibility of error on his part. The same glory of golden-brown hair, the same changeful eyes of blende Kagoul blue, the same winsome features, the same graceful carriage—he could not be mistaken. And, to make more fierce the fire that was consuming him, he had again found a subtle hint of Marguerite Sinclair in the sprightly maid who had passed him so silently and swiftly. He smiled with a sort of bitter weariness when it dawned on him that this vision would probably control the future course of his life. He was face to face with Destiny again. There was less chance of escape for him now than for the sailor swept from the gale-submerged deck of a tramp steamer in mid-Atlantic, because miracle did sometimes happen at sea; but, where he was conpinioned before he even suspected cunningly that he was always fast cerned, Fate planted her snares so their existence.

"I am fey to-day. I peer into the dim future. Some day, somehow, you will understand that which is hidden from my ken."

He could not comprehend the full meaning of those words yet; but the day of reckoning was at hand. Well, it was better so. Surely the settlement would be final this time!

He was minded to dine in privacy; but he was no coward, and the inclination was dismissed as unworthy. So he dressed with care, reached the crowded dining-room rather late, and was allotted to a small table near a window. In that particular window was a party of six, and among them were Marten and the girl. She raised her eyes when Power entered, and a look of recognition came into them. On her right sat a small, polished, olive-skinned man, who seemed to be more engrossed in her company than she in his. The faces of these three were clearly visible from Power's place; the others, two women and a man, were not so much in evidence.

He strove to catch some of the girl's accents; but she spoke but little, and that in a low tone. She gave him the impression of being among people whom she disliked, but whose presence had to be endured. Once or twice she addressed Marten, and then her manner reminded him more than ever of her mother. To all appearance, father and daughter were wrapped up in each other, and Power knew not whether to rejoice or be sad because of it. Marten looked old and worn. He showed every one of his sixty years. The burden of finance may be even weightier than that of empire.

Power's mind ran back to the night, just twenty years before, when he sat at a table in another hotel and found Nancy Marten gazing at him. Skies and times may change, but not manners. He rah met mother and daughter under precisely similar conditions, save that he was alone now, and a complete stranger to the girl. Marten was so taken up with his friends that he gave no attention to others in the room. Perhaps he had trained himself to that useful habit. At any rate, he glanced Power's way only once, and obviously regarded him as one among the well-dressed throng.

Later, in a lounge where people smoked, chatted, drank coffee, or played bridge to the accompaniment of an excellent band, Power contrived to pass close behind the girl's chair. She was one of the women now, and talking animatedly. Yes, she had her mother's voice! What long dormant chords of memory it touched! How it vibrated through heart and brain! Nancy—dead and yet speaking!

Next morning the car, in chastened mood, bore him smoothly and quickly away through the Hampshire pines and the blossom-laden hedges of Somerset. He reached Dacre's house early in the afternoon, and was somewhat surprised when his friend suggested that they should start forthwith on a rambling tour up the Wye Valley and thus to the lakes by the way of North Wales.

This spirit of unrest was so unlike Dacre's wonted air of repose that it evoked a question.

"I have just come here to escape from the ceaseless rush of things," said Power. "Why do you want to bustle me off so promptly?"

"I thought a change of scene might be good for both of us," was the off hand answer.

"Yet it is only a week since you wrote and reproached me for neglecting the Devon moors. I can slay you with your own quotation. You bade me join you in—

'This other Eden, demi-paradise,
This fortress built by Nature for herself'— and now you would have us cavort along dusty highways to other joys. Why is it?"

"My quotation applied to the whole of this sceptred isle."

"You are quibbling, Dacre, and I think I guess the reason. Have you heard anything of Marten recently?"

His companion did not try to conceal the surprise that leaped into his eyes.

"Your Indians made you a bit of wizard," he said. "I'll tell you now what I meant to hide from you. Marten has rented Lord Valescure's place on the hill yonder, and is due here to-morrow or next day. I heard the name of the new tenant only this morning, and decided that we ought to quit if we want to be happy."

"No. If you'll let me, I'll remain."

"Is it wise?"

"I endured the major wrench last night. Marten and—and his daughter were staying in the same hotel as myself."

"So you have seen her—at last?"

"Yes, and I'll confess my weakness. Having seen her, I wish to speak to her. I admit my folly; but I cannot help it. Somehow—I think—that her mother—would wish it. I'll placate Marten, grovel to him, if I may be allowed to meet her."

"My dear Derry, I've said my say. You ought to have lived two thousand years ago, and Euripides would have immortalized you in a tragedy."

The eyes of the two men clashed; but Power repressed the imminent request for an explanation of that cryptic remark. He dared not ask what Dacre had in mind. His comment might have ben a chance shaft; but it fell dangerously near the forbidden territory of Nancy's close-veiled secret. When next he spoke, it was to give a motorist's account of the mishaps of the road.

A week passed. Dacre's house lay halfway up a wooded comb, or valley, and the Valescure castle stood on a bold tor that itself bluntly into the sea. Unless the occupants of each place were on friendly terms, they might dwell in the same district and not meet once in a year. By taking a rough path they were barely three-quarters of a mile apart; but the only practicable carriage road covered three miles or more. Dacre's interests lay with the fisherfolk at the foot of the comb or among the woods and heather of Dartmoor Forest, rolling up into the clouds behind his abode while the great folk of the castle seldom came his way, unless Lord Valescure happened to be in residence, when the two foregathered often.

But Dacre was right when he hinted at the tragic inevitableness of his friend's life. They had strolled into the rectory for tea, and were chatting with their hostess about a forthcomin hcagryefetit for. (e fx thm arf coming charity fete, when a motor rumbled to the door, and Nancy Marten appeared, a radiant vision in the muslin and flower-decked hat of summer.

"How kind of you to come!" said the rector's wife, rising to greet the girl. "Lady Valescure said she was sure I might write and seek your help for our village revel. She said all sorts of nice things about you, and now I know they are true."

So Power was introduced to "Miss Marten," and the girl gave him one of those shy yet delightfully candid glances which she remembered so well in her mother's eyes.

"Didn't I meet you recently in the corridor of a hotel at Bournemouth?" she asked.

"Yes," he said.

"Then you will be surprised to hear that you rather startled me. I thought you were about to fall, and was on the point of catching your arm when you walked away. Then I saw you had a slight limp, and it was that which had probably caused my stupid notion. Wouldn't you have been tremendously astonished if a giddy young person had clutched you suddenly and implored you not to drop at her feet?"

"Yet I can well imagine any man, especially a younger sprig than myself, being moved to some such act of homage."

She laughed—Nancy again!

"There seems to be no end of men in England who can pay neat compliments to a woman," she said. "But you're not an Englishman, Mr. Power. Aren't you a fellow-countryman of mine?"

"Yes."

"How jolly! People never guess it, but I'm an American; though I can never be President, even if we women get a vote, because I was born in London. But my parents hail from the Silver State."

"Where more gold is produced than in any other state of the Union."

"Then you know Colorado?"

"Yes. Better than that, I knew your mother many years ago, before her marriage."

"You knew my mother—in Colorado—on the ranch! Well!" She turned rapidly to her hostess. "Thank you ever so much for inviting me here to-day. I'll work like a slave for your bazaar. Here is the man I've been aching to meet ever since I was able to talk. Please don't think me rude if I monopolise him all the afternoon. I'm going to take him off to that nice shady seat under the copper beech, and question him until he cries for mercy. . . . Yes, please. Tea, with sugar and milk, and lots of bread and butter, piled high with Devonshire cream and jam—all the good things! Why, you're a veritable fairy princess. Mr. Power met my mother when she was a girl . . . Come along, Mr. Power! No wonder I was inclined to grab you in that corridor. Oh, had I but guessed! I'll never, never distrust intuition again."

"To begin with," said Power, as he walked with her across the springy turf with a laden tray in his hands, "in what way did intuition prompt you?"

"I don't mind telling you at once. I feel I can talk to you as though we had known each other always. I said you rather startled me; but that was just a polite way of saying what I didn't exactly mean. You were examining a picture, and you turned unexpectedly and looked at me. There was an expression in your eyes that gave me a sort of shock, one of those emotional thrills which cannot be described in words. You might have been gazing at the ghost of someone very dear to you. Ah, forgive me if my tongue runs away with me, but I'm really excited. Of course, I understand now. You took me for my mother. And I am like her, am I not?"

"So like that your first impression was right. I did nearly fall. The least push would have toppled me over. It was only the iron law of convention that enabled me to pass on as though nothing unusual had happened."

"Then my mother and you were great friends?"

"Yes."

"You met her long before she was married?"

"Yes."

"Don't say yes, and leave it at that. Tell me things—everything you think I would like to know."

HE ENJOYS HIS MEALS NOW

For He Keeps a "Little Digester" Handy

Mr. Glassco, of Toronto, wrote us on May 18th last:

THE COLEMAN MEDICINE CO., 509 Church St., Toronto

Dear Sirs,—

I wish you would send me another box of your "Little Digesters". All the members of my family have been using them and have obtained the most satisfactory results.

I congratulate you on your success in putting up a tablet for the cure of Indigestion. I suffered for years and tried everything that was recommended to me. Nothing gave me relief, until I was persuaded to try "Little Digesters". Now I never suffer from Indigestion. I enjoy my meals and am not afraid to eat, because I know a "Little Digester" after each meal will digest my food.

I recommend them to all my friends who suffer from Indigestion and would further say that you may publish the above if you wish. I know there are thousands of people suffering from Indigestion who will be glad to know there is a safe and sure cure for them.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) E. S. GLASSCO.

THE TWO AMERICAS.

The relations of the northern and the southern continents of the western hemisphere are certain to become much closer in the future. The opening of the Panama canal will itself markedly help to make them closer, and, great though the benefits of the canal will be to our own country, I believe that they will be, if anything, even greater to the countries of South America. I wish to see the trade between the United States and all South American countries increase, and in such intercourse the first essential is the ability to inspire confidence. It is for this reason that I feel a peculiar national pride in our having twice withdrawn from Cuba and having intervened in Santo Domingo purely for Santo Domingo's advantage. There is no brighter chapter in our history than that which tells of these actions. The United States does not wish the territory of its neighbors. It does wish their confidence.—Theodore Roosevelt to Brazilians.

CHARITY SERMONS.

With malice toward none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right.—Lincoln.

The desire of power in excess caused the angels to fall; the desire of knowledge in excess caused man to fall, but in charity there is no excess; neither can angel or man come to danger by it.—Bacon.

No sound ought to be heard in the church but the healing voice of Christian charity.—Burke.

Cured of Piles and Eczema

By Using Three Boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Abram Buhr, Herbert, Sask., writes.—"I want to say that I was troubled with eczema and piles and suffered greatly from the itching, burning sensations caused by these annoying ailments. I sent for a free sample of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this did me so much good that I bought three boxes more, and after using same was cured of both eczema and piles."

This is the kind of letters we receive daily from people who have been cured of these distressing skin diseases by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. No matter how skeptical you might be, you could not read these letters for many days without concluding that Dr. Chase's Ointment is undoubtedly the most prompt relief and certain cure for these ailments.

If you have doubts send for a free sample box and be convinced. It was by use of a free sample that Mr. Buhr was convinced of the merits of this treatment. For sale at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

He Liquefied Helium.

H. Kamerlingh Onnes, winner of the recently awarded $40,000 Nobel prize for physics in 1913, is a Holland scientist, living at Leyden, where he carries out his experiments in his own laboratory. He spent twelve years before he succeeded in liquefying helium, the last gas which still resisted the greatest cold as yet experimentally produced. In the course of his experiments with helium he obtained a temperature of 271 degrees C. or 2 degrees above the absolute zero, which, according to theory, is the lowest temperature obtainable.

Conquering Typhoid.

Results of anti-typhoid inoculation among the French troops in Algeira and Morocco during 1912 were reported by Professor Vincent at the recent international medical congress in London. In western Morocco, while about 16 per cent among the noninoculated contracted the disease, only one in 5,000 among the inoculated did so.

TO CHECK A COLD

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs S. M. Moore, Shortreed, B.C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Acid Mouth.

An acid condition of the mouth may result from systematic or local causes—the taking of certain medical preparations, indigestion and dyspepsia, particles of food remaining about the teeth, which, with the heat of the mouth, decompose and produce acid; excessive use of sweets, which, fermenting, generate acid; continued use of wines, fruits, etc. Much can be done to alleviate this condition by home treatment. The mouth should be rinsed after each meal and all particles of food removed, and the teeth should always be brushed on retiring at night and upon rising in the morning, care being taken to move the brush with a rotary motion rather than too much across the teeth, as the latter has a tendency to cut or force the gums to recede. This simple treatment will prevent sensitiveness, erosion and decay.

LEADER IS GRATIFIED.

Mr. Rowell Regrets, However, That Gains Were Not Greater.

WOODSTOCK, June 30.—Mr. N. W. Rowell received the results of the election at the Woodstock Young Liberal Club rooms, and, interviewed later in the evening, made the following statement:

"It is gratifying to find that, notwithstanding the whole weight of the Government forces, aided by the organized liquor interests, we have improved our position in the House. For the sake of the policy for which we were fighting I regret that our gains were not numerous. We were greatly handicapped by the short period we had to prepare for the election. It took up all our time to get candidates in the field.

"I desire to thank the electors of the province who gave us their support, and particularly the large body of volunteer workers who have freely given of their time in this contest. We have brought into the political affairs of the province a new spirit of public service, and hundreds of men who have not hitherto taken an active interest in political affairs will undoubtedly do so in the future. This is the guarantee of the ultimate success.

"Of the policy of misrepresentation persistently and systematically pursued in order to mislead the electors as to our position and policy, I shall not speak at present."

ENLIVENED THE PLAY.

Sentiment and Impromptu Humor at a Moving Picture Show.

"Where we went last night," said a frequenter of moving picture shows, "there was a scene in one of the films showing a man and a girl, young lovers, kissing. She was a pretty girl and he was a fine, manly, young fellow, and of course everybody was deeply interested in the picture. But at the precise instant that the lovers' lips met some man in the audience exploded with a gigantic sneeze, whereat the whole house blew up with spontaneous hilarious laughter.

"In this picture scene there was a third figure, that of a man who had seen the lovers meeting and who when he saw them kiss turned away from them to smile. He was, to be sure, smiling over the lovers; but as he looked out on the house at this moment with that smile on his face he seemed like a real man smiling in appreciative understanding of what had just happened in the audience. At the sight of his smiling face the audience again blew up. But, of course, the pictures kept on moving all the time, and in half a minute the audience had once more settled down to look on again at the pictures in the usual quiet."—New York Sun.

DOPED AUTOMOBILES.

Acid Sometimes Used to Put Ginger in Second Hand Cars.

"If you are intending to buy a second hand automobile from a stranger or any one but a reputable dealer, keep an eye open to see that the car is not 'doped,'" said H. Clifford Brokaw, principal of the automobile school of the West Side Young Men's Christian association. "Not long ago a friend told me he had a chance to buy a very good car at a low price. He said he knew it was a good car because it could climb the highest hills on high gear. It could almost jump over a house, he said.

"An investigation showed that the car was old, but that previous to the trial trip it had been doped with picric acid. Picric acid, mixed with gasoline, will give a motor a greatly increased power. A wornout motor can be made to do wonderful stunts by the use of proper proportions of picric acid. Chloroform will have the same effect. Picric acid, however, will ruin the cylinders of the best motor. It will give the car much greater power when first used, but I would not care to buy an automobile in which it had been used."—New York Times.

Milkers and Springers.

The market for milkers and springers was dull and draggy with prices easier, selling from $65 to $85, but few reach the latter figure.

Veal Calves.

The delivery of veal calves was light, which caused prices to be very firm. Choice veals $10 to $10.50; good calves, $9 to $9.50; medium calves, $8 to $8.50; common, $7 to $7.75.

Sheep and Lambs.

There were 634 sheep and lambs on sale. Sheep were about steady, but lambs sold lower.

Sheep, ewes, light, at $6.50 to $6.75; heavy ewes and rams at $4 to $5; spring lambs at $10 to $11.75 per cwt.

Hogs.

Selects fed and watered sold at $8.25 to $8.35.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, June 29.—At the Montreal stock yards, west end market, a weaker feeling, which developed in the market for cattle last week, was again the feature of the market today. Prices for steers and bulls scored a further decline of 15c to 25c per 100 pounds, but cows were steady and unchanged. The market was fairly active and full loads of choice steers sold at $8.50 and picked small lots at $8.75, while full loads, medium to good cows brought from $6.50 to $7 per 100 pounds.

A stronger feeling developed in the market for hogs today, due to the smaller supplies coming forward lately and in sympathy with the rise in prices in the Toronto market at the latter end of last week, consequently prices here scored an advance of 25c to 40c per 100 pounds. Selected lots sold at $8.75 to $9; cows at $6.75 to $7, and stags at $4.25 to $4.50 per 100 pounds weighed off cars.

Freight Advance Decision Delayed.

WASHINGTON, June 29—The five per cent. advance freight rate decision was not handed down Saturday by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Some doubt is now expressed whether it will be announced July 2, as predicted.

It was stated Saturday that the commission may not decide features of the advance rate case at this time, leaving them open for consideration next fall.

Carnegie's Statue Unveiled.

DUNFERMLINE, Scotland, June 29.—Honor was paid to Andrew Carnegie here Saturday when a statue of the "steel King" was unveiled in Pittencrieff Glen, one of the city parks, presented to the municipality in 1903 by Mr. Carnegie, together with an endowment of $2,500,000.

A notable feature of the exercises was the singing by a choir of 500 voices, accompanied by a band, of an anthem, "Let us Praise Famous Men."

Fifty Thousand on Parade.

CHICAGO, June 29. — Fifty thousand men and boys assembled here Saturday to march in the parade of the International Sunday School Association in convention here. Fifty altars were prepared to be carried on the shoulders of the marching men, one at the head of each division. Behind each of the altars was borne an open Bible. A squad of mounted police and an escort of the National Guard was detailed to head the parade.

HOUSEKEEPING or HOMEMAKING

"Their nervous mother makes a fuss over the dirt"

"He wishes that things were just a little different"

SOME ONE has said that the difference between the woman of the south and her sister of the north is in the way in which she regards her vocation in the home. The southern woman is a homekeeper and the northern one a housekeeper. Be that as it may, there is a difference in the work that is not alone confined to Maine or Georgia. In this discussion of the question a woman from the Keystone State has the floor, and is true to her location in striking the golden mean. That is the secret of art and happiness—the golden mean.

If we can emphasize that there is a joy in housekeeping that must be balanced by the business of housekeeping, and that there should be an admixture of the two plus the personality of the woman in the home, then this page will not have been written in vain. Mrs. Mercure has a home at her back, and with her heart and brain has proved that there is a happy medium. She will speak to you about a great profession. If you are a woman of the home, you will profit by the discussion which you are ready to begin.

By Alice S. Mercure

THE ideal by which every woman of whatever age or clime is measured, and has been for generations, is that of a "good housekeeper." Be she ever so beautiful, accomplished, intellectual or gifted, she rises or falls in the estimation of her neighbors, if not of the world, by her ability as a housekeeper. She may acquire fame, may be foremost in the world's affairs, may bring into the world and rear a family of fine, bright children well equipped for the battle of life, may achieve great social success; but her success in any avocation has always been qualified by her reputation as housekeeper. This is not an unfair judgment, since housekeeping is one of woman's two great vocations throughout the ages, a responsibility directly hers, and going hand in hand with the other of child-bearing and rearing. Housekeeping bears so intimately upon the life and welfare of human beings that it is not to be wondered at that those whose responsibility it is should be honored or dishonored according to their success or failure at it. The ideal, however, is one that may be perverted by those who strive to achieve it, for, as with all other ideals, one may acquire the letter but miss the spirit while struggling for success. The letter of housekeeping is the maintenance of a family shelter and the care of the bodily wants of its members. The inner and fine spirit is the well-being, bodily, mentally and spiritually, the health and the happiness of the individual and of the group under the shelter of the family roof. It is thus that housekeeping and homemaking are defined, the spirit depending upon and crowning the letter.

With what infinite patience, courage, fidelity and devotion are millions of women daily and hourly striving to achieve this ideal! And with what glorious results and sad and sorry failures are their efforts rewarded! Success and failure are often so interwoven that the result is not clear, and the woman who seems to fail to achieve a reputation as a good housekeeper may win the crown of "homemaker." The whole world of men and women is pressing on toward its ideals. We long for success and bend every effort to achieve it, but we shall never wholly grasp it if, in our efforts, we have hindered or delayed some one else in his race toward the goal. What shall it profit us women, then, if we become good housekeepers and fail to be good homemakers?

Clean floors and furniture, dishes and beds, hangings and clothes are necessary to good health. Properly cooked food in right proportions for the needs of the body we must have if we are to live and work. But beyond and above all these, we must be comfortable and happy, strengthened and inspired within the four walls of home, if we are to do well our share of the world's work. A good meal will nourish us and strengthen our bodies, but cheerfulness is needed with the meal to aid in digestion. Our houses must be warm and clean to keep us well, but if we cannot work and play in them because it will upset order and make more work, they have missed the very need for which they are maintained. It is not enough that we have a house—we must have a home. What shall it mean, then, if we cook a nourishing, well-balanced meal and spoil the family's digestion by scolding about the spots on the tablecloth? Shall we keep our houses clean for our children and then drive them to the street because they make too much dust and disorder? Why make the living room homelike and attractive if the husband who smokes cannot find his comfort in it and must stand on the porch while enjoying pipe or cigar? Of what use to work hard to keep house well if we make ourselves so tired that we are irritable and cross and the family is glad to get away from home to escape us? We like to see clean windows and well-arranged shades and hangings, but the windows are not fulfilling their proper function if the curtains may never be pulled back to admit the sun or a little face to be pressed against the pane to watch the passers-by. Of what use is a big fireplace if no fire be kindled on the hearth because it makes too much dirt and dust? Why have comfortable chairs and couches if they cannot be used without disarranging the perfect order of the sitting room? We may believe in dustless houses for health's sake, but of what use, pray, is a dustless house if the family may not live in and enjoy it for fear of getting it dusty?

Are you Mrs. Jones or Mrs. Smith or Mrs. Brown? And which do you choose to be? Mrs. Jones has a wide reputation as a good housekeeper. Her house is always in good order and guiltless of a speck of dust. Her windows are always bright, her curtains never disarranged, her bare floors are spotless, her rugs clean, her china, silver and napery beyond reproach, her beds well made and no litter in evidence anywhere. No invading germ can ever find a speck of dust on which to hang his hat, and so he hurries away in search of more congenial surroundings. You will never go to Mrs. Jones' house and find her unprepared for company. Her guest room is in perfect order, her refrigerator well stocked with food and there is cake in the pantry. She may well take pride in her clean, orderly, well-managed house. To be sure she is a nervous, overworked woman; her husband spends a good deal of time at his club, because Mrs. Jones objects to his smoking in the house; the children can never take their friends home because their mother makes such a fuss over the dirt they track in and the disorder and confusion they leave behind them. But Mrs. Jones has the reputation as being the best housekeeper in town; and she secretly despises Mrs. Smith, who lives across the way.

Mrs. Smith has no such reputation as Mrs. Jones enjoys. Her house is always in confusion, and there are no two window shades at the same angle. There is dust on the stairs. The silver needs polishing and the flowers on the desk are withered. She telephones to market, and you may almost always see some member of the family running to the corner store for sugar or baking powder or rice or something else forgotten until the last minute. The house always offers a warm welcome, however. The boys and girls run in and out; their friends are always with them and always asked to stay to meals. Mrs. Smith and the children romp and play and read together and they are the best of friends, and Mr. Smith can smoke, and leave his slippers in the middle of the floor, and bring home company to dinner unannounced. He doesn't, however, often bring men home with him, for he is not always sure of finding things in good order. He wouldn't think of complaining, but he does wish he might always find his socks darned and that he didn't have to hunt for his slippers. The girls wish in an indefinite sort of way that things were just a little different, and the boys feel mortified when they ask a friend to stay and take potluck with them, only to find that the meat didn't come and the dessert was scorched. They all make a joke of it, of course, but the fact remains that no one had quite enough to eat.

Mrs. Brown's house is such a comfortable, pleasant place one always enjoys visiting there. The children have been trained to help their mother and themselves. They hang up their coats and hats and keep their rubbers in the big box in the hall closet. There are bookshelves in the hall where school books are kept and a big settle holds baseball bats, skates and such odds and ends. Rooms in Mrs. Brown's house are simply furnished and easily cleaned with all the labor-saving appliances available—vacuum sweepers, dustless dusters and so on. One daughter attends to the flowers, sees that fresh water is given them every day and washes the vases. One of the boys cleans the fireplace and brings up wood. There are open bookshelves in the living room and a magazine rack on the table so that books and papers are easily found and put away. Mr. Brown always finds a matchbox and a big ash tray at hand, and every night before bed time the living room windows are opened for five minutes to drive out the odor of stale smoke. Once a week there is a special dinner to which two guests may be invited, and the children are allowed to ask a guest to stay to Sunday night supper of sandwiches, cocoa and cake. In case of unexpected company there is an emergency shelf in the storeroom that will yield enough of its treasures to enhance the plain, substantial home dinner. Mrs. Brown and the children read together before bedtime, and they always have a lark with their father on Saturday afternoons. The children cooperate in the work and Mrs. Brown shares their pleasures and interests.

"The golden mean combines comfort and orderliness"

She both keeps house and makes a home. Her house may not be so clean nor in such perfect order as Mrs. Jones' and she occasionally makes a mistake in the dietary. Her children have more responsibility than do Mrs. Smith's, but they are learning the value and dignity of labor. She grasps both the spirit and the letter of her ideal and sacrifices neither one to the other, but makes each enhance the other.

Are you Mrs. Jones or are you Mrs. Smith, or are you, by happy chance, Mrs. Brown?

A GOOD MOTTO

EDWARD EVERETT HALE, in his "Ten Times One Is Ten," gives a rule of the Henry Wadsworth Club, which is one of the guiding thoughts of the People's Institute. It is this:

To look up and not down,
To look forward and not back,
To look out and not in, and
To lend a hand.

Join us in this thought and work. This page is going to help the housekeeper and the homekeeper in doing the things that are set forth in the verse that heads the article. It has been successful so far, and it is going to crown each effort with greater success.

Menus and Recipes From an Expert in Cookery

This department will be in charge of a different instructor every month. The plan will give the housewife the benefit of wide and varied experience, and will present topics of interest to all.

By Frances Stern

Visiting Housekeeper, Boston Provident Association.

ONE of the reasons that people are reading menus is to find something new. One seems to get tired of the old things; but it is as true of food as of anything else, there's nothing new under the sun: new dishes are a combination of the old foods descended from the seeds that were kept by Noah and the animals that went into the ark, two by two. Various nations have taken foodstuffs, combined them into some dish that has stood the test of generations, and whenever one travels into new countries or breaks bread with natives of that country one expects or should enjoy eating the native dish.

It is something fine and splendid to be a CREATOR. And why not of food? Does it not give joy and sustenance to the human being—TWO ESSENTIALS OF LIFE? It is a great and glorious task to continue the Creator's work, and a thousand times a year help to keep the bodies of those we love and cherish alive and efficient to do the world's work.

But it is a tremendous task to plan 365 times three meals a year.

And so we turn to menus to help us to think. In planning the meal the most necessary part is the food we eat; but because we are above the animals, there are other requisites: the food must have its proper setting; the service should be made attractive, thus making the food more appetising.

To simplify and lessen the care of the housekeeper, doilies instead of a tablecloth can be used, and they may be made in the simplest fashion and always be attractive if they are clean and well laundered.

In Germany one may get oilcloth mats with very pretty patterns stamped on them, some resembling damask. For the children's table they are especially useful and are most attractive. Various sizes for the butter plates and tumblers may be had. When Americans know about them, they will be widely used.

Very pretty dishes may be secured for little money, and the young people especially delight in pretty things. A family may buy a stock pattern set by each one being willing to have his or her birthday present a part of it till the set is completed. Odds and ends that are needed can always be picked up cheaply by the one who is alert to the plan of the "pretty table."

Today we have not the space to speak of service, but I want to suggest that the children are willing and charming helpers, and a guest should feel honored to be served by her friend's family rather than by a strange employe.

The dining room should be a living room: by that I mean to have about the people, when they eat, pictures that please, flowers or plants that cheer. So often the room is unsociable, making one feel very much alone on coming down in the morning instead of receiving a friendly greeting. Flowers we do not eat, although in Italy squash blossoms are served, and I had the joy of being at a squash-blossom breakfast, the table artistically decorated with the green vines and yellow flowers, set out under the trees, and then served with squash-blossom omelet.

But if we cannot have flowers to eat, the next best thing is fruit. This course can be planned the day before, placed in the cold pantry (covered), ready to place on the table before the family comes down in the morning.

In this set of menus the conventional idea of setting before you the complete menus for a day or week has not been followed. But in the course of the month all parts of the meals, fruits, cereals, meats, etc., will be written of.

Each Sunday for a month we will devote to the discussion of only one or two courses—vegetables, supper dishes, for example. Each week a table, sometimes two, will be printed, giving the entire variety of that course for forty-nine days. These tables should be cut out and preserved, so that when put together in book form the first line of printing of each table will show above the top of the next table. The result will appear as follows:

A. Fruits.
B. Cereals.
C. Meats.
D. Vegetables.
E. Desserts.
F. Supper dishes.
G. Lunches, drinks, etc.

For a given day of the second week use the dishes preceded by the number "2" on that day; for the third week, those preceded by the number "3," and so on for the remainder. By so doing there will be for each day a balanced ration. If a No. 1 dish for breakfast is used with a No. 4 dish for dinner and a No. 6 dish for supper, the balance may be upset, though not necessarily so.

What to Eat

CONSTANTS FOR EVERY DAY

Bread and butter; drink.

BREAKFAST

Fruit; cereal; additional dish (if man or other member of the family is at hard work).

DINNER

Soup, if desired; or thick soup as substitute for meat dish; meat; vegetables; salad may be substituted for vegetables, or added if income is sufficient; dessert.

SUPPER

If a dish, sauce or dessert, cake, for adults. For children, sauce or dessert, cake.

Fruit

As a general way it may be said that fruits are wholesome, palatable and attractive to the diet. Fresh fruits compare with green vegetables, and are dilute foods, but dried fruits compare with cereals and cooked vegetables.

The principal constituents of fruits are carbohydrates (sugar and starches), and they should be used in a well-balanced diet to supplement other values, and especially to supply mineral constituents. On account of the bulk and roughage, they are valuable in stimulating sluggish intestines.

The government bulletin has divided them into:

Flower fruits (over 80 per cent water)—Strawberries, blackberries, oranges, pineapples.

The fresh fruits out of season, that is, in winter, are too expensive for one of limited income, and such a family as I have in mind in writing this article must rely on dried fruits.

Apple sauce is as good, and even sometimes better, when made from dried or evaporated apples. Various desserts can be made from dried apples. (Refer to later paper.)

Prunes are cheap, and can be used in various ways. One becomes weary of the monotony of STEWED PRUNES, so that the housekeeper must try to vary the breakfast dish of prunes:

Prune gelatin.

Prune gelatin with cream.

Prunes cut up on the cereals.

The cheapest prunes give as much pulp to the pound as the more expensive ones, although the flavor or bouquet is missing.

One cannot be careful enough for the summer in forbidding the overripe, decayed, dirty food, especially berries that are sold at bargain prices.

In the spring before the fresh fruit is in the market and the winter supplies of boxed fruit have gone, the housekeeper can tempt her family with canned fruit from her own closet or, second best, that purchased from the store.

The art of living is controlled by so few people that they rarely begin rejoicing that they are alive before breakfast, but a well-planned, prettily served meal will help to start the day aright—and well begun is half done.

Jellied Prunes

Materials — Prunes, 1-3 pound; cold water, 2 cups; boiling water; cold water, ½ cup; gelatin 2½ pounds; sugar, 1 cup; lemon juice, ¼ cup.

Pick over, wash and soak prunes for several hours in 2 cups cold water; cook in same water until soft. Remove prunes; stone and cut in quarters. To prune water add enough boiling water to make 3 cups. Soak gelatin in ½ cup cold water; dissolve in hot liquid. Add sugar and lemon juice; then strain. Add prunes; mold and chill. Stir twice while cooling, to prevent prunes from settling.

Apricots

When fresh, cook whole or cut in halves and stew in syrup.

When evaporated, soak for one hour before cleaning. Then cover with cold water and soak twenty-four hours. They will take up water equal to their original weight. Cook until plump and tender, and add sugar after taking from stove.

Oatmeal Mush With Apples

Materials — Apples; sugar, 1 cup; water, 1½ cups; oatmeal mush, sugar, cream.

Core apples, leaving large cavities. Pare and cook until soft in syrup made by boiling the sugar and water. Fill cavities with oatmeal mush. Serve with sugar and cream. The syrup should be saved and reused.

VARIOUS RECIPES

Peach Ice Cream

SLICE 1½ pints of peaches, cover with 1 cup of sugar and let stand one hour. Mash and rub through colander. Heat 1½ pints of cream with ½ cup of sugar until dissolved; cool, add 1 teaspoon of vanilla and 1 tablespoon lemon juice and freeze to the consistency of mush, using three parts ice to one part salt, then gradually add the crushed fruit and finish freezing. Stand for an hour or two packed in ice and salt to improve the flavor. Cover well with papers and burlap.

An ice cream freezer is certainly an essential in the home. Ice creams are a wholesome dessert when made under clean conditions and from pure cream or a frozen custard made from good pasteurized milk and eggs. So I have no hesitancy in giving this for Sunday, as with the modern freezer, it can be made in from five to ten minutes and with little or no labor when an ice shave is used for chipping the ice.

Cheese Sandwiches

Mash any soft cream cheese, or combine one-third roquefort and one-third cream cheese and add chopped olives, nuts or pimentos in equal parts; or cream or cottage cheese and chopped parsley or olives makes a fine filling for sandwiches. Much seasoning and salt are required to make these just right, and that must be determined by the one who is making them. Brown or entire wheat bread is the best bread to use with cheese fillings and adds much to food value. Cream the butter before spreading as for a cake, then it will spread evenly. If served plain, do not remove the crust, as that is valuable for chewing, but if wanted in fancy shapes all sorts of cutters are designed for this purpose.

Bread Omelet

Material—Butter, 1 tablespoon; grated bread, ½ cup; eggs, 4; salt, ½ teaspoon; paprika; sweet green pepper, 1 small. Utensils—Steel spider; 2 bowls; egg beater; measuring cup; chopping bowl and knife.

Directions—Prepare the pepper the same as for plain [illegible]. Soak the breadcrumbs in just enough milk to soften. Beat the yolks and whites of the eggs separately. Add to the yolks the seasonings and breadcrumbs. Mix well, very gently fold in the well-beaten whites and the pepper finely chopped. Pour into the spider, leave a moment over the fire. Then cover and set over a very moderate heat for ten minutes. Cut nearly through the center, fold and turn on to a hot platter and serve at once. This omelet is very nice without the pepper, although the tone of the pepper to those who like it is a great addition.

Plain Gingerbread

Material—Molasses, 1 cup; flour, 2½ cups; boiling water, ½ cup; melted butter, 4 teaspoons; soda, 1 teaspoon; ginger, 1½ teaspoons; salt, ½ teaspoon; egg, 1.

Directions—Mix and sift the dry ingredients, add the water to the molasses and combine with the dry mixture, beat well and pour into a cracker box which is already lined with waxed paper. Tie a string or tape around the box to keep it from expanding too much and losing its shape, and bake in a moderate oven 25 minutes. When ready to serve, with a sharp knife cut down through the four corners of the box, lay the sides, ends and paper flat and slice the gingerbread. Throw the box into the wastebasket.

Breadcrumbs

White crumbs, not dried, are best for delicate puddings, etc. Broken bread dried in a moderate oven may be put through the meat chopper and sifted. OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

What the Clock Said

A Medieval Romance

By F. A. MITCHEL

In the year 1370 a holiday was proclaimed in the town of Strassburg. The occasion for rejoicing was the setting up of a clock in a tower built for the purpose, where all citizens could see it and note the time of day. This was the second clock of which we have any account, the first having been placed six years before in a tower in the palace of Charles V. of France. There were no pendulums to these primitive clocks, the regulators being flywheels. But since the flywheel was resisted by the air it acted imperfectly, as any one may see by watching a windmill which turns as fast or as slowly as the current that moves it.

Nevertheless the good people of Strassburg, who had been always obliged to regulate their movements by the sun, which rose very early in summer and late in winter, were delighted at now having something that would divide the day for them, telling them what time to go to work in the morning when to have meals and when to go to bed. The day the clock was put into the tower they feasted from morning till night, and when the hand pointed to the hour of 9, though it was the month of June and still daylight all said their prayers and went to bed for the first time in their lives knowing that they had turned in at a proper hour.

From this time forward everything was regulated by the clock. Before it was set up the mayor of the town had been the ruler, but now his authority was superseded by the clock. With its flywheel influenced by the currents of air that whistled through the tower it rushed along like a drunken man trying to get home, sometimes getting the people up an hour or more ahead of time in the morning or putting them to bed in the middle of the afternoon.

But, though knowledge often creeps, still it moves. The people of Strassburg, having made a beginning by setting up a timepiece, soon found a way to make it serviceable in other respects than by striking the day. The mayor ordered that the clock be the calendar by which all public matters be regulated. If Franz Gotlieb promised to pay Carl Stengel a sum of money in thirty days it meant that when the hour hand of the clock had made the circle of its face thirty times the money would be due. If Hans Bunker drank too much beer and was sentenced for making an unnecessary noise to ten days' imprisonment it meant that the short hand on the clock must rotate ten times before Hans would be free again.

There lived in Strassburg at this time a maiden named Gretchen Borchert, whom everybody loved for her amiable disposition, her beauty and her piety. Gretchen loved Josef Breit, a young carpenter, roofer, mason, well digger—in short, one who did anything required in, on or about the homes of the people of the town. Unfortunately for Gretchen, another girl, Anna Huber, also loved Josef, and, finding that Gretchen was the winner in the matter of Josef's affections, she resorted to a devilish means of putting her rival out of the way. Anna went before the judge of the court and swore that Gretchen was a witch. The accuser named several persons whom Gretchen had bewitched. She swore that she had herself seen Gretchen standing over a well swallowing crooked pins and carrying water in a sieve.

Gretchen was brought before the court for trial. Every one of the persons named by Anna as having been bewitched by Gretchen was found to be a dangerous lunatic. Several witnesses testified that they had seen Gretchen riding over their houses on a broomstick, and a little girl of seven declared that she had seen the culprit sweeping cobwebs from the sky. All this testimony was admitted except that of the last witness, whom the judge considered too young to testify. However, there was quite enough without this to warrant the condemning of Gretchen as a witch, and the judge sentenced her to be burned at the stake. In order that she might have time to cast out the devil that was in her before going to her long home, the day of her execution was fixed at two weeks from her sentence.

Josef, strange to say, was not in the least influenced by all this overwhelming evidence to believe that his sweetheart was a witch. Indeed, he was sure that she was the same lovely girl she had always been. And he knew Anna having tried her best to make him love her, that she had accused her rival of witchcraft, hoping that with Gretchen removed Josef could be won.

Those were superstitious times, as may be inferred from the trial and condemnation of this innocent girl. Josef turned to something more powerful than himself to save his sweetheart. As has been said, the clock had superseded the mayor and all others in authority in Strassburg, so the clock being the most powerful thing Josef had an knowledge of one night, when every one was in bed he knelt at the base of the tower that supported it and prayed to it to tell him how to prevent Gretchen from being burned at the stake.

Whether or not it was the clock that put the idea into Josef's head Josef did not doubt it was the clock, he certainly conceived it while he was on his knees before it asking for help. Rising he went at once to the tower and being an expert at climbing, made his way up to the clock. Once there he set the hands ahead a couple of hours.

The next morning all the people of Strassburg woke up to find that they had overslept themselves and some of them hurried to their daily work without taking time to eat their breakfasts. But not one of them thought of accusing the clock of being wrong. From that time forward for two weeks they found themselves at times getting out of bed too late, at times too early, but it was usually too late. Some of them believed that Gretchen had bewitched the town and they would not return to regular habits until she had been executed.

These persons sent one of their number to the mayor asking him to burn the witch at once without waiting for the appointed date of execution. The mayor told them that the law could not be interfered with. The culprit had been sentenced to be burned on a certain day and if she were not burned on that day the curse of heaven would fall upon the town.

Meanwhile the citizens of Strassburg were starting their day at all sorts of hours. But they were no worse off in this respect than before the clock was set up—that is, in cloudy weather, when the sundial cast no shadow—and when they once got started in the morning the clock pursued a steady course for the rest of the time they were out of bed.

The day before the execution came round a stake was embedded in the ground and fagots arranged about it in such fashion that they would make a hot fire. Most of the people were plunged in sorrow, for they loved Gretchen, and even if she were a witch she might have been bewitched by another, which would not have been her own fault. But all agreed she must not be permitted to bewitch others, and the only way to prevent that was to put her out of the way.

On the morning of the execution the people awoke, according to the clock, at the proper hour, and it was generally presumed that the witch, in view of the early relinquishment of all power to harm human beings, had withdrawn from troubling them. Gretchen was to be burned at noon, and there was to be a holiday to witness the burning. The mayor of Strassburg went to his office early to give his final orders concerning the execution. He found waiting for him Josef Breit, who said to him:

"Most worthy mayor, I have a confession to make. On the night following the sentence of Gretchen Borchert I, believing her to be innocent, knelt at the base of the clock tower and prayed to the clock that if she had been wrongly accused to tell me how to save her, whereupon the clock asked me how many days would elapse before the execution. When I replied that fourteen days must pass, the clock told me to set its hands ahead twenty-four hours during the interval, so that a day would be lost. I did so, and know, O worthy mayor, that yesterday was the day fixed by law for the execution of the witch."

The mayor looked at Josef dumfounded, not speaking for some time; then he said:

"What right had you to tamper with the clock which regulates all our actions?"

"The authority of the clock itself. I have told you I prayed to it that if the girl were innocent it should tell me how to avert her execution. The clock then told me how, by moving its hands, I might lose the day fixed by law from the calendar."

The mayor at once sent for the chief citizens of the town and told them what had happened. Some of them believed Gretchen innocent and some believed her guilty. The former argued that by setting the clock ahead the day fixed for the execution had passed, the latter argued that it had simply changed the day from the one appointed to the one after, but no one contended that the moving of the hands had no effect on the calendar.

So it was that these two factions argued with each other, at first peaceably, each endeavoring to convince the other; then excitedly and with loud voices till at last they came to blows. They fought each other the rest of the morning. Finally Josef went out and, looking at the clock, told them it was long past noon, the hour for the execution. Then the mayor, who had waited to make the contest between the factions a trial of force, which was still in vogue in those days, to decide Gretchen's fate called them to order and said:

"There is every reason to assume that the girl is innocent. In the first place, Josef prayed that he might be instructed only if she were innocent; secondly, I am convinced that if I had permitted the fight to go on those who contended for her innocence would have won; thirdly, we have no wise man with us to tell us what effect the clock has had on the day of execution, whether the day was yesterday, is to day or will be tomorrow. I therefore order that the culprit be set free."

Josef rushed to the jail to impart the good news to Gretchen, who, on receiving it, fell into his arms in a swoon. As soon as the order of the mayor arrived Josef led his sweetheart out into the light of day. Citizens who had heard of the turn the affair had taken stood at the door and lined the street to congratulate their favorite on her escape. They insisted that Josef's and Gretchen's progress be made a wedding procession, and the couple went straight to the church and were married.

"That this can never be.
Another I have vowed to wed

Nothing Personal of Course.

"Aren't some of the hats women wear absurd?"

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne, "and yet when some people put them on they do look so appropriate."

Take your troubles by the hand,

But when they drift to Slumber Land

WAS TROUBLED WITH BOILS AND CARBUNCLES.

There is no more frequent source of illness than that arising from bad blood, for when the blood becomes impure, it is only natural that boils, pimples or some other indication of bad blood should break out of the system.

Boils in themselves are not a dangerous trouble, but still at the same time are very painful, and the only way to get rid of them is to cleanse the blood of the impurities. Cleanse it thoroughly by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters, that old and reliable blood medicine that has been on the market for nearly forty years.

Mr. James Wilds, Plaster Rock, N.B., writes:—"I was greatly troubled a few years ago, with boils and carbuncles, and the doctor told me I was in a bad condition. My appetite failed me, I began to lose strength, and was pretty well run down when one of my friends recommended Burdock Blood Bitters. After using three bottles I began to feel like another man. My troubles soon left me, and to-day I can certainly give Burdock Blood Bitters a high recommendation to my friends."

VOTING WAS HEAVY

Contest Throughout Province the Keenest in Years

GUELPH MAN DROPS DEAD

TORONTO, June 30. — The vigor with which the election was fought throughout Ontario yesterday is attested by the fact that the vote was perhaps the heaviest ever polled in the province. From fragmentary reports now at hand records for high percentage of votes cast were made in nearly every riding.

Gustav Evanturel, who appealed from the condemnation of the Legislature to his constituents, comes back. He headed the poll in Prescott, defeating both Liberal and Conservative candidates. Mr. Evanturel's re-election came as a big surprise. He returns to the Legislature as an independent.

In Toronto the poll was exceptionally large and the Tory metropolis re-iterated what it has done for years—returned a complete Conservative slate. The new faces in the Legislature from Toronto will be Wm. H. Price (Parkdale), Joseph Russell (ex-M. P.) (Riverdale), Mark Irish (Toronto, N.E.), and Thomas Hook (Toronto, S.E.). All, both new and old members, had ample majorities.

Sir Adam Beck Breaks Record.

LONDON, Ont., June 30. — Sir Adam Beck was accorded a record majority by the electors of London yesterday, defeating Dr. W. J. Stevenson, Liberal, by 1,49[illegible] votes. Sir Adam received 4,353 votes, Dr. Stevenson 2,857, and John D. Jacobs, Labor candidate, the third man in the contest, 416. The Minister of Power was given an acclamation in 1911, while in 1908 his majority over J. M. McEvoy, K.C., Liberal, was 1,404. The total number of votes polled yesterday was 7,626. There were 12,050 names on the voters' lists.

Carter Supporter Drops Dead.

GUELPH, June 30. — The Liberal temperance workers of this city held a big celebration last night in honor of the election of Sam Carter. The majority was somewhere in the neighborhood of one hundred, probably a little less, which was somewhat of a surprise even to his most confident supporters.

John Black, an aged retired farmer, of Exton street, this city, could not stand the excitement consequent upon the result of the elections. He was in Samuel Carter's committee rooms when it was announced that Mr. Carter was elected, and without a moment's warning he fell over on the floor and died. Death was due to heart failure.

Kingston Swept By Ross.

KINGSTON, June 30. — Dr. A. E. Ross (Con.) defeated Ald. T. F. Harrison (Lib.) in yesterday's contest by a majority of 1,466. The majority was a great surprise to both sides. All day long it was believed Dr. Ross would have a majority of about 600, but not one of the supporters of Dr. Ross dreamed of such a majority. Ross polled a majority in every subdivision in the city and at the village of Portsmouth as well.

Hamilton Backs Favorites.

HAMILTON, June 30. — In the West riding, Col. Hendrie polled the biggest vote of his career, receiving a majority of 1,571 over Ald. Dr. Davey, the Independent Liberal and Temperance candidate, never seemed dangerous.

In East Hamilton the figures for Allan Studholme were 4,472 while 3,432 votes were polled for Controller Thomas W. Jutten, the Conservative candidate, which gives the Labor candidate a majority of 990, nearly 300 more than he had in the last election.

Close In North Oxford.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., June 30.—N. W. Rowell was yesterday re-elected in North Oxford, but his majority of 560 received in 1911 was reduced to 115. While the city gave H. E. Butler (Con.) a majority, the country went strong for Rowell and the large city majority was overcome, giving the Liberal leader a lead in the riding.

Proudfoot Returned.

GODERICH, June 30.—Centre Huron yesterday returned Wm. Proudfoot with a majority of 316, an increase of 100 over his last election, and had it not been for very inclement weather, which retarded the country vote, it is estimated his majority would have been at least 400. The urban vote was the largest polled for many years.

Overtures For Peace From Turks.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 30.—The Greek reply to the last Turkish note which has been received here is couched in friendly spirit and accepts the proposals of Turkey regarding the exchange of Turkish and Greek property and the appointment of a Graeco-Turkish commission to supervise the arrangement. Greece hopes that the incidents which have disturbed the good relations between the two countries will not recur and declares that Mussulman in Greek territoy are treated on an equality with the other inhabitants.

Health and Beauty Aids

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN

MARGUERITE: You should make up and use this harmless eye-tonic and you will have no further trouble with your eyes: In ½ pint clear water dissolve 1 ounce crystos. Put 2 or 3 drops in each eye twice a day for a while and the smart and ache will entirely disappear. The crystos tonic will give almost instant relief to tired, aching eye-muscles, and its timely use frequently overcomes the need for glasses.

CITY GIRL: Yes, some soaps have a tendency to rob the scalp of all its oil and frequently causing a mild form of eczema. Get from your druggist a small, original package of canthrox and dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water, then pour this mixture on the head slowly and rub well. The thick, cleansing lather will dissolve all dust, dandruff and excess oil and greatly invigorate the scalp and hair roots. Rinsing leaves the scalp immaculately clean, while the hair dries quickly and is greatly enriched in colour and brilliancy. Canthrox shampoos, if used regularly, will correct all scalp troubles and induce the hair to grow in thick and beautiful.

PRISCILLA: The old-fashioned hardene tonic is Nature's best helper, and a course of treatment of this famous blood cleanser and tissue-builder restores strength and vitality to the weak, run-down body. It is easily and cheaply made at home—just dissolve ½ ounce powdered hardene in ½ pint alcohol (not whisky), then add hot water to make a full quart. The dose is a tablespoonful before each meal. This tonic restores lost appetite, builds up and strengthens the body, gives to the skin a clear, healthy glow and guards against bodily ills.

MRS. A. I. M.: To retain the velvety smoothness and healthy tint of the complexion, apply daily a spermax lotion made by dissolving 4 ounces spermax in ½ pint witch hazel or hot water to which is added 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. This protects the perfect complexion and will make a muddy, oily or blotchy skin clear and gloriously beautiful.

MARIE L.: Electric scalp massages will not do as much for your scalp as will a tonic quinsoin hair-tonic, made by adding 1 ounce quinsoin (which you can get at your drug store) to ½ pint alcohol, in which is then poured ½ pint water. Manipulate the scalp thoroughly when you use this tonic and you will be surprised how quickly the dry, scaly condition will disappear. Then, too, this treatment will restore the proper lustre and soft fluffiness to your hair. I unhesitatingly recommend this quinsoin tonic for dandruff, faded, streaky or grey hair, because of the great good it has done for others.

MRS. DE L.: If you are getting too fat mix together 4 ounces parmotis and 1 pint hot water. When dissolved strain and take 1 tablespoonful before meals until weight is where you want it. This is a safe, harmless method of fat reduction and does not depend on dieting or unusual exercising. The parmotis treatment is gentle in action and restores the symmetrical lines to the figure.

EVE: Wrinkles and premature age marks are quickly erased from the skin by the following treatment: Into ½ pint cold water dissolve 1 ounce almosoin and add 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. Let stand one day, then at night apply generously to skin, covering the wrinkles. This protects the surface and stimulates the blood vessels just beneath the skin, and so energizes the starved tissues underneath the creases that they gradually resume their proper size—then the wrinkles or lines will have vanished. As a skin-cleanser and rejuvenator of the complexion the almosoin cream jelly is not equalled. All blemishes, blackheads, skin roughness and sallowness vanish as if by magic.

WHAT HE EXPECTED.

Sir James Says Outcome Did Not Worry Him.

TORONTO, June 30. — "'Twas a glorious victory—just what I expected," was the brief comment of Sir James Whitney last night when asked for a statement for the press.

The Prime Minister left his office early in the afternoon and received the election results at his home by telephone. He followed the returns from each constituency with keen interest and occasional expressions of satisfaction, but manifested no concern at any time as to the outcome. During the latter part of the evening, when most of the returns were in, Sir James was literally deluged by telegrams of congratulation.

Beyond the brief expression quoted, however, Sir James declined to make any pronouncement last night. He retired early and will probably make a more extended statement today.

LORD LANSDOWNE HINTS AT CONCILIATION IN LORDS

Leader of Unionists Admits That Exclusion of Ulster is Not Satisfactory and Indicates Amendments May Be Made.

AGREEMENT SOUGHT

LONDON, July 2.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—"I doubt extremely whether the policy of exclusion on its merits has any real friends." This sentence towards the close of the Marquis of Lansdowne's speech in the Lords' debate is regarded by to-day's papers as significant. The Daily News, one of the principal Liberal organs, says it encourages hope that something deserving the title of settlement will be achieved. The Morning Post fully agrees with Lansdowne, owing to the futility of exclusion, but is still convinced that no amendments could ever make the bill acceptable to the Unionists, and declares their first duty will be to strike it off the statute book.

Lansdowne's speech was subsequently keenly discussed by members of both Houses, says The Standard's lobby correspondent. Although Lord Morley on behalf of the Government gave little hope of peace, Lansdowne's subsequent statement was marked by a moderately conciliatory spirit, and certainly in the estimation of a majority formed a notable contribution towards pacific settlement. The Unionist leader in the Lords was careful even at this late hour to leave open the door to negotiations. It will come as a surprise to most if the leaders do not confer with one another shortly after the committee stage of the amending bill is completed in the Upper House.

When the bill came up yesterday for second reading in the Lords, the Marquis of Lansdowne announced that as Ireland was one vast armed camp, it was necessary to find a way out of the calamity which was threatening. The Unionists, therefore, he said, would give the amending bill a second reading and introduce amendments during the committee stage in regard to the area to be excluded from the operations of the Home Rule bill, the duration of the exclusion and the Government of the excluded area.

The Unionists, he concluded, would not agree to the second reading of the Home Rule bill itself.

Lord Lansdowne added that their action in passing the second reading of the amending bill would be misunderstood and misrepresented in many quarters, but there was no other way by which breathing space could be obtained with the prospects of averting the horrors of civil war. The amending to be introduced in the committee stage would be directed solely to making the bill a really adequate exclusion bill.

"The peers are so fast bound by the meshes of the Parliament Act," he said, "that there is no other course open to them which would be likely to prove effective."

Most of the other speakers were equally conciliatory in tone. A notable exception was Lord Willoughby de Broke, the leader of the "die hards," who moved the rejection of the bill.

The precise effect of the House of Lords' proposed amendments to the Government's amending bill will not be known until the Home Rule bill reaches the committee stage next week, but favorable omens are drawn by the London morning newspaper from the conciliatory tone of the speeches on both sides of the House of Lords yesterday for a renewal of the negotiations between the party leaders, which it is believed will result in an agreement.

The Daily Mail asserts that Premier Asquith's attitude has undergone a modification, and that he now is ready to grant exclusion to Ulster by statute instead of by the ballot.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Prince Alexander of Teck will leave for Canada early in October. He will probably pass the retiring governor in the St. Lawrence.

Mrs. Margaret Hickey, widow, 46 Cartwright street, London, Ont., was found dead in bed Tuesday morning by her daughter. Heart trouble was responsible.

Captain Bojareoglo, a Russian army aviator, was killed yesterday by being thrown to the ground from a great height, owing to a collapse of his monoplane.

At a representative meeting at Blenheim Tuesday steps were taken to have the Hydro-Electric Commission report upon a hydro-radial railway from St. Thomas to Amherstburg.

The French transatlantic steamship La Gascogne went ashore Tuesday on the Portuguese coast. She was on the voyage from Bordeaux to Buenos Ayres. She was floated without difficulty.

Prof. Francis Chvostek of the medical faculty of the Vienna University, and a specialist for internal complaints, was summoned yesterday to proceed to Servia to attend King Peter.

It was officially announced Tuesday that the Servian Government is taking measures against suspicious elements in Servia likely to have been concerned in the assassination at Sarayevo.

BOY GUILTY OF MURDER.

Jack Kong Must Spend His Whole Life In Prison.

VANCOUVER, B.C., July 2.—Declaring that he thought Jack Kong, the Chinese servant who killed Mrs. Chas. Millard and dismembered and burned her body, was guilty of murder instead of the lesser crime of manslaughter which the jury had decided, was the crime, Justice Gregory on Tuesday emphasized his feeling by sentencing the 17-year-old criminal to spend the rest of his life in the penitentiary. Usually a life sentence means twenty-one years, but Kong under the sentence must spend all his years within prison walls. His lordship declared he was unable to see any one redeeming feature, for he regarded the crime as one of peculiar cunning and ferocity.

Slayer of Archduke Had Planned Crime For Some Time

MARTIAL LAW PROCLAIMED

VIENNA, July 2.—The conspiracy against the lives of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and the Duchess of Hohenberg was so well planned that it would have been impossible for them to escape from Bosnia alive, according to some members of the late archduke's suite, who returned here yesterday.

The officials declare that two clockwork bombs were found beneath the table on which luncheon was awaiting the archducal party on their return to the city hall. A similar infernal machine also was discovered in the chimney of the room occupied by the Duchess of Hohenberg at Ilije, a watering place a few miles from Sarayevo, and a woman was caught with seven bombs in her possession.

The bullet which killed the archduke was an explosive one.

It has been ascertained by the authorities that Gavrio Prinsip, the assassin, is the son of the proprietor of an hotel at Sarayevo, and that he has passed his 20th year, so that he may be sentenced to death for the crime.

Paper Publishes Confession.

BUDAPEST, July 2. — The newspaper Az Ujsag publishes yesterday what it declares to be the confession of Gavrio Prinsip, the assassin of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and the Duchess of Hohenberg.

According to this statement Prinsip began to read Anarchistic works while he was a reservist with the colors, with the result that he became an Anarchist and formed a resolution to destroy one of the pillars of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy. When at Belgrade he read of the archduke's intended visit to Sarayevo, he decided to go there and try to kill him. He obtained a revolver and cartridges from a member of one of the revolutionary groups at Belgrade, who, however, he said, was ignorant of the purpose for which it was wanted.

He had at first intended to shoot the archduke as he was driving to the town hall, but decided to await his return. When he saw a woman with the archduke he hesitated for a moment, then fired, but could not tell what was the effect of his shots, because the people closed in on him and struck him. He concluded by saying: "I do not regret what I have done. I am well satisfied because I have accomplished what I desired to do for a long time."

Martial Law Declared.

SARAYEVO, July 2.—Martial law has been proclaimed at Tuzla and Malaj, because of the serious rioting in these towns, where much Servian property has been destroyed.

The preliminary examination by a magistrate yesterday into the assassination of the archduke and his wife, showed that it had been the intention of Prinsip to commit the deed at the time of the manoeuvres at Tarsmi, but the attempt was abandoned owing to the strict military guard which prevented any outsider from approaching the archduke.

There was rioting yesterday also at Arevo and Gubello, in the Stolac district, where Servian churches were stormed and destroyed by Mussulman mobs.

Martial law has been declared throughout Bosnia and Herzgovnia.

Riots Throughout Croatia.

AGRAN, Croatia, July 2. — Anti-Servian demonstrations continued here yesterday when a crowd gathered in front of the town hall and demanded that the mayor return a Servian decoration recently conferred on him.

Another crowd went to the house of the Speaker of the Croatian Diet, who is a Servian, and made a noisy demonstration against him.

Several people were arrested, but later released.

Paris Swelters.

PARIS, July 2.—A heat wave of exceptional intensity is spreading over a large part of France. The highest temperature registered yesterday was 98 at Pochefort. In Paris the temperature reached 93 degrees. Many prostrations are reported.

MINERS ARE ENTOMBED.

Little Hope Entertained For Five Men In Burning Shaft.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., July 2.—With little hope for their rescue five miners are imprisoned in the burning shaft of Sycamore Mine No. 1 of the Sycamore Coal Co., three miles from Williamson, Mingo County. Those imprisoned constitute the night force of the mine and were unable to escape when the mine caught fire shortly before Tuesday midnight. Efforts to reach the men have been futile and the mine is burning fiercely. Dense columns of smoke are being emitted and firemen say there is little chance for the rescue of the imprisoned men.

The entombed miners were believed by Deputy Mine Inspector Lambert to be in a part of the mine not yet reached by the fire. He said they had probably been cut off by the flames, and had taken refuge in a room about a thousand feet from the mouth. If they could live during the day there was some hope of saving them, experienced miners declared.

One hundred men were usually employed in the mine at night, but many of them did not report Tuesday night.

Heroic Life-Saver Honored.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—Presentation of the American Cross of Honor to Coxswain Sidney Harris, of the British Life-Saving Service, was announced yesterday by Thomas Herndon, president of the society. Ambassador Page presented the cross through the Duke of Northumberland, president of the Royal National Lifeboat Institution, which each year designates some here in the United Kingdom to be thus honored.

Madrid Women Riot.

MADRID, July 2.—The disorders caused by the high cost of provisions, which began here Monday, continued actively Tuesday. Bands of housewives demanded that the price of potatoes should be lowered, and their demands not being complied with, they seized many sacks at the market and threw the potatoes into the street.

Skin Peeling Nature's Aid to New Complexion

Ordinary mercolized wax is a natural beautifier. By flecking off the devitalized surface skin, it merely hastens Nature's work. The second skin layer, brought youthful colour produced by capillary circulation. This because the capillaries are thus brought nearer the surface; also because the new skin is unsoiled by sun, wind or dirt. This wax, to be had at any drug store (an ounce will do), is put on nightly like cold cream, washed off mornings with warm water. Its work usually is completed in from seven to ten days, long enough not to show too marked results from day to day, or cause discomfort or detention indoors.

A face bath to remove wrinkles, made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel, is another natural beautifier, since its astringent and tonic properties smooth out wrinkles in accordance with Nature's own process.

Dominion Day is Celebrated by Canadian Colony

PRINCE OF TECK PRESENT

LONDON, July 2.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Dominion Day was generally celebrated by the Canadian colony here. Hon. G. H. and Mrs. Perley gave a reception in the afternoon. The customary dinner in the evening was attended by about 500 guests. Mr. Perley presided and the principal guests were: Prince Alexander of Teck, Colonial Secretary Harcourt, Henri Bourassa, Sir Thomas Skinner, Lord Emmett and John Scanfield, M.P.

Messages of greeting were read from Premier Sir Robert Borden and Sir Charles Tupper.

Mr. Perley, in proposing the toast of the "Dominion," opened his remarks with a graceful reference to the late Lord Strathcona and passed on to review the general conditions in Canada. He claimed that the Dominion had passed through the period of depression as well as any other part of the world. He added:

"I stand up for Canadian business honesty and probity as being as great as anywhere in the world, but at the same time the investor, should exercise his usual wise care and caution

before deciding what he had better invest in. If you buy town lots in outside subdivisions or make purchases of oil shares, you are really entering into a speculation rather than investment, and the country should not be blamed if it turns out wrong. (Cheers.)

Hon. Mr. Perley dealt briefly with the railway situation, citing the recent advances to the C. N. R. and G. T. P. as ample proof of Canada's confidence in her future and her good faith with investors.

"With regard to the future and pessimistic suggestions which I understand are put forward by some here, that our growth has been too rapid, I only wish that everyone could travel through Canada and see the country for himself. Our immense natural resources are still there unaffected by any financial condition. There have been reports lately of lack of employment in Canada, but these reports are a good deal exaggerated. At the same time, we feel for the present that it is not well that any should emigrate without means.

Prince Alexander, in responding, followed his usual practice of reading his speech. In it he briefly reviewed some non-controversial aspects of Canadian life and character, assuring the gathering how eagerly the princess and he looked forward to life in the Dominion.

Henri Bourassa, also responding to the toast, alluded to his connection with the Dominion, and said, in part:

"There are many ways of serving the crown, there are many who thought that the glory and strength of the British Empire rested upon the unity of parties, but I venture to point out that I belong to another school which consider that the greatest glory, the most enduring strength of the British Empire lies in the fact that it first in history found the secret of allowing individual liberty and national aspirations to grow unfettered and free."

The toast of the "chairman" was proposed by Colonial Secretary Harcourt.

Earl of Wemyss Dead.

LONDON, July 2. — The Earl of Wemyss and March, the father of the House of Lords, died Tuesday.

Born in 1818, the Earl of Wemyss was until quite recently considered one of the liveliest members of the British House of Lords. Long after he reached the age of 90 he played an excellent game of golf. At the age of 92 he contracted a second marriage.

The Earl of Wemyss owned about 62,000 acres. His heir is Lord Elcho, who in 1911 married Lady Violent Manners, daughter of the Duke of Rutland.

By LOUIS TRACY

"I may tell you this, without the slightest unfairness to -- to your father. I loved your mother; but I was poor in those days, and dared not ask her to marry me. Then I was sent away to a distant mine—and—we drifted apart. When next I saw her she was a wife. Now, suppose we forget that bit of ancient history—because I hope to become friendly with your father—for your sake."

The girl's eyes were glistening, and she had lost some of her exquisite colour.

She understood, or thought she understood; though she little dreamed what fierce longings, what vain regrets, were surging through the man's inmost core. Her quick intelligence noted certain slight hesitancies in his speech, which the ever-present feminine sense of romance attributed to tender recollections of the bygone days. With ready sympathy, she led him to talk of the ranch, of Bison, even of her grandfather, whom she remembered but vaguely.

Power kept a close guard on his words, and easily focused her interest on topics which could not prove hurtful, even if she repeated the conversation to Marten in its entirety. Once only did their chat veer round to a dangerous quarter.

"You said you saw my mother again after her marriage—where was that?" she asked.

"In Newport, Rhode Island. I went there to buy horses, and we met unexpectedly in a hotel, just as you and I the other evening."

"Was she—was she happy?"

"If course she was happy. She was one of the most beautiful women of her day, and married to a rich man who va certainly devoted to her. She moved in the best society, both in America and in Europe. By the way, her closest friends were the Van Raltens in the States and the Duchess de Brasnes in Paris. Have you ever come across any members of those families?"

"I know Mrs. Van Ralten very well. Her daughter was at school with me at Brussels."

"Then Mr. Marten hardened his heart, and parted from you for a time?"

"Yes. I see now that it was bad for a girl to be always at home or in hotels, with governesses. Fortunately, father had to be away a good deal, in Russia and elsewhere; so I was sent to school, where I was taught what little I know."

This was an unseen shoal safely navigated, and Power took care that Newport was lost sight of. As he and Dacre walked up the valley to their abode, the latter broke a long silence by saying:

"Again I ask, Derry—is it wise?"

"And again I answer that years of suffering entitle one to fleeting pleasure of seeing and speaking to Nancy's daughter."

"But she is Marten's daughter, too, and he may prove difficult."

"Let him. I have fought stronger adversaries, and won through in the end."

Secretary Howard joined them that night. After dinner he inquired if Power had ever had any dealings with Mowlem & Son, a firm of lawyers in New York.

"No," said Power. "The name is not familiar to me."

"Queer thing! A man who represented himself as their London agent called at my hotel yesterday and inquired if it was correct that you were in Devonshire. I said yes, and asked his business. He explained that Mowlem & Son wanted to know, and that was all he could, or would, tell me. I was inclined to believe him."

"I rather fancy not. This fellow seemed to lay stress on your presence here. Besides, the company-promoting crowd have learned long since that you are unapproachable."

"At such a moment one might mention a peak in Darien," laughed Dacre, and the incident lapsed into the limbo of insignificant happenings.

Thenceforth Power met Nancy day after day. The approaching fete supplied the girl with a ready excuse for these regular visits to village and rectory. Power believed, though he did not seek enlightenment, that she had not spoken of him to her father. One day, when she was accompanied by the sleek, olive-skined man he had seen at Bournemouth, she rather avoided him, and he ascertained from an awe-stricken rustic that the stranger was a prince, but of what dynasty his informant could not say.

At their meeting he rallied the girl on her aloofness. She withered him with an indignant glance.

"Come!" she said imperiously, taking him from the schoolhouse in which a committee was assembled, and making for the tiny stone pier which sheltered a small estuary from south-westerly gales.

"I've got to tell you some day, and you may as well know now," she said, with a curious hardness of tone which she had probably acquired from Marten by the trick of association. "You loved my mother, and ought to have married her. If all was nice and providential in the best of all possible worlds, you would have been my father, I'm sure you wouldn't force me to marry a man I detest. That person who came with me yesterday is the high and mighty Principe del Montecastello. I have to marry him, and I hate him!"

Power's face went very pale. His hour had struck. He looked out over a smiling ocean; but the eyes of his soul saw a broken vista of barren hills, snow-crowned and glacier-ribbed, while howling torrents rushed through the depths of ravines choked with the debris of avalanches and rotting pines. His own voice sounded hollow and forlorn in his ears.

"In these days no woman need marry a man she hates," he was saying, aware of a dull effort to ward off a waking nightmare by the spoken word.

"You know better than that," she retorted, with the bitter logic of youth. "What am I to do? The man I love, and would marry if I could, is poor. He is too honourable to—to—— Oh, I don't know what I mean—only this, that a millionaire's daughter can be bought and sold like any other girl, even a princess, when what men call 'important interests' are at stake."

"You say you have chosen another man?" he said brokenly.

"Yes, the dearest boy. Oh, Mr. Power, I wish you knew him! I have faith in you. Perhaps you could help—if only for my dear mother's sake."

She was crying now; but her streaming eyes sought his with wistful confidence.

"Yes. I will help, for your dear mother's sake," he said. "Be brave, and drive away those tears. They—they hurt. I—I saw your mother crying once. Now tell me everything. If I would be of any real assistance, I must know how to shape my efforts."

CHAPTER XIX.
THE SETTLEMENT.

Nancy's pitiful little story was soon told. During the last year she had often met the Honourable Philip Lindsay, second son of an impoverished Scottish peer, and now a lieutenant in a line regiment stationed at Aldershot. They discovered each other, in the first instance, at a hunt ball in Leicestershire, and a simple confusion of names led the man to believe that the pretty girl with the blue eyes was the hired companion of the daughters of the family with whom she was staying. Her friends—like herself, just emancipated from the schoolroom—fostered the deception, which she and they found amusing; but Lindsay's Celtic blood was fired by the knowledge that he had found the one woman in the world he wanted to marry, be she poor as Cinderella. Before the girl realized that the handsome young soldier was not of the carpet-knight type, he was telling her he loved her, and asking her to wait for him till he got his captaincy or secured an adjutant's berth in a territorial battalion, and they would wed.

Of course, there were explanations, and tears, and a good deal of the white-lipped tragedy of youth. Lindsay, like a gallant gentleman, refused to be dubbed a fortune-hunter, and went back to his regiment, where he threw himself into the dissipation of musketry instruction with a cold fury that surprised and gratified his colonel. Then Nancy found that her heart had gone with him, and wrote a tearful request that they might never meet again; whereupon the sprite who controls these affairs brought Marten and his daughter to a grand review at Windsor—and who should be on some notable general's staff but Lieutenant the Honourable Philip Lindsay! After that the veriest tyro in the methods of romance must see that the general would invite the American millionaire to dine with him that evening, and that Lindsay should be allotted to Nancy as her dinner partner.

There were thrills, and flashing looks, stern and wild, with the certain knowledge that he and the girl grew more desperately enamoured of each other than ever.

But this is not the love story of a new Derry and another Nancy; so it may be taken for granted that twenty-four and nineteen were suffering the approved pangs, and were given every opportunity to develop the recognised symptoms. Our real concern lies with a man of middle age, around whom these minor happenings revolved like comets around the sun—itself ever fleeting into stellar depths. Not that Power felt any resemblance to a star of magnitude at that time. Though he never doubted that he was again at the mercy of irresistible forces, dragging him he knew not wither, the simile that presented itself to his mind was that of a log being swept over a cataract. Despite his brave promise to the weeping girl, he had no plan, no hope of successful intervention. He caught at one straw as the swirling current gripped him. This Italian might be a very excellent fellow, and the soldier a bit of knave; then it would be his bounden duty to exhort Nancy to filial obedience, that time-honoured principle productive of so much good and so great evils.

"What is Mr. Lindsay's address?" he inquired.

She told him.

"And is there any real need for present anxiety? You are far too young to think of marriage."

"Father says my mother was wed at twenty. He got rather angry when I retorted that she died at twenty-four. But the real trouble is hat that horrid Giovanni Montecastello is pressing for an engagement. Father spoke of it this morning. No wonder I am in such a rebellious mood!"

"Does Mr. Marten know Lindsay?"

"Yes. He regards him merely as one of the thousand nice young men one meets in London society."

"He is not aware of his attachment for you?"

She raised her hands in horror. Clearly, Hugh Marten was master in his own household. His daughter might be the apple of his eye; but he brooked no interference with his perfected schemes, ven from her.

"At any rate," persisted Power, "he will not compel you to accept Prince Montecastello to-morrow, or next day. Can't you hold out until say, your twentieth birthday?"

"This morning I promised to decide within a month."

"And what did he say?"

"He smiled, and remarked that I chose my words carelessly. Evidently I meant 'accept' when I said 'decide.'"

"Well, then, we have a month. Great things can be achieved in that time. Fortresses which have taken ten years to build have fallen in a day. So be of good cheer. I begin the attack at once."

"Will you please tell me what you intend doing?"

"Firstly, I must see my army, which is composed of one man, Philip Lindsay. Secondly, we must call on the citadel to surrender. Your father is not aware that Mr. Lindsay may be his prospective son-in-law. He must be enlightened."

"There will be an awful row," declared Nancy, unconsciously reverting to the slang of a dismayed schoolgirl.

"The capture of a stronghold is usually accompanied by noise and clamour. What matter, so long as it yields?"

"And afterward?"

"Afterward, like every prudent general, I shall be guided by events. Come, now, we'll go down to the beach, and you shall dab your eyes with salt water."

"Is that a recipe to cure red eyes?"

"It's an excuse for blue ones showing a red tint."

The girl smiled pathetically.

"Somehow," she said, "I feel comforted after a talk with you. You haven't known it, Mr. Power; for I have been forced to conceal my troubles; but every time we meet you send me away in a more assured frame of mind."

She, in turn, did not know that he winced as if she had struck him. Truly, he was paying a heavy reckoning for the frenzy and passion of those far-off days in the Adirondacks, and, worst of all, the seeming ashes of that ardent fire threatened to blaze out anew.

As they walked back to the village they encountered a well-dressed man, a stranger. By this time Power was so thoroughly acquainted with the little hamlet's inhabitants that he recognised some by name and all by sight; but this man was unknown to him.

That evening Howard said, "By the way, you remember an inquiry from Mowlem & Son, New York? The man who made it was in the village to-day. I saw him, soon after Marten and you strolled on to beach."

Power described the stranger. Howard identified him; but the ter was dismissed as a trivial cidence. Indeed, Power had of moment to occupy him. Da appeared, was primed with facts cerning the Principe del Mo tello.

TWO WOMEN TESTIFY

Haliburton, P.E.I.:—"I had a doctor examine me and he said I had falling of the womb, so I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has done me a lot of good. All the bearing-down pains have vanished. I have gained ten pounds in weight, the discharge is all gone, and I feel better than I have for a long time. I think any woman is foolish to suffer as I did for the sake of a few dollars.

"You can use my letter as a testimonial. It may encourage other poor women who suffer as I did to use your Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. Geo. Collicutt, Haliburton, Lot 7, P.E.I.

Read What This Woman Says:

New Moorefield, Ohio.—"I take great pleasure in thanking you for what your Vegetable Compound has done for me. I had bearing down pains, was dizzy and weak, had pains in lower back and could not be upon my feet long enough to get a meal. As long as I laid on my back I would feel better, but when I would get up those bearing down pains would come back, and the doctor said I had female trouble. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was the only medicine that helped me and I have been growing stronger ever since I commenced to take it. I hope it will help other suffering women as it has me. You can use this letter."—Mrs. Cassie Lloyd, New Moorefield, Clark Co., Ohio.

A Triangular Affair

By OSCAR COX

"I say, Tom," said Alan Everett, "I'm in a scrape."

"I don't need to ask what kind of a scrape. You have engaged yourself to two girls and don't know how to get rid of one of them."

"Only partly correct. I have made arrangements to marry each of two girls tomorrow at high noon, and I don't want either of them."

"I told you that if you didn't stop"—

"Cut that out. 'I told you so' never helps matters. I want you to help me get rid of both of these girls."

"Tell one of them that you're going to marry the other and the other that you're going to marry the other one. They'll both be so mad that they'll drop you at once."

"You're off there. I've done that very thing. Each girl has sworn that I shall marry her."

Tom Martindale, the confidant in this case, was a lawyer. He thought awhile, then said:

"I'll tell you what you can do, Alan. You can marry both of them."

"Commit bigamy! Thanks, no. I'm surprised that you, an attorney, should suggest such a course."

"It wouldn't be bigamy if you married them both at the same time."

"How do you make that out?"

"The law reads that no married person with husband or wife living shall marry unless legally divorced. There is no law against a single man marrying a dozen women if he likes or a single woman marrying a dozen men, provided the marriages are performed simultaneously."

Everett's eyes began to open up. "Do you really mean that?" he asked.

"I do."

"By Jove, I believe I'll use it to bluff 'em."

"You might bluff 'em, but in case you didn't succeed in that, you could easily get such a marriage annulled by the courts."

"I'll try it. Will you be my best man? I shall wish you to tell these girls that the marriage will be legal."

"Certainly."

Alan Everett was young, reckless, devil may care—in short, every word denoting such a character pertained to him. His friend Martindale was disposed to humor him in this matter to see what the result would be.

On the morning in question Everett went to the rectory, attended by his best man, a short time before the brides were expected and told the clergyman he desired him to officiate at his marriage. When Miss Louise Anderson arrived he desired that she be shown by a maid into one room and on Miss Charlotte Ashby's coming she was shown into one adjoining. A few minutes after the second arrival folding doors were thrown open, and by another door the rector, the groom and the best man entered.

Each lady arose and advanced to claim Mr. Everett.

"Which is the bride?" asked the minister, looking from one woman to the other with a puzzled expression.

"I!" exclaimed the ladies simultaneously.

The rector looked at Everett for information.

"Both!" exclaimed the second participant.

"That's absurd," said the rector. "You cannot marry two women."

"Thinking there might be some question about that," said Everett, pointing to Martindale, "I have brought my lawyer for my best man."

"Such a marriage would be perfectly legal," said the attorney.

The girls looked at each other with an inquiring expression. What did this mean?

"Very well," said the rector, to whom it was evident something was in the wind to which he was not a party. "If you assure me that you are a lawyer and that such a marriage is legal I presume I have no alternative but to perform the ceremony." Then, casting his eye on a card Martindale handed him, he continued, "I know the senior member of your firm very well."

Everett took position between the two girls, who were standing near each other, and, reaching out, took a hand of each. But the hands were immediately withdrawn.

The rector opened the prayer book. The girls darted glances at each other and looked ready to bolt, but not yet. The clergyman turned the leaves of the prayer book to find the marriage service.

"Proceed, doctor," said Everett, the sign of the absurdity of the situation being a twinkle in his eye.

"Stung!" said Miss Anderson.

"Not at all," said Miss Ashby. "Half of Mr. Everett is better than all of any other man. I'm ready."

"I'm not," said the other bride. "This nonsense has gone far enough. Suppose we have a wedding breakfast without the wedding. For my part, I admit my defeat and am ready to entertain these gentlemen."

"In that case," added Miss Ashby, "it wouldn't do for me to refuse to join you. Suppose we adjourn to the Grigsby inn."

The men, with the exception of the minister, accepted. He remarked that four was company, five a crowd. A very jolly luncheon at the inn followed at the lady's expense, and in less than a year Everett married Miss Ashby, while his friend, Martindale, made a match with Miss Anderson.

STEVENSON'S LAMENT.

A Book He Couldn't Read and the Kind of Story He Wanted.

This, from the "Letters of R. L. Stevenson," shows his aversion to reading one of his own books and the kind of story for which he yearned:

To W. E. Henley: I send you a book which (or I am mistook) will please you—it pleased me. But I do desire a book of adventure—a romance—and no man will get or write me one. Dumas I have read and reread too often; Scott, too, and I am short. I want to hear swords clash. I want a book to begin in a good way—a book, I guess, like "Treasure Island," alas, which I have never read and cannot, though I live to be ninety. I would that some one else had written it! By all that I can learn it is the very book for my complaint. I like the way I hear it opens, and they tell me John Silver is good fun. And to me it is and must ever be a dream unrealized, a book unwritten. Oh, my sighings after romance or even Skeltery, and, oh, the weary age which will produce me neither!

"Chapter I.—The night was dark and cloudy, the ways foul. The single horseman, cloaked and booted, who pursued his way across Willesden common, had not met a traveler when the sound of wheels"—

"Chapter I.—'Yes, sir,' said the old pilot, 'she must have dropped into the bay a little afore dayn. A queer craft she looks.'

"'She shows no colors,' returned the young gentleman musingly.

"'They're a-lowering of a quarter boat, Mr. Mark,' resumed the old salt. 'We shall soon know more of her.'

"'Aye,' replied the young gentleman called Mark, 'and here, Mr. Seadrift, comes your sweet daughter, Nancy, tripping down the cliff.'

"'God bless her kind heart, sir!' ejaculated old Seadrift.

"Chapter I.—The notary, Jean Rosignol, had been summoned to the top of a great house in the Isle St. Louis to make a will, and now, his duties finished, wrapped in a warm roquelaure and with a lantern swinging from one hand, he issued from the mansion on his homeward way. Little did he think what strange adventures were to befall him"—

That is how stories should begin. And I am offered husks instead.

What should be:

The Filibuster's Cache.
Jerry Abershaw.
Blood Money; a Tale.

What is:

Aunt Anne's Tea Cozy.
Mrs. Brierly's Niece.
Society; a Novel.

Neuralgia of the Heart

This Letter Tells of Wonderful Change Effected by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mr. James G. Clark, Fosterville, York County, N.B., writes:—"I have been a great sufferer from what the doctors said was neuralgia of the heart. The pain started in the back of the neck and worked down into the region of the heart. Though I had taken a lot of medicine of one kind and another, I could not get anything to help me until I used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

"When I began this treatment I could not rest in bed, except by sitting upright, on account of the dreadful pains about the heart and the quick, loud beating. The change which Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has made in my condition is wonderful. It has entirely overcome these symptoms, and is making me strong and well. If this statement will help to relieve the suffering of others, you are at liberty to use it."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a true tonic and the greatest of nerve restoratives, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited Toronto.

Extraordinary Forced March.

A wonderful feat of pedestrianism has been performed by sixty-two men of the London Rifle Brigade, who completed a forced march from London to Brighton — fifty-two and a half miles — in the record time of fourteen hours twenty-three minutes, the previous best march having been fifty miles in fifteen and a half hours, made by the Foreign Legion. The men's ages averaged twenty-two years. Not a single one dropped out during the whole distance, although they were in full marching order, carrying overcoat, mess tin, saucepan, frying-pan and plate, pickaxe, shovel, and trench tools, haversack, water-bottle and rations for the night, rifle, etc., a total weight of 46 pounds.

A Novelist's Romance.

Mr. S. R. Crockett, the Scottish novelist, whose death is announced, was fond of relating among his intimates how he met his best of wives. It was his day of early struggle. He had written for a London daily a review of one of George Milner's books. Pleased with the review, which was unsigned, Mr. Milner communicated with the writer of it and invited him eventually to visit his home in Manchester. In time the invitation was accepted. The future novelist of fame fell in love with Miss Milner, and a marriage of perfect happiness was the result.

Only One Movie.

Real Unhappiness.

Gilchap—What's the matter, old man? You look unhappy. Cynics—I am. I'm almost as unhappy as a woman with a secret that nobody wants to know.—London Telegraph.

Make clean work and leave no tags. Allow no delays when you see at a thing do it and be done with it.—Prof. Sarah Blackie.

FREAK GOLF.

Matches Between Ill-Assorted Couples Are Sometimes Played.

In this country other than "straight" golf is rarely played, but in Great Britain various "freak" features have from time to time been added to the game.

A meeting of the famous St. Andrew's Club once ascended Ben Nevis prior to the establishment there of a meteorological station and, from the summit, drove off golf balls in the direction of the tower cliff. The balls remained unmolested on the snow until the summer heat brought them down to a lower altitude, where they were once more played.

A certain McDonald, playing a Barnton, Edinburgh, with a full set of clubs, defeated Massy, whose only club was a cleek, five up and four to play.

Another match wherein a handicap of this sort was introduced was that at the North Surrey links at Northbury. The club professional, Thomson, selected the putter as his implement, while his opponent, a consistently "long drive," and a more than average player, was allowed the use of all his clubs. The professional played brilliantly, when it is considered that with his single club he went around the 18 holes in 81 strokes, as against his adversary's 88.

That a real novice is unwise to back himself to win against an expert, though the latter handicap himself with a billiard cue or a kitchen poker, is evidenced by the following. A working man, who was watching a professional golfer at practice on the Mid-Norfolk links, chanced to observe that he could "do as well as that." Nettled by the criticism, the golfer challenged this man to a match, the latter to use the golfer's driver and the golfer to use the workman's spade and hammer. The critic was badly beaten.

Among the other curious matches was that between a golfer and an archer, the former playing with his usual paraphernalia and the latter with a bow and arrow. Strangely enough, the contest was won by the archer.

At the Brighton and Hove Golf Club some time ago there was staged a curious match, wherein one player used all his clubs and his opponent "drove" solely by "natural means," i.e.: throwing the ball with his arm. As the average course of 18 holes in England is about 5,300 yards, it follows that in order to "get around" in, say, 85 throws, there was required an effort ranging from 62 to 65 yards, not an overwhelming distance, but one demanding a fair amount of stamina to sustain one throughout the round, especially in view of the fact that to hole out every green a number of short throws would be absolutely necessary. Ramsden, the player who threw, lost principally by reason of his unfamiliarity with the course. He did not exceed seven efforts at any hole, while his card showed a return of seven five and one four, striking testimony to his accuracy of aim.

Lincoln's Life Line.

When former Senator Blackburn was a very young man he practiced law for a time in Chicago.

One day in the fifties he was engaged in a case against one of the big lawyers of the city. Blackburn was in straits. He floundered a bit, and a tall, homely man who was reading a newspaper near him gave him a hint. He floundered again, and the tall man gave him another hint.

Then the opposing lawyer jumped up.

"If your honor please," he shouted, "I desire to inquire whether Abraham Lincoln is an attorney of record in this case?"

"I'll answer that," said Mr. Lincoln, the future president. "I am not, but I am too soft hearted to sit here and watch this young man overboard without throwing him a plank!"—Saturday Evening Post.

Peeling Onions For a Living.

The profession of onion peeling is not one that obtains much notice, yet there are at least 500 women in the east end of London earning their living by removing onion skins. With practice they can make 4 or 5 shillings per day. Often they have been peeling since childhood, daughters succeeding mothers. It is not a profession you can learn in one lesson, for the skin must be removed by hand or the onion "juices" and is no use for pickling. The onions are always peeled in water. This is not to save the eyes of the peeler, but is done to keep the onion white.—London Express.

Drumming up Business

WHEN the hot weather comes, wise business men will add to their selling efforts rather than reduce them.

They will do extraordinary things to stimulate trade, and will make their offerings exceptionally attractive as to both kind and price.

The merchants of this community whose business will keep up this summer will solicit business by the most expeditious and least expensive of all known methods—newspaper advertising. Advertising is a drum, an instrument of attention and incitement: a resonant thing that calls to action.

Buyers wait on the call of advertising to spend their money. They look for the summons to them in the columns of their newspapers. The newspaper is the instructor and director of the public. For a merchant to shut his eyes to this fact is costly blindness.

Tell the public of this community about your offerings and service for the summer months. Tempt them in various ways. They have as much money to spend in summer as at other times, and are willing to spend, but they must be shown what to spend on and for.

You can obtain helpful advice on advertising free of cost and without obligation by consulting the Business Department of THE EXAMINER.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Fateful Joke

"So we're the decoration committee, we three; you and Jean and I."

Mrs. Jones stood in the middle of the bare room of the new clubhouse and looked critically at the broad expanse of undecorated wall, then, pulling on her gloves and looking with a teasing smile at Robert Hastings, she went on:

"I see how you managed it, Robert. Nothing like being the son of the president of the club and having anyone you want appointed on your committee. And only last month you and Jean were on the house committee together."

"Fiddlesticks," replied the young man, abruptly. "On my word of honour, I didn't know Jean was on the committee 'till you told me. Come, let's look over these pictures and have them ready to hang."

"Here she is now, the dear!" exclaimed Mrs. Jones, hurrying to meet the newcomer, a frank young girl, whose graceful step and fresh colour declared her athletic distinction. She looked inquiringly at Robert as soon as she was free from Mrs. Jones' embrace.

"Can't help it, Jean. I'm not responsible," said the young man, with an air of indifference, as he arranged the pictures in a row against the wall for inspection.

The clubhouse door swung noiselessly open and the president, Mr. Hastings, entered the room. He was an athletic, white-haired man past middle age, whose pleasant, frank eyes and simple smile always brought the light into Jean's girlish face.

"This is good," he said, laying a fatherly hand on her shoulder. "You and Bob are doing good teamwork again. How you have improved the place, Mrs. Jones. A fire there on the hearth, these pictures in place and we'll be shipshape."

"I say, Mrs. Jones," said Robert, holding up a framed photograph of a placid-middle-aged man for inspection, "where does this go?"

"Oh, be sure to put that in the best place," Mrs. Jones answered. "Not that Mr. Thompson was a whit better president than you, Mr. Hastings, for he wasn't. Here, Robert, call the steward to do that. You'll certainly break your neck or smash your thumbs. Oh, well, all right. There! That's a fine place for Mr. Thompson—right opposite the door.

"Such a way as that man had, too. You remember, don't you, Mr. Hastings? He could make anyone do anything he wanted them to. Diplomacy, I suppose you'd call it, but we always called it 'Thompson tact.'"

"I remember when my husband—and a stubborn man he is, too—had charge of the tennis courts when the club started. He was bound there should be three turf courts and only one dirt one. Fancy. Well, everybody was excited about it, and he was going right ahead with his own notion. Then, one day, Mr. Thompson smiled and said that he wanted four turf courts and didn't want any other at all.

"Everyone was thunderstruck and Mr. Thompson insisted 'till my husband forgot all about what he had said in the beginning, and read up on dirt courts till he was a regular expert and then Mr. Thompson gradually, just as if he was being convinced, let my husband argue him over."

Here Mrs. Jones laughed. "Mr. Jones never said another word about the three turf courts he had wanted, and the thing went through just as everyone wanted it." Here she lowered her voice and whispered, "And he doesn't know to this day that Mr. Thompson was just using tact."

A few minutes later the work of the committee was completed, and Jean was the first to leave. As Hastings saw the girl's face through the door with the wind in her hair, he suddenly remarked: "Oh, Bob, go and ask Jean to have dinner with us to-night. Your mother asked me to, and I forgot."

A momentary protest lingered on the young man's lips. Then he climbed down from his ladder and with deliberation took his hat and swung out of the clubhouse. He walked slowly down the path to the country road.

"Got a dinner date, to-night, Jean?" he asked, catching up with the girl. "Because, if you haven't and you are so disposed, you are requested to come over to the Hastings and, according to my recent considerations, I am inclined to think that you had better come. In fact," he said, looking directly at her, "I've an idea. Now, listen."

"Oh, you needn't ask me, Robert. We settled that definitely the other day, and I wouldn't do anything to mislead your father or let him think——"

"That either of us cared a fig," Robert finished for her. "But listen. You heard what Mrs. Jones said about 'Thompson Tact.' How would a little of it work for us? If we pretend that we care—both of us—just for a little while, and father begins to think that I'm actually in love with you, he'll probably get over that crazy idea about our marrying each other out of his head."

"I see," said Jean, meditatively. "Perhaps—but," she added, with quick interest, "what would we have to do?"

"Well, I'd have to call on you, say, about three evenings a week. You can just go on doing anything you want to, and I could read. Put me in the garret, so long as you let me stay in the house. And then I must always be anxious to have you over and be perfectly delightful when father asks me to go places with you, he'll probably get over that anything, Jean. Just let go a bit, and I'll give you points."

"So, then, I'm to come over to dinner to-night?"

"Yes, and I'll have to call for you."

"But, Robert, are you going to let your father think we're engaged?"

"Might as well," answered the young man. "There's no point in doing it half way."

That night after the other guests at the Hastings' house had left, Robert stood talking in the hall with Jean Gilpin, and as his father watched the young girl smiling into the young man's face and saw his son gathering the folds of her evening cape around her. Robert whispered, "I didn't imagine you could look like that, Jean. You're wonderful."

As Robert seized his hat to take her home his father's face showed a look of disapproval. "I'll take Jean home to-night, Robert," he said. "I have an errand, and there's no use of our both going."

But Robert insisted, and Jean looked entreatingly at him. So the two men, father and son, took the girl home. As they left her a few minutes later Robert held her hand at least three times as long as he had ever held a girl's hand in his life.

"Jean and Robert kept their agreement almost a week, and so successful had it proved at the outset that he called every evening, retiring, to be sure, to the seclusion of an available sitting room, where, with his pipe and books, he had passed the time free from Jean's interruption, but not entirely to his own satisfaction. He was leaving after the fifth call, going quietly through the hall to the front door at the stroke of 11, as he had done on previous evenings, when he encountered Jean waiting for him.

"Good night, Robert," she said, shaking hands with him, and then, quicqly taking her hand from him, she looked at him with flushed cheeks.

"Don't you suppose we've played this sort of thing long enough? our father has been entirely converted, hasn't he?" she asked.

"Why, yes, Jean, he has," the young man said, hastily. "The fact is, he forbade my coming here any more. Then, when I said something about our being engaged, as we agreed, he was perfectly frantic. He barely spoke to me this morning, and he said he'd call on your father if I didn't break it at once."

When the Liver Gets Torpid

Mrs. C. L. Cook, 246 Tenth street, Brandon, Man., writes:—"I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for the last four years for liver trouble, and can say that I have had great satisfaction and help from them. I find that I do not need any doctor if I use them when the liver gets torpid, and believe that they are exactly suited for my case. My husband has used them for kidney trouble with good results, and my daughter in Winnipeg has been helped a great deal by the use of these pills. We say we can't keep house without them, and have cheated the doctors here out of a good many visits. I think Dr. Chase's medicines are just the thing, and have recommended them to many people who have used them with good results."

By keeping the liver active and the bowels regular Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills prevent and cure such disorders as biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and headache. One pill a dose, 25c a box, 5 for $1.00; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

TUMOR IN THE STOMACH

Completely Removed When She Took "Fruit-a-tives"

NEWBURY, ONT., April 4th, 1913.

"Some years ago, I was sick in bed, and thought I was going to die. I had a growth in my stomach, which the doctors said was a Tumor and they said that the only thing to do was to go to the hospital and have the tumor cut out. I dreaded an operation although both doctors said it was the only cure. I said I would die before being operated on.

At this time, my mother in Alvinston sent me some "Fruit-a-tives" and induced me to try them as she had heard of another woman who had been cured of a similar growth in the stomach by taking "Fruit-a-tives".

To please my mother, I began to take "Fruit-a-tives" with the happy result that they cured me. I have not been to see a doctor since and my health is first class.

I recommend "Fruit-a-tives" every time I get a chance and I will be glad to have you publish this letter as some other woman may now be a sufferer from the same trouble and "Fruit-a-tives" will cure her" MRS. A. McDONALD.

WILL WIDEN ENQUIRY.

Judge McKeown Makes Important Ruling In New Brunswick.

FREDERICTON, N.B., July 2.—Judge McKeown made an important ruling Tuesday during the inquiry into the cost of the St. John Valley Railway Co. and the charges against Premier Flemming.

The occasion came somewhat unexpectedly to all concerned in the enquiry. Hermann Corbett, a member of the firm of James H. Corbett & Son, contractors upon the Valley Railway, was about closing his testimony when Mr. Carvell asked him where his father was. One question after another in rapid succession concerning the man whom Mr. Dugal charged with having paid Premier Flemming $10,000 in order to obtain his contract on the railway, aroused the objections of the Premier's counsel.

In the course of the discussion, Chairman McKeown laid down the broad principle that any person who was doing business with the province of New Brunswick should appear and give evidence if he was required to do so.

Commissioner Fisher took an equally firm stand that the public interest demanded that the facts should be got at.

Raced With Pirates.

SARNIA, July 2. — The River St. Clair was the scene of an exciting race yesterday between a Port Huron tug, with police of that city on board, and two river pirates in a rowboat. The pirates managed to gain the shore and escaped, but the rowboat and a quantity of stolen copper were recovered.

MAY ATTACK CAPITAL.

Albanian Rebels Secure Victory Over Government Troops.

DURAZZO, Albania, July 2. — A force of Albanian Government troops, which had remained loyal to Prince William, was defeated by the insurgent Albanian Mussulman tribesmen at Malkuch, a little to the north of Durazzo on Sunday, but the news was suppressed until yesterday. The Government troops under the command of Prenk Bib Doda were compelled to retire to Ishmi, near the coast between Durazzo and Alessio.

The defeat and flight of the loyal troops are attributed in Government circles here to foreign influences and also to the fact that Prenk Bib Doda's men had dispersed into small bodies and gone on pillaging expeditions on their own account.

It is feared by the authorities here that the rebels are now concentrating their forces preparatory to making another attack on the capital.

WHEELING, W. Va., July 2.—West Virginia entered the column of prohibition states midnight June 30, and yesterday its residents were trying to adjust themselves to the new conditions imposed by the Yost Act, said to be one of the most drastic prohibitory measures ever enacted in the United States.

"For rent" signs are in windows of nearly six hundred buildings throughout the state where Tuesday intoxicating liquors were sold in abundance, give mute evidence of the change wrought by the new law. Not a liquor sign or advertisement can be seen in the important cities and towns.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, JULY 2, 1914.

Another Fatal Accident At Dangerous Crossing

James Cowie (Cow) of Hiawatha Cut in Two, Elmer Liddel Seriously Injured at G.T.R. Crossing on Boundary Road.

INQUEST BEING HELD

James Cowie, who resided with his mother-in-law, Mrs. John Hagerman, of Dickson street, was killed instantaneously, and Elmer Liddell, 164 Aylmer street, sustained a fractured knee, when the buggy in which they were driving collided with the 11:45 a.m. Port Hope train yesterday at the crossing on the boundary south of the Catholic cemetery. The accident happened at 12:15, the train being a little late.

The two men were driving southeast across the track and intended, it seems to go to Port Hope, in which town the wife of the deceased was visiting. As they descended the incline directly approaching the G.T.R. crossing, however, the foremost engine (the express was a double-header) struck the hind wheels of the buggy. Cowie was thrown to the track and his body was cleanly severed in two parts. When the last coach had passed and a hasty examination of the results of the accident was made, the head and shoulders of the unfortunate man were found about fifty yards from the spot where the rest of the body lay. An eye witness stated that Liddell either jumped, or was thrown on the engine's pilot. In any case, he escaped with a fractured knee and a few bruises. His injuries received the immediate attention of Dr. McCullough, who was one of the passengers, and he was afterwards attended by Dr. Neal. Cowie was holding the reins when the accident occurred and naturally sat upon the right side, nearest the engine. The train was in charge of Conductor McCarthy and the engines were run by Engineers Lamb and Hutchinson.

Awaited His Coming.

Mr. Cowie's home is in Hiawatha. Until recently he lived at 408 Sherbrooke street and at the time of his death in Dickson street as stated above. His death is rendered particularly pathetic by the fact that only a month or so ago, two of his children died of diphtheria. His wife, with her uncle, Mr. Sherry, awaited his coming at Port Hope, and were even at the station when the train arrived. On being informed of the fatality they boarded the next train for Peterborough. Cowie's mother still lives at Hiawatha, and in addition to his wife, he is survived by two infant daughters, and a brother, Henry.

The unfortunate man was finely proportioned and muscular, and was under forty years of age. He was employed at the Matthews-Laing packing house, and it is said that he was capable of catching and holding for the knife four hundred pigs in an hour, an achievement accounted by men in the business as one of no mean order.

It will, perhaps, be remembered that the brother of Elmer Liddell was killed on the C.P.R. on the 24th of May, one year ago.

Inquest Opened.

Immediately after the accident the remains were removed to Comstock's undertaking establishment. The horse, which belonged to Mr. A. Kennedy, escaped uninjured. At 8 o'clock last evening Coroner Greer opened an inquest at Comstock's and after the jury were sworn in and the remains viewed, the inquest was adjourned until Friday evening at 8 o'clock when several witnesses will be called.

The following jurymen were sworn in: John White (foreman), Adelard Guerin, Robert Begley, William Irving, Andrew Forrest, Thomas McCabe, David Mason, Thomas Holyman, William J. Outram, John Casey Masterson, Joseph Metheral and Dennis Corkery. The jury will visit the scene of the accident to-morrow evening in order to gain some knowledge of the spot before the witnesses are called.

Mr. McNab, the G.T.R. Station Agent, when interviewed last evening, could not give any definite statement for the engineers could not leave the train and no report had up to that time been received. He stated, however, that the train was moving in accordance with the rules with regard to speed within the city limits.

The buggy was broken into fragments and that both men were not killed is regarded as little short of a miracle, for the first engine struck the vehicle practically in the centre of the right side.

Funeral on Saturday.

The body of the deceased will be conveyed to his mother-in-law's residence on Dickson street this evening and the funeral will takep lace on Saturday afternoon to the Little Lake cemetery.

Mr. McNab interviewed, again this morning, said that he had not seen Engineer Lamb, and that the conductor had reported direct to headquarters. He therefore knew the story only as related by others.

MAY BE TROUBLE ON 12th OF JULY

Situation in Part of Ireland Portends Clashes Between Factions Unless Situation is Relieved

ADHERENTS SAY SO

Examiner Special:

BELFAST, July 2. — Special cable.)—Fears that July 12th of this year will see an open outbreak, and serious bloodshed in a conflict between the Natoinalist and Ulster volunteers seemed to be more justified than ever to-day, when armed volunbers of both sides paraded the streets unmolested by the police. They did not meet, their leaders wisely directing them in different sections of the city. It is understood that the police have orders from the government in London, not to interfere with either party, so long as there is no fighting. It is openly stated by adherents of both sides that something is bound to happen on Orangemen's day unless some definite agreement is reached before then. Unionist volunteers have orders to resist with bullets any attempt to disarm them.

NEW DANCES AT CHEMONG PARK

The opening dance of the season at Chemong Park under the auspices of the Chemong Regatta Club, was held in the Pavilion last night, and was a fine success. A large number of young people motored out from the city and spent a most enjoyable evening. The new dances, the hesitation waltz, the one-step, and other up-to-the-minute dances were much in evidence as done by various couples and are becoming more popular than the two-step and waltz. Asa Huycke's orchestra played delightful music, and Mr. Huycke has been engaged for the season as the Regatta Club are going to hold a dance every Thursday night. No doubt these weekly dances will become even more popular than they were last season.

The Milkmen's Annual Picnic Was A Great Success

The Examiner has been furnished with a short report of the annual excursion and picnic of the Milkmen, who purvey excellent milk for the people of Peterborough. Like all other undertakings of its kind it was a great success in every way.

The good steamer Stoney Lake last Saturday took a big, joyous, and happy party down to Jubilee Point, where after a generous picnic dinner an exciting list of sports and games was run off, under the capable management of the officials, headed by Mr Wm. Dummitt, President of the Milkmen's Association:

Married Men's Race—H. Sanderson C. Dummitt, J. Bray.

Single Men's Race — W. Hattrick, R. Spears, A. Armstrong.

Boys' Race — Austin O'Brien, M. Sheehey, — Milburn.

Girls' Race—A. Milburn, M Sedgwick, M. Blodgett.

Women's Race — Mrs. McCann, Miss Fenwick, Mrs. P. Bade, Mrs. Blodgett

200 yards' race— — Hattrick, — Spears.

Threelegged-race — Sanderson and Spears.

Hop, step and jump—M. Hattrick, Austin O'Brien, M. Sheehey

Step dance — Mrs. John O'Brien, Ray Pearson.

Dancing, to the music of an excellent orchestra, was enjoyed at the pavilion at the Park, and on the steamer on the outward and home voyage. The picnic was successful in every way, marked by the greatest enjoyment, and altogether excellently managed.

OCCUPANTS HAD NARROW ESCAPE

Yesterday Afternoon When Seven-Passenger Touring Car Turned Turtle Between Port Hope and Cobourg.

LOCAL MEN AIDED

A motor accident in which eight young people escaped injury by a miracle, occurred yesterday afternoon about half past four, between Port Hope and Cobourg. Eight young people, including some students from T. C. S., were motoring back from Cobourg to Port Hope, and were going about twenty miles an hour when the accident occurred. The back wheels of the machine, which was a Cadillac, skidded to such an extent Cadillac, skidded to such an extent on the road, imprisoning the occupants under the heavy body. Mr. Gillespie Stewart, a local young man, and a number of other motorists, saw the accident, the nature of which rendered it improbable that any of the party in the overturned car would escape injury. After considerable effort on the part of other autoists who drove up and those already on the scene, the overturned car was righted, and it was found that not one of the eight were very badly injured. One of the young ladies in the car fainted, owing to the shock and the experience, but none were injured to any extent. It is thought that the fact that the top of the car was up undoubtedly saved the occupants of the car from being crushed to death, or very badly hurt, as the machine turned over pinning them under it, when the back wheels skidded.

BOB DIBBLE WON HIS FIRST RACE

Special to The Examiner:

HENLEY, Eng., July 2.—R. Dibble, of the Don Rowing Club, Toronto, to-day won his first elimination race for the Diamond sculls. Dibble is considered here to have an excellent chance for the finals, and much American money is being placed on him.

Knife Played Prominent Part in Encounter

Several accidents occurred and injuries of a minor character were sustained at the Port Hope celebrations yesterday. At 1.30 p.m. a man under the influence of liquor, at the G.T.R. Junction, presented a face which had been decorated with a cut over the eye, another on the cheek, two teeth missing, blood streaming from the eye mouth and nostrils, and other bruises as the result of a brawl, in which he came out second best. The work was that undertaken by an Indian, who, besides using his fists, brought a knife into account, after which he made a bee-line up the track. No one pursued him.

At 5.30 p.m., just above the Queen's Hotel, a pedestrian who was crossing the road, found himsef in an awkward predicament, between two automobiles, which were coming in different directions, at a fair rate of speed. While endeavouring to make a safe crossing, he was knocked down by one of the cars, but was not seriously injured, judging by the complimentary remarks he passed to the driver of the car, after he had brushed the mud off his clothes.

Romaine Street Man Seems Indignant

The following letter has been received from a Romaine Street resident:

Dear Sir,—I would like to know when our City Fathers are going to fix up Romaine street. It and George street from Lake street to Romaine are a disgrace to the south end, and have been this way now for five or six weeks. Is it not time it was fixed up? There are lots of men out of work, and it would help them a little, and if it is not fixed soon it will be the talk of the city after to-day, there having been so many people down this way. I think at the best, Romaine street is going to have the only underground sidewalk in Ontario, if not in Canada, for the street car tracks are a lot higher than the sidewalk. So I would like to see it fixed to see what it will look like. So, thanking you again, Mr. Editor, from one that thinks it is time something WAS DONE.

P.S.—I see that Alderman Saunders has a nice road in front of his place. Now how is that, and the rest of the street is on the bum for years, both east and west of the little bit that was fixed this spring.

Royal Victims and their Children—Archduke Ferdinand and the Duchess who were assassinated. The children are barred from the succession as the marriage was morganatic. The Duchess was formerly a governess in the Royal family. A young Servian student killed the heir apparent and his wife in the Bosnian Capital after a bomb had failed. The murder was said to be an act of revenge.

LEVEL CROSSING ON MONAGHAN ROAD IS A DANGER TO TRAFFIC

The harvest of fatalities at the G.T.R. crossing on the Monaghan road, south of Romaine Street, must impress the authorities with the fact that there is a serious element of danger to traffic at this point. Vehicles going south approach the crossing blindly. On the east or right hand side there is a sharp bend in the line which is hidden from the highway by a bluff, the foot of which the Port Hope railway skirts. In addition to this dangerous condition there is a sharp declivity in the road which the G.T.R. traverses half way between the highest and lowest levels. This natural formation makes it difficult, not only to see a train approaching from the east, but an automobile or horse and cariage would have the greatest difficulty to draw up before crossing the rails. In fact, a warning whistle is an incentive to hurry across the tracks when the descent of this hill has been begun. Traffic along this road is steadily increasing, and the time is near at hand when the Street Railway system will be extended north to Crawford's Grove. However, to file up reasons for an investigation of traffic conditions at this locality is unnecessary in the light of the list of accidents and very near accidents which have been reported from this crossing. The particular remedy is not the present concern, but the holiday fatality should arouse those in authority to a realization of their responsibilities. The North Monaghan and City Councils have sufficient evidence to support any demands for protection at this crossing. Peterborough is reaching a population which increases the menace of any level crossing, but this one in particular is a traffic trap and should no longer be tolerated.

ENTRANCE REPORTS IN TEN DAYS

Local Board Finishes Its Work and Results Have Been Forwarded to the Department

The Local Entrance Board has finished its work and the results have been forwarded to the Education Department for approval of the Minister.

As soon as the Secretary is authorized by the Education Department, the list of successful candidates will be published, and the marks of the unsuccessful candidates will be sent them by post.

It will probably be a couple of weeks before the Secretary will be authorized to do this work. In the meantime no information can be given candidates as the regulations state—"Under no circumstances shall any information whatever, concerning the results, be made public until the Secretary of the Board has been so authorized by the Minister."

EXCURSIONISTS PRAISE THE STEAMER SERVICE

Of the Stoney Lake Navigation Company—Dominion Day Crowd Well Handled

The "Steamer Empress," one of the fleet of the Stoney Lake Navigation Company, carried a great many excursionists from Peterborough on Dominion Day, and handled the crowds in a manner that elicited praise for good management.

The "Empress" took fully two hundred excursionists to the Lake on the morning trip, had was delayed by the train being over half an hour late, on account of poor ticket service at the Peterborough Station. With skilful handling, the steamer made up the time, landing its freight and passengers all over the route, from Clear Lake to Burleigh and up to the head of Stoney Lake, and bringing her crowd back to Lakefield in time for the evening train to Peterborough. Captain Reynolds and Purser Holland work like clock-work throughout the many difficult stops and calls, and their uniform good judgment and hustle were appreciated by the excursionists.

LOCAL TALENT AT BAILIEBORO.

Miss Stewart, of Cobourg; Mr. C. E. Coleman, and Master Sam Whitehouse, of the city, had a large share in the programme at the garden party held in the grounds of Christ Church on Tuesday evening. Master Whitehouse's sweet voice was heard to advantage, and Mr. Coleman was in a very happy mood, and all his numbers were encored.

INJURED LAST NIGHT DIED IN HOSPITAL SOME HOURS LATER

FELL FROM ROOF BROKE HIS ARM

Mr. Robert Dobbin of North Monaghan Received Painful Injury at Barn Raising Tuesday Afternoon.

WAS RATHER LUCKY

Robert Dobbin, a well-known resident of North Monaghan Township, was the victim of an accident on Tuesday afternoon, about 3.30 o'clock, in which he sustained a broken arm, and was bodly shaken up and bruised.

Under the circumstances, it is fortunate that his injuries were not of a more serious nature, as he fell from the roof of a barn to the earth, lighting on his shoulder. It seems that Mr. Dobbin, on Tuesday afternoon was participating in a barn raising at the home of Mr. Harold Snowdon, North Monaghan, and was assisting to place the steel beams that were to support the roof. The girder that he held slipped away from the person holding the other end of it and Mr. Dobbin, losing his balance, fell from fifteen or twenty feet, to the ground. As he was very badly bruised and his face was cut he was brought to the Nicholls Hospital yesterday afternoon by the City Ambulance, where Dr. Cameron attended him. It was learned that he was suffering from a broken arm, but other than that his injuries consisted only of minor cuts and bruises.

WINNIPEG EIGHT DEFEATED THAMES

Special to The Examiner:

HENLEY, England, July 2.—Canada scored to-day in the first heat of the grand challenge cup, when the Winnipeg eight defeated the Thames Rowing Club, which had been strongly picked as a winner. The Canadians showed great power and remarkable oarsmanship.

LAD SUSTAINED A BROKEN COLLAR BONE

A young lad aged 10 years, by the name of Frank Gray, sustained a broken collar bone by falling from the roof of one of the new houses now in course of construction opposite the Armouries. He, with a number of companions, were playing in the vicinity, when the accident occurred.

It is conjectured that the lad gained access to the roof by means of ladders which the builders had left there.

Dr. Morgan attended the boy who was removed to the Nichols Hospital, and who is making good progress.

BLED TO DEATH

As the result of injuries sustained at his home last night, Mr. Albert A. Strong, 48 Sophia street, of the firm of Manning and Strong, died this morning in the Nichols Hospital.

At 2:40 a.m. Mr. Strong left his bedroom to go to the bathroom, and while returning to his room, the darkness being intense, he fell down the stairs, striking his abdominal portions with considerable force, on the bannister post at the foot of the stairs. The deceased gentleman, however, walked up to his room again, where it was found that he was internally injured. Drs. Moir and McClelland were sent for, and ordered his removal to the Nichols Hospital. An operation was deemed necessary, and, accordingly executed, but proved of no avail, Mr. Strong dying some hours later. Death was thought to be caused by internal bleeding.

The deceased was widely known and highly respected. He has lived all his life in Peterborough and district, and has won the highest regard of all who knew him. He leaves to mourn his loss, two brothers and two sisters. They are: Mrs. T. W. Thorne, Mr. R. F. Strong, Millbrook, and Mrs. R. F. Thorne, of Reaboro. Five years ago he married Miss Ada Richardson, who, with two small children, also survive him.

No funeral arrangements have yet been made. They will be announced later.

Mr. Strong formerly worked for Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie when the latter conducted the Water Street Garage. A year ago it was taken over by Manning and Strong. The deceased was a steady and industrious, and sovriety was one of his first qualities. His untimely death is widely regretted.

Ottawa Hibernians Drop Dr. Freeland

OTTAWA, July 2.—The Ancient Order of Hibernians in Ottawa has dropped Dr. Freeland, the Irish protagonist of the French side to the Separate school controversy. The reason given for the suspension of Dr. Freeland is that he was in arrears in his dues. It is stated that the doctor was left without notification at the time that his dues should have been paid and the rules of the society were enforced without any latitude being allowed, as is sometimes done with other members who may be more acceptable to their fellow members than Dr. Freeland.

DAMAGE BY FIRE IN JUNE $2,500

During the past month of June there have been thirteen fires in Peterborough, and damage was done by flames to the extent of $2,500. Last year, in June, there were 14 fires, but the damage was light compared to the figures this year, and amounted to only $545.

SUCESSFUL LAWN SOCIAL AT SPRINGVILLE

The successful lawn social held under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Springville Presbyterian Church, as announced, proved a success, notwithstanding the many other attractions of the holiday and the threatening state of the weather. A large crowd accepted the invitation and was amply repaid for attending. The many musical selections by the Temple Band was very much enjoyed, and was also the solos and other numbers rendered. A recitation by Miss Jean Henry of Thornton, entitled "Sun Flower Time," by Lasea, was especially appreciated, and an encore was requested. Miss Henry responded by giving 'Canadian Born' in real patriotic style. Rev. M. E. Wilson was present and made a few appropriate remarks. Rev. Geo. Craw Porter proved a very acceptable chairman. The booth was in charge of Mr. and Mrs. R. Robertson and Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Lillico, and it was freely patronized by all. The proceeds amounted to $95.40.

Rev. Mr. Craw conducted Preparatory services for Rev. Mr. McConnachie at Centreville, on Friday evening last. Mr. Craw will be in his own pulpit Sabbath evening at 7.30 o'clock, subject for the evening service, "Pilate's Sin". All are invited.

A MENU CARD INNOVATION.

Staple essentials of good dining are not always all. Even good food gains zest from spotless linen, sparkling glass and dainty china. The Grand Trunk Railway System believes, this and has extended the idea to the menu cards of its dining car service. The covers of the menu cards recently introduced in the dining cars of the Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific Railways bear artistically beautiful reproductions in colours of many of the gems of Canadian scenery, mountain, lake and woodland. The scenic tid-bits of the Canadian Rockies, of which a large portfolio of new scenes have come to view by the construction of the Transcontinental, the Lake of Bays, Muskoka Lakes, Niagara Falls and the stand of modern hotels provided for the comfort of the traveller, have all furnished subjects for the artist's skill. The colourings are artistically dainty. These menu covers invite study and compel praise; delightfully fitting in the lapse of time between the order and the serving, and are an artistic whet for the enjoyment of the gastronomic treat to follow.

NEED OF CAUTION IN HANDLING ELECTRIC WIRES

Peterborough, June 4.—When Mr. Edward Hiland, of Barries', Limited, arrived at home, 587 Homewood avenue, earlier than usual at noon to-day, he heard moans in the cellar and discovered his wife lying on the cellar floor clasping to her breast in both hands a live electric wire. Sparks, smoke and flames came from her hands. His first act was to grasp the wire and in so doing he got a shock, and in falling broke the wire and saved the lives of both. Mrs. Hiland went to the cellar to charge a meter with a coin and grasped the wire to put it aside. Her hands were burned to the bone, and her shoulders where they touched the damp cellar floor were also burned. She will probably recover.

The above recalls the writer's experience while he was an inspector for a fire insurance company. He visited Peterborough and found in the cellar of one of the largest stores the ordinary pendant flexible cord and brass switch socket hanging above a wet earth floor. The electrician who installed it was sent for and asked if he knew the danger. He said: "There is not enough money in Peterborough to get me to touch that." He also said: "Why there was a Chinaman found dead in a cellar here recently with a 52-volt lamp grasped in his hand. They did not know how it was possible for him to be killed but I did. He wanted an extension cord from the main floor to be hung through a hole into the cellar, and I put it there for him to carry about."

All over Ontario I found this murderous man trap, the portable flexible cord and brass socket lamp in wet cellars. That same thing, or the similar state of affairs, killed men in various places. In Smith's Falls a dentist took one, and holding it, stepped into a bath tub, from which his corpse was taken. In Toronto Junction, a town official went to turn on a switch in his basement office, and death resulted. I could multiply instances. The electric wiring throughout the Province was so badly done that I wonder deaths were not so frequent as to drive electricity from the field.

The public should be made to know that the ordinary electric flexible cord is not to be used except for straight pendants. If portable lights are required, special safety cord and sockets and handles should be used. Death lurks in the portable electric light in damp places.—Saturday Night.

THE EXAMINER OFFICE TELEPHONES.

The telephone numbers of the Examiner Office have been changed. The Business Office, formerly 57, is now 1059; the Editorial Office, which was 234, is now 1061; Mr. Dawe and Mr. Menzies are changed from 1217, and can be had by calling either of the above new numbers. Private branch exchange to all departments.

"BETTER FARMING"

The C. P. R. "better farming" special trains, operated in connection with the Manitoba Government, went on duty this month in the interest of intelligent and scientific farming in the West. These trains will contain specimens of noxious weeds, most troublesome in the Province, and lectures will be given to teach the effectual methods of eradication. There will be models of weed seeds, so that identification will be easy; Manitoba birds, with instructions as to their habits, whether destructive or beneficial; insurious insects will be illustrated on the moving films; a car with cattle, sheep and hogs, in connection with which lectures will be given to young men, especially a car devoted to home economics for women, where lady demonstrators will teach nursing, sewing, and so forth. To show how thorough and real and close this instruction is meant to be by the Canadian Pacific and the Government, it may be stated that field crops and miniature lay-outs of farm buildings will be shown in two cars for the purpose—while instruction will be given as to the protection of such buildings. Saskatchewan is in need of mixed farming, and there will be special features on two large cars, which will be devoted to stock. On the Saskatchwan train, lecturers will accompany; and instruction will be given in everything practically appertaining to the life of the farm. This idea is intended, of course, chiefly for the new settlers, who may have but a hazy idea of farming. The object both of the company and the Government is that the people should farm to the best of their knowledge, and ability, so as to extract from the soil what nature is ready to give, if she be properly coaxed. In carrying out this idea the Canadian Pacific is willing to spend money, knowing that good farming anywhere in the North West will mean, ultimately, better and more profitable business for itself.

LIVE STOCK MARKET

Special Wire to The Examiner:

TORONTO, July 1.—Union Stock Yards—Receipts were only moderate. 51 cars, 862 cattle, 1,385 hogs, 667 sheep and lambs, 120 calves.

Cattle—Good to choice cattle were scarce, not enough to supply the demand, and prices for them were very firm. Common grass cattle were more plentiful and prices were steady. Choice butchers' steers, $8.40 to $8.25; good butchers' steers, $8.15 to $8.35; medium butchers' steers, $7.90 to $8.15; common butchers' steers, $7.00 to $7.75; choice butchers' heifers, $8.25 to $8.50; common butchers' heifers, $8.00 to $8.25; choice cows, $7.00 to $7.40; good cows, $6.75 to $7.00; feeders, $8.00 to $400.

Feeders and Stockers — Market about steady. Choice steers, $6.65 to $7.15; medium steers, $6.50 to $6.75; stockers, $5.75 to $6.50.

Milkers and Springers—Trade was a little stronger at $50 to $85 each, bulk sold at from $60 to $70 each. One extra cow sold at $100.

Calves — Market strong at firm prices. Choice veals, $10.00 to $10.50, and one extra quality $11.00; common to medium, $6.50 to $8.50; good, $9.00 to $9.50.

Sheep and Lambs—Trade for sheep and lambs was steady to strong, and more lambs would have sold. Sheep, $5.50 to $6.25; culls and rams, $3.50 to $5.25; spring lambs, $100.00 to $11.75 per cwt.

Hogs—The hog market was strong and prices firm. Selected, fed and watered $8.50 and $8.75 weighed off cars.

MONTHLY RECORD

On the fifteenth of each month the C. P. R. will pay in wages over the whole system $6,000,000. This is the monthly record in round numbers, 120,000 cheques being drawn every month. It seems only the day before yesterday when 50,000 cheques were deemed to represent a tremendous monthly wage list. The number of employees grows all the time, in spite of careful appointment and economic working. These monthly cheques find their way into the most distant, the oldest places. They are hurried, in enclosures, to the distant parts of British Columbia. They find their way to the construction camps, removed from civilization. They reach the employees at the way-side station, showing a single tuft of grass amid the general aridity. And, however lonely or small or discouraging the locality or district, there will be someone there to cash the cheque for the employee. There may be a bank in a tent, which is very frequently the fact. If there is no bank there is a company's agent of some kind to whom the cheques will be adressed and who will distribute them to the men in the district. To make out the pay lists and check them, and control them, and issue the cheques to correspond to the bookkeeping and get the work so advanced as to have all things ready at the right date, on the stroke of the clock, requires a large staff at headquarters. And whether the times be good or bad, the figures rising or falling, the $6,000,000 have to be provided on the fifteenth of each month to the minute. The exceptionally strong position of the Canadian Pacific has enabled it to pass through a time of stringency, always making more than its dividend, with ample funds at its distant disposal. There has been, as far as possible, retrenchment during the past few months. That does not mean that the company has parted with any of its employees; but it has not undertaken new work necessitating the employment of new hands, or the disbursement of sums other than those already arranged for under old programmes. No man in the service of the company, high or low, has any doubt about that monthly cheque, which will be honoured in all parts of the Dominion.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN NOTES

Watch the rose bushes for slugs and mildew.

Cease cutting asparagus late in June. Cut down all stalks and work as much well-rotted manure into the soil as possible.

Watch for insects on vines, currants, and ornamental plants. Get the first ones appearing and little damage will result to the plants.

It is often a good plan to soak the strawberry bed thoroughly just before the fruit ripens. This is true if it is set on rather light soil and the season is dry.

Perennial seed may be sown now and wintered over in a cold frame or protected place.

Set out late celery. Choose a location that is near water as it is often needed early in autumn.

It is a good plan to nip the new shoots of black raspberry when eighteen inches high. This makes a more bushy plant.

As soon as the strawberry crop is off mow the bed and burn or rake the dry foliage. Plow up all but a few young plants in the rows. Cultivate these and another crop may be taken off next year.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

A piece of charcoal placed in a saucepan when boiling greens or onions will prevent the odor spreading through the house.

Box shoe-blacking frequently becomes hard and crumbly before the contents of the box are used. Put the box on the back of the range and in a few minutes the heat will cause it to melt, forming a paste. When cold the contents of the box will be of their original consistency.

Laundry starch is excellent for cleaning glass. Dissolve two or three lumps of the starch in the rinsing water and let the glass dry before polishing.

Ordinary gasoline leaves a ring on most any fabric when used to take out spots. To aid in avoiding this, first wash the gasoline in this manner. Put the desired amount in a glass jar, adding an equal amount of strong soapsuds. Shake the jar rapidly for several minutes, and allow the contents to settle. The soapy water will be dirty, having taken the impurities from the gasoline. Pour off the latter and put into a bottle. It will leave no ring when used as a cleaner.

Filing patterns for future reference is a capital idea. Place the patterns in envelopes and at the top write the name of the pattern and the number of pieces in it. It is also a good idea to paste on a scrap of the cloth from a garment cut by the pattern.

TROLLEY ROMANCE ENDS IN DIVORCE

NEW YORK, June 26. — The final chapter of a romance that began on a trolley ride was written in the Supreme Court yesterday, when Mrs. Josephine Rogers filed an action for divorce against Theodore Beauclerc Rogers, of Wilmington, Del., nephew of Jacob S. Rogers, locomotive builder, who left $5,000,000 to the Metropolitan Museum of Art. A summons was served on Mr. Rogers at No. 37 Wall street, but the papers in the case are sealed.

Mr. Rogers and his wife are prominent in the financial and social life of the country. Mrs. Rogers' sister is the wife of Willard Saulsbury, the United States Senator from Delaware. It is understood that the husband will not contest the action unless an alleged affair at the Navarre Hotel is among the allegations, when according to George Gordon Battle, his counsel, a denial will be made. Mr. Rogers also is said to be anxious to obtain the custody of his son, Theodore Beauclerc Rogers, four years old.

Mr. and Mrs. Rogers met on a trolley car ride in Wilmington, Del., in 1909. In June 26th of that year they eloped, also aboard a trolley, went to a clergyman's house in the middle of the night, and were married.

Troubles of the couple first became public last February when Mr. and Mrs. Rogers with their son, were stopping with Mr. Roger's aunt, Mrs. William du Pont, at Montpelier, Orange Co., Va. William du Pont, who owns the estate once owned by President Madison, is a brother of Senator Du Pont, of Delaware.

The Rogers family returned to Beauclerc Manor, in Delaware, and are said to have been followed by George Zinn, son of Mrs. Du Pont, by her first husband, who is the divorced husband of Flora Cameron, of Richmond, Va., daughter of the wealthy tobacco manufacturer. Mr. Zinn stayed a few days at Beauclerc Manor, returned to his home, and then went back to the manor again.

Mr. Zinn also returned to Virginia and Mrs. Rogers left on the same day. She is said to have gone to New York and to have written to her mother that she intended to make her own living.

A weekly paper has been started at Seward, Alaska.

GOOD FISHING AT OAK ORCHARD

OAK ORCHARD LODGE, July 1—There may have been some complaints about the fishing falling off in some sections of the Kawartha Lake District, but the Oak Orchard fishermen have no cause for complaint.

Mr. Seltzer of Cleveland, Ohio, has to his credit a 24 1-2 lb. Maskinonge, caught on a small rod and line. This fish measured 41 inches long. Numerous other finge from 10 to 18 lbs. have been caught. The bass fishermen are also getting their share. Mr. Banning landing a 5 1-2 lb. smallmouth bass, the largest so far this year.

With the golf, tennis, trap shooting and other out-door attractions which Mr. Alexander has added to the Orchard this good fishing makes it a very desirable vacation proposition to the Tired Business Man of the States and Canada."

EXCESSIVELY HIGH TEMPERATURE IS PROMISED FOR THIS MONTH

Weather Predictions by Rev. Irl Hicks for July

WHAT'S IN STORE

A regular storm period, covered by the expiring Venus period, is central on the "glorious Fourth." The Moon is in perigree, or nearest the earth, on the 3rd, and full on the 7th. Each of these dates will show more or less of phenomena peculiar to these positions of the moon, in its relation to the earth and sun. Brisk southerly winds, falling barometer, and a wave of excessively high temperature, will all show themselves, in western sections by the 2nd and 3rd. As these conditions move eastward during the 4th to 7th, each section in turn may look for a wave of phenomenal warmth, breaking into vicious storms of rain, wind and thunder in most parts of the country. By this time of the year the focus of solar intensity will reach its maximum strength in more northerly parts of the continent, causing thunder storms, with severe gales, and gusts of rain and hail in the northwestern grain regions. The eastern and northeastern states will also be visited by these mid-summer storms of wind, rain and hail. The indications are that the Fourth of July will be extremely warm, with weather threatening to storm, in western parts of the country, with fair weather, falling barometer and increasing warmth in eastern sections. By the 5th, 6th and 7th, storm areas will pass to the east, with rising barometer, westerly winds and change to cooler trailing after them. Full moon on the 7th will tend to prolong storm conditions, and retard rising barometer and cooler weather until after that date.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 10th, 11th and 12th. During and touching these days the barometer will again make a decided blow warm and strong from easterly and southerly directions, all culminating on and next to the 12th in black, menacing storm clouds, violent bluster, rain and thunder. The Moon is on the celestial equator on the 13th, calling for phenomenal warmth and wicked, mid-summer thunder, lightning and bluster. The natural order after all storms is a rising barometer, change of wind to the west and cooler weather; but such changes will be less pronounced at this season of the year, causing prolonged high temperatures and 'heated terms." Change to lower temperature, however, will visit most parts from about the 12th to 14th, bringing a shortlived respite from July heat.

A regular storm period is central on the 15th, embracing the 13th to the 18th. The culminating days of this period, over all central parts of the country, will be on and touching the 16th and 17th. Western sections will have rising temperature, falling barometer, cloudiness and incipient storms two to three days earlier, but disturbances will not reach their widest extent and their maximum strength before the 15th to 18th. A look at the storm diagram shows that disturbing causes are conspicuously absent at this central July period. The Vulcan period stands alone, with the Moon at last quarter and in apogee phases which are not considered the most fruitful in storm causation. But careful observers will be able to note the regular changes in weather conditions, with possibly a series of pronounced July storms—black clouds looking as if tornadoes might result with floods of rain fall, but ending in summer gusts and unsatisfying showers. At such times a good hygrometer and barometer will indicate before hand just what you may expect. A decided rise of the barometer, after these storms have gone east of your locality, will bring you a grateful, temporary change to cooler weather. After these summer rains and showers, let nothing posible keep you from stirring your gardens and fields. Only a half rain, promptly and thoroughly stirred into the soil, is worth more than a whole rain, leaving the ground to bake and burn into a crust.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 20th, 21st and 22nd. The Moon is at greatest declination north on the 20th, and in conjunction with earth and sun at new moon, on the 22nd. This period will bring great depression of the barometer and excessively high temperature — a time called a "heat wave" — and a climax which will rise above the already heated atmospheric conditions natural for July. The wiseacres will tell you that "anybody can predict warm weather in July," but they will not undertake to tell when you may look for the warmest weather, or the time when summer heat will rise into a prolonged crisis. Blustering storms of rain and thunder will be natural on and next to the 21st and 22nd, but rains will not be as abundant and general as will be desired. If crops are kept thoroughly cultivated and free from grass and weeds, they will stand a marked shortage in rainfall at this part of the season; but woe to the fields that are unplowed — that have no touch of the "dry farming." Rising barometer and cooling winds may come about the 23rd to 25th.

A regular storm period covers the last week in July, having its centre on the 27th. A Mercury period is coincident with this period, being central on the 30th, and extending through the first week in August. Indications of brewing storms—rising temperature, falling barometer, south winds and increasing humidity, will appear in the western extremes about the 25th, cloudiness and storms of wind, rain and thunder will organize and take up their regular march eastward across the country. These storms will reach pre-mature proportions, especially in electrical intensity, on and about the 26th, the moon being on the celestial equator on that day. Moon is in perigee on the 26th, and at first quarter on the 29th, which facts will increase the probability of general and active storms, progressing eastward during 27th, 28th, and 29th. By the 30th and 31st storm areas will disappear off the Atlantic coasts, but cloudy, Mercurial weather will linger over most parts of the country, with possibly rising barometer, cooler winds from the northwest, and clearing skies as we pass into August. Upon the whole, we predict that storms, in the main, will be moderate and normal, and that the general rainfall will not be fully adequate over the country generally. Let our agricultural readers take heed and lay their plans accordingly.

The first seismic period in July will be central on the 7th, extending from about the 4th to the 10th. The 7th, 8th and 9th are the dates of greatest earthquake probability. The second seismic period is central on the 22nd, covering the 19th to 26th. The seismic unrest of this last period may continue beyond the limits, up to the closing days of July.

Earthquakes and Volcanic Outbreaks.—Through press of work and lack of space at the last moments, we failed to get reports of the destructive earthquakes and volcanic eruptions in Sicily and other extremes of the Earth, in our June issue of Word Works. We have telegraphic reports, and newspaper accounts of these terrible horrors, more than would fill this entire edition. The earthquakes and volcanic eruptions, at and about Catania, were ventral on and about May 9th, resulting in the destruction of many towns and villages, entailing a loss of many millions of dollars in all kinds of property, while many hundreds of men, women and children were killed and wounded. Pronounced and long-continued seismic disturbances were reported from almost all extremes of our planet, centering on and near the 9th day of May. We cannot give even a synopsis of these reports. Please turn to the bottom paragraph of our 1914 Almanac, and read our positive warning of "earthquakes and volcanic eruptions in various parts of the Earth," to be central on May 9th. The same warning was printed in May Word and Works. The disturbances, according to the forecasts, continued for many days beyond the normal period. The next seismic period was central on May 24th, extending four to five days before and after that date. Read bottom of page 47, 1914 Almanac. On May 27th, al the Panama regions for hunderds of miles were shaken by vioent earthquakes. On the same day, violent shocks were renewed over the Mount Etna regions, Sidney, N. S. W. reported an earthquake, lasting three hours, and on the 28th and 29th these disturbances in unusual severity were reported in Alaska — Fairbanks and other parts being involved. Read the forecasts again, compare the reports, and then do some thinking. It is no presumption for us to say that men are too blind and indifferent ot the truth and importance of these earthquake forecasts.

The British Columbia Railway was given a permit to erect a $300,600 double-decked car barn on Main Street, Vancouver.

Denies Story of Extensive Shooting Of Rice Lake Ducks

The following letter by Bonnycastle Dale, writing from Gore's Landing, appears in the latest issue of Rod and Gun:

The game Overseer here, Mr. J. R. McAllister, wishes me to write you contradicting the report that appeared during April in Toronto dailies which said that ten market hunters had killed 12,600 ducks on Rice Lake during the season of 1913. Mr. McAllister was born and brought up here and I have hunted here and I have hunted here for 30 years—as well as writing and picturing the wild duck for Natural History work. Never in any year we know of, even when Rice Lake was in its prime, was any such number killed. I do not think any hunter is one season ever took more than 500—and that was years ago when ducks were very much more plentiful than they are now. In 1913, although there were many hunters, I should say 200 guns during the season, none scored largely. At least 100 guns drew blanks. Roughly speaking, but gauged on daily knowledge of the shooting done here the other hundred did as follows:

2—200	400
10—100	1000
25— 50	1250

and I think I am fully 1000 ducks too liberal in my estimate, but I want to allow for all classes.

It is a pity such uninformed writers should give items to the press—I hope I am not puncturing a friend—but readers, picturing the air literally filled with ducks, will hie themselves this way next fall, with thousands of shells—looking, looking, looking, for those ten market hunters that killed 1250 ducks apiece.

COST OF LIVING STILL RISING

The Labouring Man Might Find Something of Interest in the Following—He Feels He is Pinched—This Admits It

The June issue of the Labour Gazette, containing under the authority of the Minister of Labour illuminative articles on the cost of living and conditions of unemployment in Canada, should be carefully studied by Hon. W. T. White, who is in charge of the Government's fiscal policy.

The Department's index number, showing the average wholesale prices of the 272 commodities entering into the cost of living, is given as 136.2 for the month of May. For the month of May last year, it was 135.4. There were some slight reductions during the month on dairy products which are, of course, abundant at this season of the year. Fuel and furs were also lower. But a lower level on these two commodities for the summer months will hardly bring much relief to the average man whose buying power has been greatly restricted by the trade depression of the past year, or to the thousands who are now out of employment in practically every city of Canada.

The department's analysis of the cost of living during 1913 shows that the average weekly expenditure for the ordinary workingman's family in order to meet the bare cost of living, was $14.024. In 1912 it was $13.788, and in 1911, it was $13.002. Since the Laurier Government went out of power in 1911 on a policy which made for a reduction in the cost of living, there has been an increase of at least $1 per week in the workingman's budget of necessary expenses. Since 1910, there has been an increase of practically 10 per cent. in the cost of living. The trend is still upwards.

Compared with this increase in Canada, there has been, during recent months, a marked decrease in free trade Britain and in the United States where tariff revision downwards is now producing its logical effect. The index number, showing the cost of living in the United States, fell to 8.8334 for last May, as compared with 9.1304 for May of last year. In Great Britain it is down to 117.5, as compared with 122.4 in May of last year. In the United States there has been a reduction during the year of about five per cent. In Great Britain, there has been a reduction of nearly four per cent. In Canada, alone, has there been an increase. And in Canada, alone, have the tariff restrictions both on consumers and on producers been increased.—Brantford Expositor.

Labour Gazette's Local Report For The Month of May

PETERBOROUGH.

Industrial conditions during the month of May showed marked improvement over the previous month, due somewhat to weather conditions, which were very favourable to the building trades and outside work. Some sewer work and street paving as well as street railway extensions, gave considerable employment to the large number of men who were idle most part of the winter. The Peterborough Novelty Company have commenced business, and will manufacture everything in the line of cabinet work. Outside of activity in real estate and building, other lines were quiet.

The dry weather somewhat hindered farmers in ploughing operations the first part of the month, but the latter part of the month was very favourable. The grass was good, and prospects were for a heavy crop. The wheat did not do as well as expected.

Dry weather delayed work on the drives, and some of the logs will have to wait until next year unless there is an abundant rainfall next month. The mills have started cutting; orders were active at the end of the month.

STONEY LAKE

STONEY LAKE, July 1.—Mr. and Mrs. Hagerman and two sons, of Peterborough, returned home Monday after spending a few days with Mrs. J. W. Carey at "Portree."

Mrs. McClellan and daughters, of Peterborough, came up on the Manita Monday.

The fine tall flag-pole which has stood sentinel over the Juniper Island store for so many years, and which gave so much trouble to the men who superintended its erection, bowed its head to the forces of nature and came smashing down during last Friday's wind storm, lying in three or four pieces, a complete wreck.

"Itasca," the Juniper Island supply boat, has arrived, and will start its regular trips this week. It will carry a large milk tank which will have an outer tank to contain a layer of ice five inches thick around the milk.

The Rev. A. M. Mackenzie and family, have returned to Lakefield, after spending a week at their cottage "Gairlock."

HUGH WADDELL MEMORIAL HOSPITAL

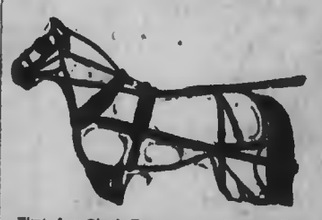
Dedicated and Officially Opened at Canora Thursday, June 18th

Thursday, June 18th, the Hugh Waddell Memorial Hospital at Canora, Sask., was dedicated and officially opened, the service being of a most impressive nature. A large number of visitors from outside points had responded to invitation, and the hospital management and lady assistants had a very busy time all day looking after and entertaining guests.

The dedicatory service was held at four o'clock in the afternoon, in the nurses' sitting-room, Rev. Colin G. Young, Superintendent of Missions for Northern Saskatchewan, presiding. The reverend gentleman opened the day's proceedings with a brief, though apt, introductory address.

Mr. H. E. Kipp, Secretary of the Women's Missionary Society, Toronto, gave an address, also Dr. E. H. Gray, Medical Superintendent of the Hospital, Dr. Patrick of Yorkton, and Dr. A. S. Grant, General Superintendent of Home Missions.

Miss Smith, Lady Superintendent, received, assisted by Mrs. Hugh Waddell, of this city. Miss Needler, of Peterborough, a niece of Mrs. Waddell, was also present.



First-class Single Turnouts for Pleasure Driving, Weddings and Funerals. Commercial Driving given special attention. Careful drivers when desired. Speedy, well harnessed horses and comfortable rigs.

Building Activity Continues Strong

Increase of $22,000 in Building Permits Issued Last Month Over Those Taken Out in June Last Year

It is encouraging to note that in the building permits issued during thep ast month, there is a marked increase in the number and in the amount. One of the permits issued last month was for the new Charlotte street church, for $60,000. The others were almost altogether for residences, in the erection of which there has been an unusual activity this year.

C. P. R. ASSINIBOIA ON COVE ISLAND

Special to The Examiner.

PORT McNICHOL, July 2. — The Canadian Pacific liner Assiniboia, bound to this port from Sault Ste. Marie, with one hundred passengers and a hundred and fifty of a crew, is ashore on Cove Island. Her sister ship, Manitoba, was summoned to her aide by wireless and is standing by, but nothing serious is expected. The Assiniboia is leaking considerably.

TORONTO, July 2.—At the Canadian Pacific offices here it is stated that the Assiniboia was ashore only half an hour and was pulled off with the assistance of the Albert A. and is now heading for Port McNicholl.

REFUSED TO PAY FINE

Examiner Special:

CAERNARVON, Wales, July 2. — Three months imprisonment was imposed on Georgina Lloyd and Phyllis North for a window smashing campaign in this town on behalf of militant suffragettes. Miss North is very wealthy but declined to pay a fine.

WILL NOT ATTEND

Examiner Special:

BERLIN, Germany, July 2.— Owing to the indisposition, Emperor William has decided not to attend the obsequies of Arch-Duke Ferdinand of Austria and his wife, murdered the other day by Anarchists. It is thought in some circles that William fears his appearance there would be inciting the Anarchists to further tragedies.

Two Vancouver men, E. S. and Robert Morrison, were drowned near Blue River on the C.N.R. construction line.

Inspector Beytes of the R.N.-W.M.P. who left Regina on June 2nd for the Arctic regions to investigate the murder of two American explorers by Esquimax. Some idea of the work accomplished by this organization can be gathered by this one example of the hardship experienced by these men in clearing up questions of law and order in the West.

KIDNAPPERS CAUGHT

NEW YORK, July 2.—The return home yesterday of Frank Longo, an eight-year-old boy who was kidnapped on May 13, led to the arrest of eight men who, the police say, form the nucleus of a band of kidnappers who have been terrorizing Italian merchants of the city for several years. Most of the men arrested are in some way connected with the bakery business, and it is believed they preyed mostly on those with whom their business brought them in contact. Longo, a baker, paid a ransom of $700 before his son was returned to him.

Uncle Sam's Navy Goes Dry.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels' famous order banishing intoxicants from the United States navy went into effect yesterday. It not only abolished the traditional wine mess of the officers, but bars all alcoholic liquors from every ship and shore station of the navy. Beginning yesterday any officer found in possession of alcoholic liquor on board ship or any naval station will be guilty of misconduct. Commanding officers will be held directly responsible for the enforcement of the "dry edict."

FIRST RAIN IN YEARS FOR THE T. A. S. EXCURSION

Large Crowd Attended But Numerical Success Was Affected by the Afternoon Downpour.

GOOD ACCOMMODATION

At 8 a.m. the steamers "Idinda" and "Rainbow," the tug Calumet and a barge left the new George Street wharf, and at 8.30 the Street Railway wharf. Afterwards they ran to and fro at intervals of half an hour each. Unhappily the rain which fell between three and five o'clock prevented some intending visitors from being present, but on the whole the attendance compared fairly well with that of last year. They were favoured with better weather at the Park, for the rain was not sufficiently heavy to penetrate the foliage ,and the people were not greatly inconvenienced.

The picnicers were afforded many amusements, the ocean wave, roundabout and nine pins being particularly well patronised, while others of the more fleet-footed indulged in dancing to the music of Mr. and Mrs. Killen. The refreshment boths were in charge of Messrs. Donoghue and L. Riley, while Mr. Brooks, assisted by the young ladies and gentlemen of the parish, were responsible for the meals which were really well prepared..

Things were enlivened at intervals by the Maple Leaf band. The baseball match resulted in a win by the Sacred Heart over the St. Peter's T. A.S. by a score of 8—1. A fine programme of sports was run off, both for the children and for the adults. Perhaps one of the most interesting events was the family contest. Mr. Chas. Murty won first prize, numbering ten in family, and Mr. L. Lebar second with nine. The results of the men's events were as follows:

100 yards, married men, T. A. S. — First McGrath, second L. Lebar.

The winners in the miscellaneous events were:

Vaulting with Pole——First, J. McMartin; second, Austin O'Brien.

Putting the Shot—W. Hatrick, J. McMartin.

Throwing the Baseball — Bols. A. O'Brien; girls, Lizzie Ahearn, K. McGrath.

TO DISCONTINUE OFFERING DISCOUNTS

The retail merchants of Peterborough have made a forward step toward sound business by determining to discontinue the granting of discounts to employees of other stores, ministers, nurses and others who have been accustomed recipients of this favour. The primary reason for this action lies in the fact that the manufacturers and wholesalers have reduced their discounts from in many cases 10 p.c. to 2 p.c., besides reducing the time for payment. In other words they have been turning the screws on the retailer, who in turn is forced to protect himself as much as possible. It is felt that in most cases all those who have been receiving the discounts are well able to pay the regular prices. Ministers receive fair stipends and it must be said that not a few of them refused to accept the discounts. Hence in their case it will simply be a further extension of the idea of full prices. Some nurses asked for and accepted discounts. Their salaries are regarded as decidedly large and those who have been asking for discounts will be requested to join their sisters who were contented to pay regular prices.

Dressmakers, too, come under the new ruling. Some of their patrons who visit a dry goods store get samples shown them to a dressmaker who would then proceed to the store, buy the necessary goods and ask for the discount. Hence it will be recognized that the retailer was in such cases merely keeping his doors open for the unsatisfactory privilege of having something to keep him employed.

In short, the retailers have been forced to protect themselves. All the leading retailers have agreed to offer no more discounts, and the new agreement went into force on July 1st.

AEROPLANE COLLAPSED

And Aviator Fell 350 Feet While Thousands Watched

Special Wire to The Examiner:

As the result of a part of his machine giving way while he was several hundred feet in the air, Captain Baldwin, the aviator who was scheduled to give two flights in Port Hope yesterday, lies badly injured in the hospital in that town to-day. At first it was feared that he was fatally injured, but subsequent examination proved that he was not as badly hurt as was thought and it is likely that he will recover.

The aviator made the first flight about two-thirty o'clock yesterday afternoon, it being a very successful one which aroused much interest in the thousands of people who were attending the festivities in Port Hope. There was even a larger crowd, including many local people, on hand to see the afternoon flight, and a breathless silence held the crowd as the propellor buzzed for a few minutes, and suddenly the great machine soared smoothly into the air. The aviator and machine sailed several hundred feet in the direction first taken, then turned sharply to the left, rising to the height of three or four hundred feet, and proceeded some distance in that direction.

All eyes were upon the machine as it sped gracefullyq from the exhibition grounds, when it was seen that Captain Baldwin was manoeuvring the aeroplane to return to the crowd. Then above the noises on the grounds was heard a sharp report, as though some highly strung wire or rope on the machine had parted. Then the aeroplane was seen to tremble in the air a moment, after which it dropped like lead to the earth. Retaining his courage and presence of mind even in the swift descent, the aviator made a desperate attempt to unstrap himself from the seat so that he would be free to jump when the machine struck the ground. The few seconds that elapsed before the aeroplane reached the earth were not sufficient for the purpose, however, and as it struck, he was pinned under the machine.

The aeroplane was completely wrecked, and the crowd rushed to the spot, over fences and fields, to where the aeroplane lay pinned beneath the radiator of the machine. The men who reached the scene of the accident first, freed him, and he was taken in the ambulance to the hospital, where he now lies.

At night it was announced that he was not badly hurt, but this announcement was taken with considerable doubt by those who saw the man and machine dashed to earth. The Examiner was informed to-day that while there is little doubt but that he will recover, Captain Baldwin was badly injured, and will be forced to remain in the hospital some time. It is known that he has telegraphed Mrs. Baldwin to come to Port Hope.

It is a long time since any crowd in Port Hope has known the excitement that held the thousands in that spell bound for the greater part of a minute yesterday, during the time that the aviator and the flying machine were plunging headlong to the earth. Women shrieked, and men were held motionless with tense interest as the aeroplane crashed to the ground, and the moment it disappeared from view, there was a wild rush to the spot where the wrecked machine and its badly injured owner had fallen. It is an incident that will long be remembered in the Lake Shore Town, and one which marks the first appearance of a flying machine in Port Hope.

A Bouquet For Clean Journalism

The Toronto World is receiving praises from various sources for the fair reports given of political meetings and the respectful references editorially to Liberal politicians and speakers on Liberal-Temperance platforms. The Telegram, Mail and Empire and the News were particularly vile and vituperative during this campaign, especialy the News. No person was ever won over from the other side because of abuse of opponents. With sensible people it is more likely to drive men the other way. If the truth could be known we venture to believe that the Billingsgate language and abusive epithets heaped upon temperance advocates has driven more men to vote against the bar than for its retention. A spirit of fair play is possessed by most men. In beautiful contrast to the papers named has been the splendid and generous reports of meetings held by both political parties published in the Globe, the Daily Star of Toronto and the Daily Advertiser of London. From our daily reading of those journals we consider that their editors have done themselves infinite credit for fairness and generous treatment of opponents. The Lindsay Daily Post, the Peterborough Daily Examiner, The Belleville Daily Ontario, and The Brockville Recorder have run a clean, educative and gentlemanly campaign. They have abused nobody, but have made very strong appeals for their candidates. Whether their man was winner or loser the editors of these journals will feel a thousand times better than they would if they had written nasty articles about the men in the other line-up.—Bowmanville Statesman.

Lost Double Header to Brantford, Both Games Going by Only One Run—First West Eleven Innings

LAST POSITION AGAIN

The Mountmen stepped back into the cellar yesterday when they were hooked with both prongs of a double-header with Deneau's Red Sox. Both games were anybody's, each closing with a margin of only one run, and the first went eleven innings, with Creswell pitching. The condensed details will suffice:

First Game.

BRANTFORD, July 1. — The Red Sox took both games from the Petes today, when they won narrowly after making a good exhibition of ball. Both games were fast and snappy, the second being a pitchers' battle, in which Rebels got the better of Belting, keeping the Petes down to a run. Belting held Brantford to four bingles but they managed to get two runs on clean team work. The game lasted eleven innings, when Burns made the plate for Brantford on hits by Deneau and Ivors. Tracey Pitched Another Good Game Tuesday

BRANTFORD, Ont., June 30. — The Red Sox gave a poor exhibition of baseball to-day, when they fell again to the Petes by the score of 3 to 1. Taylor twirled great ball, but received poor suport and the Petes' scope was made up on weakness. LaCroix and Roth both made costly mistakes. The team work was poor, and Peterborough took advantage of this fact. With seven bingles the Sox failed to make more than a single run. Score:

JACK DUNN WILL TRANSFER HIS CLUB

RICHMOND, Va., July 1.—A deal was closed here to-night, contingent upon the sanction of the International and Virginia Leagues, whereby the Baltimore team in the International Baseball League will be transferred to Richmond. Jack Dunn, owner and manager of the Baltimore team, left to-night for New York to attend a meeting to-morrow of the International League, which he expects to approve the transfer. A meeting of the Virginia League will be held to-morrow, and if an offer from Lynchburg to take over the Richmond franchise is approved the Baltimore team is expected to play its first game here on Saturday.

BASEBALL

In spite of all this, Manager Yates has failed to deliver just as the support expected from Connie Mack has failed to materialize, with the result that the month of June draws to a close with the club in last position, going badly, and with urgent need of a shift of some kind. The fans still have faith in the team. They think the individual merit is there, but that Yates is lacking in all the requirements of a successful manager.

There is no doubt that the directors of the club realize this and indications are that they intend to make a move in the right direction at once. It is known that some of them feel that Yates has had every opportunity to make good. This he has failed to do, and the opinion is that a mistake would be made in giving him any further opportunity to experiment. The directors know full well that no improvement can be expected under present conditions. The club officials refuse to make any statements on the matter, but it can be safely predicted that a new manager will be on the job this week.—Hamilton Spectator

CRICKET CLUB DEFEATED ST. ALBAN'S TEAM

A very interesting game of cricket was played yesterday at Nicholls Oval between the Peterborough Cricket eleven and the St. Alban's team, of Toronto. At the end of the first innings Peterborough was ahead 8 runs, and the second innings was just begun, when the game had to be called on account of rain, thereby giving Peterborough the game by 8 runs. The fielding of the Peterborough eleven was much superior to that of the Toronto team, and in no small way accounted for their win. For the local team the bowling of Lawrence was excellent, he taking 8 wickets for 14 runs, and Boone at the bat played well, making 27 runs.

Rain Has Fallen On Every Lacrosse Game Played Here

The farmers and gardeners should thank the Lacrosse Club for its existence this summer. Every local game has been the signal for rain and while the showers of financial "blessings" have helped the general community, they have been a hoodoo to the lacrosse team. Yesterday, for instance, the Tweed team played here, and although the day broke promising, the "hoodoo" showed up an hour before the game began. The present hope is that Friday afternoon's game with Norwood will be greeted by fair weather.

Tweed brought its own referee and a good team. With this combination and the absence of some of the local regulars, the visitors took home an 8 to 4 victory. The revival of lacrosse has had many obstacles in the City, but Jupiter Pluvius above all others should have a heart.

BIG GAME IN THE CHURCH LEAGUE

In the Church Baseball League the eGorge Street Methodist and Y.M.C.A. teams met on Friday night at 6.30 sharp on the Oval. If George Street win they go out on top, but should they lose they will play the winners of Y. and St. Paul's. A good game is epected.

Frank Moran—who fought Jack Johnson in Paris on June 27th for the world's heavyweight championship. He stayed the twenty rounds, but Johnson won on points. Moran is one of the few men who have ever stayed the limit with Johnson. Parisian papers call the fight a frame up.

LACROSSE MATCH FRIDAY AFTERNOON

Norwood Team is Coming at 3.30 Last Practice To-night

Friday afternoon's lacrosse match with Norwood will determine whether the locals remain in the running or not. They have to win to stay in the count. The game is called for 3.30 and the visitors will come up in automobiles. Rev. Father Kelly will accompany them and may act as referee. The lacrosse fans should not miss this game. It will be over in good time for supper. All the players are asked to be out for to-night's practice as the locals must win tomorow's game.

OLD COUNTRY SPORTING NEWS

RHODES SCHOLARS.

LONDON, June 20.— The Oxford University athletic authorities have virtually rescinded the regulations regarding the competition of Rhodes scholars. The only one of the three original regulations to be enforced is that which debars anyone from competition at the Freshmen's sports who has reached the aged of 20 years. This is reasonable enough and will prevent the possibility of mature and finished athletes joining in to the discouragement of the youth of 17 and 18. Rhodes scholars and other fully developed athletes who go to Oxford will still be free to join in college sports and also the University sports.

EXCELLENT PERFORMANCES.

Some capital performances have been accomplished by some of the cracks during the past week. W. A. Applegarth and C. W. Taylor had a splendid struggle for the 100 yards Northern championship at Manchester. Taylor was leading a few strides from the tape, but he stumbled and Applegarth won by inches in 9 4-5 secs. The men had the assistance of the wind, which discounts the time, but they are both moving well. Another great sprinter in G. H. Patching of South Africa, turned out at Brighton. He has only had two weeks' training since he arrived, so that he was doing fairly well to show 10 2-5 secs. from the 100 yards. Patching will no doubt come on a lot during the next two weeks, and his meeting with the English cracks will make the sprints at the championship very interesting indeed. Patching announces that he hopes to obtaing suitable employment in England and stay here. Should he do this, he would have plenty of opportunities of running, but under the new regulations he could only represent South Africa at the Olympic games of 1916.

Another champion runner in Corporal G. H. Hutson, who is a soldier in the Sussex Regt., ran a fine two miles at Budapest recently, his time of 9 mins., 37 3-5 secs. being a new record for Hungary. J. Gaspar of the Magyar A. C., also cleared 6 ft 3 1-2 inches in the hight jump, which indicates how European athletes are developing.

BOXING.

Young Ahearn is the man of the moment in the boxing world. He soon brought matters to a conclusion when he met S. Burns in London on Monday. The latter put up a good fight against G. Carpenter at Olympia before the Frenchman had progressed so far along the road of fame, and he is generally looked on as right in the front rank among British middle-weights. Ahearn, however, outclassed him during the first round and knocked him out with a right to the jaw during the second. It was a further illustration of the Preston man's ability, and he will go far if properly handled.

His manager, Dan McKetrick, evidently has great faith in him, as he is willing to match him against the winners of the Wells v. Bell match, and the Carpenter v. Gilbody Smith bout. This is flying high, and many good judges think it is a mistake. That Ahearn is a marvel is certain, but in the writers' opinion his prospects of climbing to the very top of the ladder would be greater if he would go slowly. There are plenty of good middle and light-heavy weights he might tackle before flying at men like Carpenter and Gunboat Smith. He is young, and will put on weight during the next two years, by which time he might hold a decided chance of beating Carpentier.

POLO.

Polo has received a big "boom" during the last few weeks, and whilst there is no likelihood of it ever becoming a game for the "rank and file", the masses are keenly interested. One of the most pleasing matters in connection with the recent international matches was the fine sporting way they were contested, and the manner the result was received. The first right impression was created when the Americans postponed the opening match on account of the accident to Capt. Cheape, and this was not forgotten by Lord Wimborne and the rest of the team. In acknowledging the congratulations of their recovery of the cup, the Englishmen expressed their appreciation for the sportsmanship of their rivals in postponing the first match. The losers and the American press generally, also seem to have accepted the result in the best possible spirit, the general opinion being that the English players had triumphed in the face of many difficulties. This is quite true, and the moral of it is that our representatives in international fray should profit by the example of the four soldiers who rose to the occasion so splendidly. It would have been no matter for wonder had Lord Wimborne lost heart under the rebuffs he received. The difficulties in getting the best players and ponies were many, and several home authorities looked on the tour as a forlorn hope at the best.

Of course, the Americans will soon be challenging again, but should the brothers Waterbury stick to their present intention to retire from big polo, we may not see another American team in London before 1915. The big tournament to be held in connection with the Panama-Pacific International Exhibition will claim the attention of American players from March to May of the next year. This promises to be a big affair and with Capt. E. D. Miller of England, acting as superintendent of the tournament, everything should go off well. All the nations playing polo have promised their support, and it will be interesting to see how the Indian, Spanish, Argentine and other teams will fare against the British and American combinations.

CRICKET.

Although W. G. Grace is generally regarded as the greatest all-round cricketer who ever lived, many sound judges think A. G. Steel, who has just died, was his equal. The latter showed great ability as a 16 year old boy at Marlborough College and on going to Cambridge, he got his Blue at once, e played a big part in the defeat of Oxford in 1878 by taking 5 wickets for 11 runs, and he also helped the Light Blues to defeat a visiting Australian team that year. The Liverpool man was very successful against the Australians, particularly in 1884 when he made 124 for M.C.C. and 148 for England against the visitors. Remembering that the latter included such bowlers as Spofforth, Giffen, Palmer and Cooper, this was a big thing. He also took 152 wickets at a cost of less than 7 runs each when visiting Australia as a member of the Hon. Iro Bligh's team of 1882-3.

BIG SCORES.

Tarrant and earne (J.H.) put on 390 runs for the second wicket in the Middlesex and Lancashire match this week. The former made 198, and the younger player 204, both passing the 1,000 runs mark during the innings, Tarrant being the first to do so, however.

Another big effort was Charles Worth's innings of 208 for Warwickshire against Yorkshire, during which he hit two 6's, and twenty-seven 4's.

It was Hobbs of Surrey, however, who provided the biggest batting treat of the week by scoring 215 (not out) against Essex, his record total in first-class cricket. He scored very fast after passing the century and got 33 runs off 9 consecutive balls. In all he hit two 6's, and twenty-four 4's, being at the wicket a little under four hours.

Other recent batting feats of note were Meads' 117 for Hants v. Kent (which enabled him to reach 1,000 runs for the season, P. Perrins' 103 for Essex v. Surrey, Sharpes' 128 for Lancashire v. Middlesex, Charlesworth's 115 for Warwickshire v. Gloucestershire and E. M. Sprot's 131 for Hants against Surrey—in which there were sixteen 4's.

THE BOWLERS.

In spite of batsmen having had the best of conditions lately, a few excellent bowling feats can be recorded. Blythe took 8 wickets for 30 runs, and Fielder 3 for 43, for Kent v. Hants, and the bowling of Jaques, 8 for 24, and Brown 4 for 34, was a factor in the win of Hants over Kent. Hitch and Rushby also played a big part in the win of Surrey against Essex, the former taking 5 wickets for 40 runs and the latter 5 for 42.

THE TURF.

Durbar failed to win the French two thousand guineas and the colt was by no means so well as when he secured the English Derby. Horses are not machines and the journey to and from England no doubt upset him.

The Ascot meeting has been fortunate in the matter of sunshine and the attendance must have been nearly a record. Lord Derby won the gold vase with Glorvina, a sister to Craganour, the trophy being the gift of King George. The Royal Hunt Cup provided an upset, as a big outsider in Lie-A-Bed beat the fancied division. There is a romance about the winner, as he was born with a twisted fore-foot and it was first intended to shoot the cold. J. East, his breeder, thought of a specially constructed iron boot, however, and this acted so well that it was found possible to train the son of Feather Bed, though he still possesses a curiously shaped club foot. His rider on Wednesday was a little lad under 5 stone, and only 17 years of age, so that it will be no surprise should K. Robertson hold a prominent place among the leading jockeys before long.

Most people looked for a French victory in the Ascot Gold Cup, the home entries inspiring little confidence, so that M. E. de St. Alary's Bruleur started a warm favourite. The French crack dropped back beaten on entering the straight, however, and Mr. Garrie's splendid stayer, Aleppo, got on terms with Willowbrook close home, to win by three-quarters of a length. The latter is a three year old and proved the surprise of the race. The result indicates that there is no occasion for the frequent cries about the poor quality of English cracks this season.

One other incident in connection with Ascot is worthy of mention. In winning the All Aged Stakes, Horne's Beauty scored his sixth consecutive victory on the Ascot course, which evidently suits Sir William Cook's gelding.

GOLF.

Harry Vardon's fine form was the main feature of the opening day's play in the open golf championship at Prestwick. Rounds of 75 and 77 left him at the head of affairs with a total of 15, whilst J. Ockenden of West Drayton, furnished the surprise by doing the 36 holes in 151.

F. Ouimet, the young American, who beat Vardon and Ray of England in the Open Championship of America last September, was quite off his game, his score for the half way stage being 165, so that he was two strokes behind A. Havers, a 15 year old boy from Sheringham.

J. H. Taylor (holder) who had a total of 152 for the 1st and 2nd rounds, was paired with Vardon today. He did the third round in 74 to Gordon's 78 and led all his rivals at that stage with a total of 228. Vardon 228 coming next. J. L. Jenkins, the amateur champion, had a 73 for the third and his aggregate of 3 1-2 left him in third place.

HOLIDAY MARRED BY NUMEROUS ACCIDENTS

Yesterday was an unusually eventful one in Peterborough and vicinity, there being several more or less serious accidents that resulted in two men being killed, several others being so badly injured that they are in various hospitals, and many others narrowly escaping death or serious injury. Among the accidents chronicled in to-day's Examiner are:

Aviator crashed 350 feet to the earth when machine collapsed.

Robert Dobbin injured by fall from the roof of a neighbour's barn.

Automobile turned turtle between Cobourg and Port Hope.

Man run down by motor car in Port Hope yesterday.

Girls narrowly escaped injury in a runaway on Charlotte street.

RUNAWAY LANDED IN A SEWER TRENCH

A runaway on Charlotte Street today flopped into a wide sewer excavation near the corner of Simcoe Street The buggy followed it and the woman and girl occupants were unwilling participants in the dip. Neither was injured, but the experience caused them a fright.

VALUABLE HORSE WAS DESTROYED

Mr. Frank Burke's Shire horse, named Keepsake, sustained a fractured leg yesterday in some unaccountable manner while it was in its stall and Dr. Johnston, who was called, ordered it to be shot as the horse was old and it would be no use setting the leg, so P. C. Downs went over and put the animal out of misery.

PLANNING THE DAY'S WORK

With the Household Editor

We busy housewives in the country have very little time for idling. The majority of us rise early and work late. Very often too we are inclined to rush pell-mell into the work as soon as breakfast is over, regardless of system, the idea uppermost in our mind being to get as much work as possible done in a day.

How many have tried the plan of having a pad and pencil in a convenient place in the kitchen and after the morning meal spending a few minutes jotting down the things to be done that day. If we would sit down each morning and enumerate the various duties and how and when will be the best time to do them our work would not be nearly so irksome. A good plan is to jot down the tasks that have to be done and those that should be done if circumstances permit.

After one has planned their work they can go ahead and do it, and from time to time look over the list and mark off the tasks that have been accomplished. This will serve as a reminder and will be a source of satisfaction to see how much one has done. No doubt there will oftentimes be something left undone, but that can go on the list for the following day.

In systematizing our work in this way there is a very important point which must not be overlooked, and that is setting aside a time for resting. In some cases women who have always been accustomed to work steadily throughout the day seem to have an idea that setting apart a time for rest would be wasting time. Should we not keep the idea ever before us that when we are resting we are storing up energy to enable us to do our work more efficiently. Few women realise the strain under which they are working from day to day, but those who are wise will make a point to conserve their strength by having a daily rest period.

When Bananas Are Really Ripe.

There is a popular delusion that the banana has ripened when it turns from its original green to a golden yellow; and those thus deluded decline to touch this fruit when dark spots appear in the yellow skin of the banana.

The banana is not fully ripe when it is yellow. This change from green to yellow is the first outward appearance of a chemical process incidental to the ripening process. Not until a considerable portion of the skin has turned to a deep brown has this ripening process sufficiently developed to give the fruit its greatest value as a delicious and healthful food.

Says Liberals Will Not Drop Abolition of The Bar

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, July 2. — Hon. W. L. MacKenzie King is firmly convinced that the Liberal party in Ontario must not and will not relinquish the "Banish the bar" plank in its platform as a result of the recent election. He does not think it necessary to hold a Liberal convention in Ontario for the purpose of reconstructing the policies of the party, although he believes that considerable advantage might accrue from a convention in other respects. "The Liberal party in Ontario stands for moral reform, and the abolition of the bar must be an integral part of that policy. There may be some other way of presenting it to the people, but it cannot be abandoned."

GAME LEG HID FORTUNE.

Diamonds Smuggled Into U. S. Under the Bandages.

MONTREAL, July 3.—The firm of Aaronson & Rutlenberg is stated to have had nothing to do with the diamond men in trouble in New York except to sell them diamonds. It is said that one man was in the habit of coming to Montreal often to buy diamonds. The Montreal firm were not suspicious that an organized smuggling game was going on. They sold him the diamonds, for which he paid, and they were not concerned about whether he paid duty or not.

The man who has done the smuggling employed original methods to conceal the diamonds. It was his custom to travel backwards and forwards across the border with the diamonds wrapped in a small parcel, which, by means of bandages, he concealed about his leg. He appeared to have met with a long standing accident and had his leg bandaged. He limped and did not excite any suspicion. Beneath the bandages were diamonds to the extent of from $10,000 to $75,000.

Found a Friend In Dr. Chase

His Medicines Proven Effective, and Always Kept at Hand in This Home.

Mrs. Chas. Lovell, Agassiz, B. C., writes:—"I feel it my duty to tell you what a great friend Dr. Chase's medicines have been to myself and family. I cannot praise his medicines too highly, and Dr. Chase's name is a household word in our home. Well, quite a number of years ago I sent to you for a sample box of Dr. Chase's Ointment for protruding piles, and, having used the sample and found relief, I sent to a neighbouring town for four boxes, and I am completely cured.

"I have also used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for constipation, and, after using them, I am completely cured of this dreadful disease. I am the mother of ten children, of whom nine are living, and when seven of my children were all very bad with whooping cough, caught in the middle of a severe winter, I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and they were all cured before the winter was over, and now we are never without Dr. Chase's medicines in our home, and I recommend them to all."

Bodies At Capital

PAGEANT IS IMPRESSIVE

VIENNA, July 3. — The special court train from Trieste, conveying the bodies of the murdered Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his wife, the Duchess of Hohenberg, arrived at the Southern Railway station here at 10 o'clock last night. Prince Montenuovo, the court chamberlain, and other high officials were in waiting.

Escorted by Halberdiers and Life Guardsmen, the coffins were carried to the Imperial waiting room, which had been converted into a temporary chapel. Here they were blessed by court chaplains and then carried out and placed in two great black court hearses.

The funeral procession, which meantime had formed outside, started for the Hofburg. Two outriders, carrying lighted lanterns, led the cortege. They were followed by an advance guard of cavalry. Then came an official on horseback, known as the "Hofstabspanier," dressed in the picturesque costume of a Spanish cavalier.

The court carriages were next in line. Two outriders proceeded the hearses, each of which was drawn by six black horses. On either side walked non-commissioned officers and court lackeys. A special guard of twelve halberdiers and twelve mounted Life Guardsmen, with drawn swords followed the hearses, and two carriages with the suits of the archduke and the duchess completed the cortege. No troops were stationed along the route, but the procession made its way between the lines of a moving military guard. At the Hofburg the master of ceremonies and the palace clergy awaited the cortege at the foot of the ambassador's staircase, and walked slowly forward to meet it, preceded by the boy choir of the court chapel, chanting "Miserere."

The procession then advanced to the chapel with the Austrian and Hungarian Life Guards and halberdiers walking beside the coffins, which were attended by four noble pages, dressed in sombre costumes and carrying huge lighted wax tapers. The court chamberlain and other officials brought up the rear. The coffins were placed on an elevated catafalque, entirely covered with gold brocade with swinging canopy.

After a short benediction, the chamberlain of the late archduke handed the keys of the coffin to Prince Montenuovo, the chapel was locked and all departed.

The Hofburg Chapel is very small, accommodating not more than 200 persons and will prove utterly inadequate for such a ceremony as that of to-day.

All the seats have been removed and the walls and floor are covered with black cloth. On one of the walls hangs an escutcheon consisting of the archduke's arms. It is surrounded by silver sconces with lighted candles. The arms of the duchess similarly adorn the opposite wall.

Silver candlesticks holding wax tapers surround the catafalque, at the foot of which are cushions bearing the archduke's crown and the Austrian archducal two-pointed hat, his general's plumed hat and sword and all his orders and decorations.

At the foot of the coffin of the duchess repose her orders, a pair of long white kid gloves and her fan, in accordance with the Austrian custom.

The only other member of the imperial family who attended the ceremony last night was Archduke Charles Francis Joseph, now heir to the throne, who at the last moment decided to go to the station to meet the bodies. Immense crowds gathered around the station and along the whole route to the Hofburg, standing bareheaded and in profound silence as the cortege passed.

Steamer On Rocks

C.P.R. Lake Liner Assiniboia is Hard Aground

MAY BE PULLED OFF TO-DAY

OWEN SOUND, July 3. — The steamer Assiniboia, flagship of the Upper Lakes C. P. R. fleet, is still on the rocks at Bad Neighbor Island, near Cove Island. She ran aground shortly before midnight Wednesday in a dense fog. There is no danger and sister ships are standing by. It is expected that she will be pulled off to-day.

Messages received from the Midland wireless station, which is in touch with the Assiniboia, say the steamer was crawling down through the gap, one of the most dangerous spots on the upper lakes, amid a dense fog. Apparently, she got slightly out of her course, and ran aground hard and fast. Fortunately the weather was not rough, and the water calm, so that there was no panic among the passengers, many of whom were asleep and did not know for some time that the vessel was ashore. When it was found that reversed engines would not relieve the Assiniboia the wireless was set in operation and the steamer Manitoba, which had just left Owen Sound, a port of call, for the head of the lakes, replied, as did the Midland land station, which apprised the C. P. R. headquarters.

The Manitoba reached the Assiniboia in the morning and stood by waiting for the arrival of the steamer Alberta, which had been hurriedly despatched from Port McNicoll to take off the passengers from the Assiniboia and bring them to Port McNicoll. In the meantime tugs and lighters have gone to the cove to relieve the big vessel, and as she is resting easily with her prow about five feet out of the water, it is hoped to have her afloat by to-night at the latest. It will be necessary to send the flagship to drydock for repairs.

Swedish Women Want Vote.

STOCKHOLM, July 3.—The Swedish Parliament received a monster petition yesterday signed by 250,000 women in favor of women's enfranchisement. A bill having that object is now in the Diet and has the support of the entire Liberal party, but it is expected that the first chamber will reject it.

OTTAWA, July 3.—Major R. W. Leonard, chairman for the past three years of the National Transcontinental Commission, has tendered his resignation, which was accepted by the Government yesterday, and will retire for the purpose of attending to his private business. An order-in-council was passed by the Cabinet Council accepting the resignation and formally turning over to Hon. Frank Cochrane Minister of Railways, in accordance with an act passed last session, the control of the completion of the unfinished details of the road. It is expected that the lease of the completed section of the road to the Grand Trunk will be made at an early date following the change in jurisdiction.

Peers Accept Bill

Even "Die Hards" in Lords Will Support Amending Measure

ALL AFRAID OF CIVIL WAR

LONDON, July 3.—The debate in the House of Lords yesterday on the bill to amend the Irish Home Rule Bill was characterized by general recognition on the part of the Unionist peers that some means of settlement must be found, and the amending bill offered the only chance of accomplishing this. The Marquis of Lansdowne, the Unionist leader, had already announced that it was necessary to find a way out of the calamity which threatened, and that, therefore, the Unionists would give the amending bill a second reading and introduce amendments during the committee stage.

So many peers desire to speak on the amending bill that it has been decided to take a division on Monday. The committee stage will be begun Wednesday and the bill will probably be sent to the Commons not later than Monday or Tuesday of next week.

The second day's debate attracted almost as large an audience as the first, but less interest naturally attached to the discussion than the previous evening, when Lord Lansdowne disclosed the attitude of the Unionist leaders. Perhaps the chief feature of the resumed debate was the general agreement expressed on one point, namely, that the first necessity was to avert the danger of civil war. Another feature was the warm recommendation given Archbishop York's suggestion of a conference of Irishmen on the subject of permanent settlement.

The Duke of Abercorn, speaking yesterday as an Ulster Volunteer, said that he looked upon the bill as the only loophole he could see for the avoidance of a most awful calamity.

The Marquis of Londonderry, chairman of the Ulster Unionist Council, said that the bill was a horrible one, but that he would support it in order to avoid civil war.

The Marquis of Salisbury announced that he would support the amending bill for the same reason, much as he disliked it. He expressed the hope that Lord Willoughby de Broke could be induced, in the interests of a settlement to drop his amendment for the rejection of the bill.

The Earl of Halsbury, once the most irreconcilable of the "die hards" hoped so too, for nothing could be more urgent, he said, than the necessity of making some sacrifices in order to avert civil war.

Lord Dunraven advocated a conference, and among those who supported it in some form or other were Lord Islington, Lord Sydenham, Lord Lovat and Lord Shaftesbury.

The only Ministerial speaker was Lord Wimborne. He stated the bill was put forward, not as a settlement but as an arrangement by which the fears of Ulster Unionists might be allayed. Apparently he contemplate a change in the six years' limit, for he said that whether the period were six years or longer, or an indefinite period, he looked forward to an eventual compromise.

Arms For Nationalists.

DUBLIN, July 3.—In the absence of the police the Irish national volunteers succeeded last night in landing here 400 cases of ammunition and 900 cases of rifles. The arms and ammunition were taken from on board a boat which had been hovering about the coast off Dublin for two days.

WHARF GAVE WAY.

And Fifty Picnickers Were Plunged Into St. Clair River.

SARNIA, July 3.—About fifty men, women and children were precipitated into the river at Stag Island on Wednesday night when the board walk leading over the water to the main dock gave way. The wildest confusion prevailed, and the shrieks of those in the water mingled with the exclamations of horror from the people on shore. Fortunately, the water was not deep, and the terror-stricken people were all hauled out to safety. One or two women fainted and several were slightly bruised. Had the accident occurred out where the current is swift a terrible tragedy might have resulted. As it was no one received more than a good ducking. The crowd started across the walk to the dock when the supports gave away and the people shot into the river as from a greased slide head first, feet first and every conceivable way.

MEDIATION AT AN END.

But Huerta-Carranza Conference May Not Begin.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., July 3.—Final notes exchanged yesterday between the principals in the Mexican peace delegation marked the actual ending of the A. B. C. mediation conference, which has begun here on May 20. The most interesting and significant communication was addressed to the mediators by the Huerta delegates, with a request that it be transmitted to the Constitutionalists' agency in Washington. In it the plenipotentiaries of Gen. Huerta express their willingness and readiness to confer informally with representatives of Gen. Carranza with a view to choosing a Provisional President of Mexico and adjusting the domestic problems that have torn the country asunder in the last four years.

The mediators yesterday made public the text of Gen. Carranza's response to their suggestion that he send representatives to confer with the Huerta plenipotentiaries. This response was sent in Gen. Carranza's name by the Constitutionalist agency in Washington. It expresses sympathy with the purpose of the mediators, and explains that it is necessary before making final answer to consult the generals of the Constitutionalist army to obtain a modification of the revolutionary plan of Guadaloupe, which provides that Gen. Carranza shall become Provisional President of Mexico when the Constitutionalists take possession of the national capital. The Carranza note is regarded as generally favorable to the proposal that the Federals and the Constitutionalists should come together with the purpose of settling their country's domestic problems by amicable agreement, and it has encouraged some of those connected with the Mexico movement to believe that a conference of the Huerta and Carranza representatives will be held.

Prince Postpones Trip.

"PEBLO"
The Glass of Quality
We have at any doubt but that most people value their eyesight sufficiently to want to take the best care of it. That is why we went to the expense of securing for our Optical Trade the Highest Grade of Lenses than can be made and which we handle exclusively under the trade mark "PEBLO." We believed our patrons would appreciate having their eyeglasses fitted with this superior quality lens, and after two years exclusive use of "PEBLO" Lenses, we are well satisfied with the result, judging by the hundreds of satisfied customers whom we have fitted with these beautiful lenses. It is interesting to know that in spite of the expense of procuring "PEBLO" Lenses the prices to our patrons are no more than when we used other makes of lenses, this being due to the large quantity we buy at a time. We manufacture these "PEBLO" Lenses from the rarest "PEBLO" glass, in our own lens grinding department.
Any kind of lens duplicated while you wait, and all work guaranteed.

"THE TERMS OF SURRENDER"

By LOUIS TRACY

"His people are the famous Lombardy bankers," he said. "I have an idea, based on ethnological theories, that they belonged originally to one of the ten tribes; but they were ennobled during the seventeenth century, and remained highly orthodox Blacks till the present king came to the throne, when they 'verted to the Whites." (The Papal and Constitutional parties in Italy are often differentiated thus briefly.) I believe that this change came about owing to their association with Marten in an Italian loan. Anyhow, the existing scion of the princely house is rather a bad hat. Why are you interested in him?"

"He is a suitor for the hand of a young lady whose welfare I have at heart."

"Not Nancy?"

"Yes."

"The devil he is!" and Dacre expressed his sentiments freely. "Why, I'd prefer she married our local road-mender, because then, at least, she would have a decent, clean-minded husband. Marten must be losing grip. Confound it! Why doesn't he go to Paris or Naples, and find out this fellow's antecedents? I feel it's absurd to doubt you, but can you really trust your informant?"

"I have it from Nancy's own lips."

"Oh, damn it all! Can nothing be done to stop it?"

"Much, I hope. Tell Howard what you know, and he will start for the Continent at once to verify it. Meanwhile, may I invite a friend to come here to-morrow?"

"Need you ask? We can put up six more at a pinch. But I can't get over Montecastello's infernal impertinence. Yet, it's fully in accordance with Italian standards of right and wrong. Your young count or princeling can live like a pig until matrimony crops up. Then he becomes mighty particular. The bride must bring not only her dowry, but an unblemished record as well. I suppose, in the long run, it is a wise thing. Were it not for some such proviso, half the aristocracy of Europe would disappear in two generations."

Power passed no comment; but he sent the following letter by the night post:

"Dear Mr. Lindsay,—Miss Nancy Marten, who is staying at Valescure Castle, near this house, has honoured me by asking my advice and help in a matter that concerns herself and you. She has done this because I am her friend, and was her mother's friend years ago in Colorado. Can you get leave from your regiment for a few days, and come here? I believe you army men can plead urgent private affairs, and there is little doubt as to the urgency and privacy of this request. I make one stipulation. You are not to communicate with Miss Nancy Marten until you have seen me.—Sincerely yours,

"John Darien Power."

He passed a troubled and sleepless night. Dacre's careless, if heated, words had sunk deep. They chimed in oddly with a thought that was not to be stilled, a thought that had its genesis in a faded letter written twenty years ago.

When Howard went to London next day he took with him a cablegram, part in code and part in plain English. Its text was of a peculiarity that forbade the use of the village post office; for it ran, when decoded:

"MacGonigal, Bison, Colorado.—Break open the locked upper right-hand drawer of the Japanese cabinet in sitting-room, Dolores, and send immediately by registered mail, the long sealed envelope marked 'To be burnt, unopened, by my executors,' and signed by me."

Then followed Power's code signature and his address.

A telegram arrived early. It read:

"Will be with you to-day.

"Lindsay."

So the witches' cauldron was a-boil and none might tell what strange brew it would produce.

Lindsay came. Nancy had described him aptly. The British Army seems to turn out a certain type of tall, straight, clean-limbed, and clear-eyed young officer as though he were cast in a mould. Power appraised him rightly at the first glance—a gentleman, who held honour dear and life cheap, a man of high lineage and honest mind, a Scot with a fox-hunting strain in him, a youngster who would put his horse at a shire fence or lead his company in a forlorn hope with equal nonchalance and determination—not, perhaps, markedly intellectual, but a direct descendant of a long line of cavaliers, whose all-sufficing motto was, "God, and the King."

The two had protracted discussion. Power felt that he must win this somewhat reserved wooer's confidence before he broached the astounding project he had formed.

"I take it," he said at last, seeing that Lindsay was convinced he meant well to Nancy, "I take it Lord Colonsay cannot supplement the small allowance he now makes you?"

"No. It's not to be thought of. Scottish estates grow poorer every decade. Even now Dad makes no pretence of supporting a title. He lives very quietly, and is hard put to it to give me a couple of hundred a year."

"Then I can't see how you can expect to marry the daughter of a very rich man like Hugh Marten."

"Heaven help me, neither do I!"

"Yet you have contrived to fall in love with her?"

"That was beyond my control. She has told you what happened. I fought hard against what the world calls a piece of folly. I—avoided her. There is, there can be, no sort of engagement between us, unless——"

"Unless what?"

"Oh, it is a stupid thing to say, but you American millionaires do occasionally get hipped by the other fellow. If Marten came a cropper, I'd have my chance."

Power laughed quietly. "You are a true Briton," he said. "You think there is no security for money except in trustee stocks. Well, I won't disturb your faith. Now, I want you to call on Mr. Marten to-morrow and ask him formally for his daughter's hand."

"Then the fat will be in the fire." Evidently, Philip and Nancy were well mated.

"Possibly; but it is the proper thing to do."

"But, Mr. Power, you can't have considered your suggestion fully. Suppose Mr. Marten even condescends to listen? His first question floors me. I have my pay and two hundred a year. I don't know a great deal about the cost of ladies' clothes, but I rather imagine my little lot would about buy Nancy's hats."

"In this changeable climate she would certainly catch a severe cold. But you are going to tell Mr. Marten that the day you and Nancy sign a marriage contract your father will settle half a million sterling on you and half a million on Nancy. So the fat spilled in the fire should cause a really fine flare-up."

Military training confers calmness and self-control in an emergency; but the Honourable Philip Lindsay obviously thought that his new friend had suddenly gone mad.

"I really thought you understood the position," he began again laboriously. "I haven't gone into the calculation, but I should say, offhand, that our place in Scotland wouldn't yield half a million potatoes."

"To speak plainly, then, I mean to give you the money; but it must come through the Earl of Colonsay. Further, if Marten hums and haws about the amount, ascertain what sum will satisfy him. A million between you, in hard cash, ought to suffice, because Marten has many millions of his own."

Lindsay could not choose but believe; for Power had an extra measure of the faculty of convincing his fellow-men. He stammered, almost dumfounded:

"You make a most generous offer, an amazingly generous one. You almost deprive me of words. But I must ask—why?"

"Because, had life been kinder, Nancy would have been my daughter and not Marten's. Yours is a proper question, and I have answered it; so I hope you will leave my explanation just where it stands. I mean to enlighten you more fully in one respect. Your host, Mr. Dacre, is a well-known man, and you will probably accept what he says as correct. After dinner I shall ask him to tell you that I can provide a million sterling on any given date without difficulty."

"Mad as it sounds, Mr. Power, I believe you implicitly."

"You must get rid of that habit where money is concerned. If you appease Mr. Marten, you will have control of a great sum, and you should learn at the outset to take no man's unsupported word regarding its disposal or investment."

Lindsay went to his room with the manner of a man walking on air. Nothing that he had ever heard or read compared in any degree with the fantastic events of the last hour. He could not help accepting Power's statement; yet every lesson of life combated its credibility. It is not surprising, therefore, that he should be nervous and distrait when he reappeared; but Dacre soon put him at ease.

"Power has been telling me how he took your breath away, Mr. Lindsay," he said. "But that is a way he has. When you and he are better acquainted you will cease to marvel at anything he says, or does. On this one point, however, I want to speak quite emphatically. Mr. Power is certainly in a position to give you a millions pounds if he chooses, and, bearing in mind the history of his early life, and the high esteem in which he held Nancy Marten's mother, I can sympathise with and appreciate the motives which inspire his present effort to secure that young lady's happy marriage."

But this incident is set down here merely to show how Power tried to make smooth the way by using his wealth. He himself placed no reliance in its efficacy. Lindsay went to Valescure Castle in high feather; but came back angered and perplexed. Marten sad listened politely. There was not the least semblance of annoyance in his manner. He simply dismissed the suitor with quiet civility. When Lindsay, stung to protest, raised the question of finances, the other heard him out patiently.

"In different conditions I might have been inclined to consider your claim," he said, when Lindsay had made an end. "Allow me to congratulate you on your position, which renders you a suitable parti for almost any alliance—except with my daughter. No, believe me, my decision is final," for he could not know how ironical was his compliment, and took the young man's uneasy gesture as heralding a renewal of the argument. "Miss Marten is pledged elsewhere. She will marry Prince Montecastello."

"I have reason to know, sir, that the gentleman you have mentioned is utterly distasteful to Nancy," broke in the other.

Marten's face darkened; he lost some of his suave manner. "Have you been carrying on a clandestine courtship with my daughter?" he asked.

"No. A man bearing my name has no reason to shun daylight. That I have not sought your sanction earlier is due to the fact that I did not dream of marrying Nancy until a stroke of good fortune enabled me to come to you almost on an equal footing. Perhaps I have put that awkwardly, but my very anxiety clogs my tongue. Nancy and I love each other. She hates this Italian. Surely that is a good reason why you, her father, should not rule me out of court so positively."

Marten rose and touched an electric bell. It jarred in some neighbouring passage, and rang the knell of Lindsay's hopes.

"I think we understand each other," he said, with chilling indifference. "My answer is no, Mr. Lindsay, and I look to you, as a man of honour, not to see or write to my daughter again."

Now, it is not in the Celtic nature to brook such an undeservedly contemptuous dismissal; but Power had counselled his protege to keep his temper, whatever happened. Still, he could not leave Marten in the belief that his stipulation was accepted.

"I give no pledge of that sort," he said dourly.

"Very well. It simply means that Miss Marten will be protected from you."

"In what way?"

Marten laughed, a trifle scornfully. "You are young, Mr. Lindsay," he said, "or you would see that you are speaking at random. I hear a footman coming. He will show you out. But, before you go, let me inform you that, so long as you remain in this part of Devonshire, Miss Marten will have less liberty of action than usual; and that will be vexing, because she is interested in some bazaar——"

Then Lindsay's frank gaze sought and held the coldly hostile eyes of the man who was insulting him. "In that event," he broke in, "you leave me no option but to state that I return to Aldershot by the first available train. It would appear, Mr. Marten, that I value your daughter's happiness rather more than you do."

He went out defeated, but every inch a cavalier. No sword clanked at his heels; yet he held his head high, though his soul was torn with despair. He saw nothing of Nancy. She had gone for a ride into the wilds of Exmoor, and had not the least notion that her lover passed through the gates of Valescure an hour before she entered them.

Power heard Lindsay's broken story in silence. Even Marten's callous threat of confining Nancy to the bounds of the castle left him outwardly unmoved.

"I am not altogether unprepared for your failure," he said, gently, when the disconsolate Lindsay had told him exactly what had occurred. "I compliment you on your attitude. As might be expected, you said and did just the right things. I approve of your decision to rejoin your regiment at once. The next step is to prevent Nancy from acting precipitately. I think all may be well, even yet. But you agree that it was necessary you should see Mr. Marten and declare your position?"

"It certainly seems to have settled matters once and for all," came the depressed answer.

"By no means. It has opened the campaign. It is a declaration of war. I need hardly advise you not to have a faint heart when such a fair lady is the prize. No, no, Nancy is not yet Princess Montecastello, nor will she ever be. You may not marry her, Mr. Lindsay, but he will not. I shall clear that obstacle from your path, at all events, and, it may be, assist you materially. My offer still holds good—remember that. For the rest, be content to leave the whole affair to me during the next three weeks. Don't write to Nancy. It will do no good. I'll tell her you were here, why you came, and why you went. Do you trust me?"

"'Pon my soul, I do!" said Lindsay, and their hands met in a reassuring grip.

ANIMALS IN SLEEP

All Sorts of Odd Postures, From Heads Down to Heads Up.

ONLY MAN LIES ON HIS BACK.

Standing During Slumber Is Not Uncommon Among Animals, and Sometimes One Leg Serves as a Support. Poses of the Sloths and the Lemurs.

Sleep indeed is a "gentle thing." It is the supremest form of rest. Our notions of rest during sleep, however, are likely to be a little upset when we come to survey the different postures assumed by various animals during sleep.

To begin with the human race. The majority of mankind probably sleep lying upon the right or left side of the body and with the knees drawn up toward the chin. But certain African tribes, for example, lie upon the back with the head, or rather the back of the neck resting on a bar of wood supported on two short pillars.

The elephant, apparently invariably, and the horse commonly sleep standing. This is really astonishing. Aside from the apparent difficulty of maintaining the balance of the body during these long periods of unconsciousness, one would have supposed that a recumbent position in the case of both these animals was imperative. Cattle and their kind commonly sleep lying down and during many hours of the day they lie down, as when chewing the cud.

More curious still there are creatures which invariably sleep hanging head downward, suspended by their hind feet. The bats afford a case in point. Among the birds we meet with the same strange habit in the little hanging parrots of India and the Malayan region. In this they differ from all other birds, which invariably sleep with the head turned tailward over the back and the beak thrust in among the feathers between the wing and the body, not under the wing, as is commonly believed. No explanation has ever been offered to account for this strange habit. It is followed even by the penguins, wherein the feathers are so short as to fail completely to cover even the back. Owls are, perhaps, the only exception to the rule.

And, by the way, the only other animals which thus turn the head backward after this fashion during sleep are certain peculiar tortoises known as "side necked" tortoises. Certain birds sleep while resting on one leg. This curious pose is well seen in long legged birds like storks and gulls. Ducks generally sleep on open water and to avoid drifting southward, and therefore into the danger zone, they keep constantly paddling with one foot, so that the body always is circling round the chosen sleeping area.

The sloths sleep suspended by their feet and the head tucked in between the forelegs. The no less remarkable African pottos, or slow lemurs, assume a similar pose, but they attach themselves to a vertical instead of a horizontal bough, so that the body rests with the head upward. No animal save man sleeps on his back.

Some animals are said never to sleep and this because the eyes are never closed. The hares, snakes and fishes are commonly supposed to enjoy this unenviable distinction. The notion is, however, quite erroneous. Whale and their kin are often quoted as sleepless creatures. It is supposed that if they made this mistake they would promptly drown!

As a rule darkness induces sleep. With many animals, however, the reverse is the case, as with the bats and owls, for example. This reversal of the usual order has been brought about by the nature of the feeding habits.

Finally one comes to the question, Where does sleep begin? This is by no means easily answered. One is inclined to draw the line at the insects. But since all living things—plants as well as animals—display periodical states of quiescence, perhaps we shall be near the truth in regarding sleep as universal among living things. In the case of plants it is enforced by darkness, save in the case of many bacteria and fungi, which, like evil deeds, grow under the cover of darkness.—Illustrated London News.

Pleasant For the Mistress.

Mistress (discussing housemaid who has given notice)—Well, of course if she wants to go she must. But it seems foolish of her if her only reason is that she wants a change. Back to Nature!

I'd love to be a cave man
With whiskers rich and red
And chase the Lady Primitive
And thump her on the head.

I would not thump her hard enough
To spoil her marcel wave,
But just enough to quiet her
And cart her to my cave.

A simple cave—two rooms and bath—
No frills, no buttoned boys
Nor janitor nor telephone,
Just plain primeval joys.

I'd swipe a pterodactyl wing
And read it with my jaw.
'Twere grippe to live on mammoth steak.
I think I'd like it raw.

I want to be a cave man,
No income tax to pay,
Raw meat to eat, some wives to beat
And naught to do but play.

Ritual of Olden Days.

Very quaint was the custom revived in the Channel Islands by Mr. Daniel Sebire, whose election as member of the Royal Court of Justice at Guernsey for the island of Alderney was annulled because he had been sentenced to a term of imprisonment some years ago. Mr. Sebire knelt bareheaded at the entrance of the court house and raised a "clameur de Haro" against a fresh election being held. This cry of Hare is an old Norman cry for help which is still legally respected in the Channel Islands. Recourse to the custom, however, is exceedingly rare, the last occasion being two centuries ago. The cry runs, "Haro! Haro! Haro! me a l'aide, mon prince, on me fait tort" (Haro! Haro! Haro! To my aid, my prince, a wrong is being done me), and when it has been made all proceedings against the crier must be stopped until the matter has been thrashed out by the courts. It acts as a kind of interim injunction, and is strictly observed by the inhabitants of the islands. The word "Haro" is popularly derived as coming from "Ha! Rollo!" a direct appeal to Rollo, the first Duke of Normandy, but it is probably simply an exclamation to call attention, like "Here!"

Except the Mayor.

Foote, the English comedian, one day dined at a country inn and the landlord asked how he liked his fare.

"I have dined as well as any man in England," said Foote.

"Except the mayor," cried the landlord.

"I except nobody," said he.

"But you must!" screamed the host.

"I won't!"

"You must!"

At length a petty magistrate took Foote before the mayor, who observed that it had been customary in that town for a great number of years always to "except the mayor," and accordingly fined him a shilling for not conforming to ancient custom. Upon this decision, Foote paid the shilling, at the same time observing that he thought the landlord the greatest fool in Christendom—except the mayor.

Undaunted Kitten.

A kitten belonging to the woman centenarian saved from the village fire at Little Chesterford, Essex, Eng., refuses to leave the burnt cottage which had been its home. The centenarian is now in hospital, and no one else can induce the kitten to leave the ruins.

A policeman seemed to be the only one whom the kitten allowed to touch it, but even he could not get it to leave, or to eat.

"A stork with lor and bill palsy."

"Ah, no, no, no; you're wrong! Just guess again."

HOW THIN PEOPLE CAN PUT ON FLESH
A New Discovery
This men and women—that big, hearty filling dinner you ate last night. What became of all the fat-producing nourishment it contained? You haven't gained in weight one ounce. That food passed from your body like unburned coal through an open grate. The material was there, but your food doesn't work and stick. And the plain truth is you hardly get enough nourishment from your meals to pay for the cost of cooking. This is true of thin folks the world over. Your nutritive organs, your functions of assimilation, are sadly out of gear and need reconstruction.
Cut out the foolish foods and fussy sawdust diets. Omit the flesh creasing rub-ons. Cut out everything but the meals you are eating now and eat with every one of these a single Sargol tablet. In two weeks note the difference. Five to eight good solid pounds of healthy, "stay there" fat should be the net result. Sargol charges your weak, stagnant blood with millions of fresh new red blood corpuscles—gives the blood the carrying power to deliver every ounce of fat-making material in your food to every part of your body. Sargol, too, mixes with your food and prepares it for the blood in easily assimilated form. Thin people gain all the way from 10 to 25 pounds a month while taking Sargol, and the new flesh [illegible] Sargol tablets are a concentrated extract of one of the best flesh-producing elements known to chemistry. They come 60 tablets to a package and are pleasant, harmless and inexpensive, and all druggists sell them subject to an absolute guarantee of weight increase or money back.

German Gleanings.

Berlin has nearly 83,000 unmarried women.

About 60 per cent of the population of Germany dwells in cities.

Germany has, on an average, 800 orchard trees to the square mile. Of these there are 372 plum, 251 apple, 119 pear and 104 cherry.

Collapsible water towers used by the Berlin fire department are but five feet long when closed, but can be extended to throw a level stream of water into the eighth floor of a building.

WASHINGTON.

First in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen, he was second to none in the humble and endearing scenes of private life. Pious, just, humane, temperate and sincere, uniform, dignified and commanding, his example was as edifying to all around him as were the effects of that example lasting. To his equals he was condescending, to his inferiors kind and to the objects of his affections exemplarily tender. Correct throughout, vice shuddered in his presence, and virtue always felt the fostering hand. The purity of his private character gave effulgence to his public virtues. His last scene comported with the whole tenor of his life. Although in extreme pain, not a sigh, not a groan, escaped him, and, with undisturbed serenity, he closed his well spent life. Such was the man America has lost. Such was the man for whom our nation mourns.—Henry Lee's Funeral Oration on Washington.

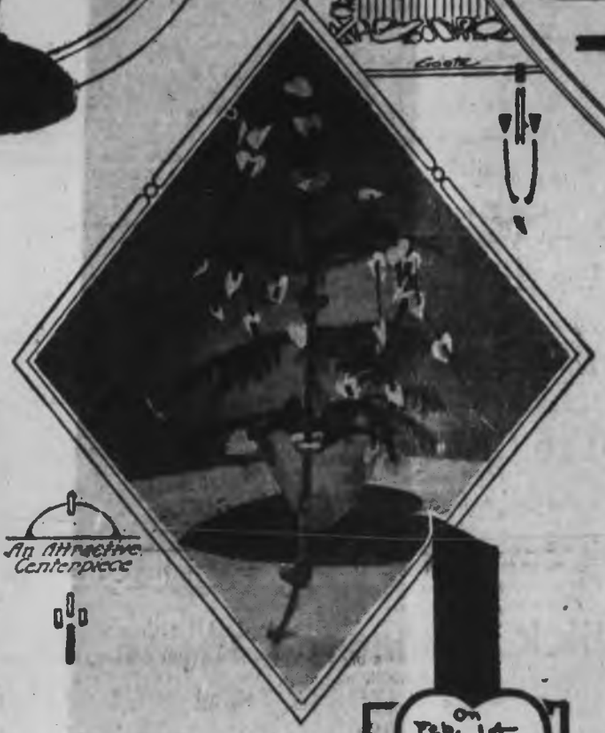
WORK for the WOMANLY BRAIN and HAND

WHEN HEARTS ARE IN COMMAND

The Lamp Made Appropriately Decorated

A Heart for Each Guest



An Attractive Centerpiece

For Favors

"Tomorrow is St. Valentine's day,
All in the morning betime,
And I a maid at your window
To be your valentine."

OPHELIA sang this little verse as she realized, in her madness, that this is the day set apart for true lovers. Many generations of lovers have made this day, under the patronage of the good Saint Valentine, a holiday surrounded with an atmosphere distinctly alluring. Even in this prosaic age we catch a whiff of the sweet lavender and rose leaves which still hover about the box of mementos stored away in the cedar chests of our great-grandmothers.

The lace-paper and flower-decorated valentines were opened with trembling fingers and fluttering hearts, while a blush suffused the countenance as the love messages were read.

The paper is brown with age, but this only serves the romance, which lingers about those faded bits of lace, ribbon and red, red hearts.

Modern maidens should strive to preserve the sentiment of St. Valentine's day by celebrating it in a fitting manner.

A valentine party offers a wide scope for the hostess to utilize her originality. These few suggestions may help those who lack time to plan an evening's entertainment.

Since hearts are the principal feature of Valentine's day, they must be used with lavish extravagance in the decorations. From red cardboard or heavy paper cut quantities of hearts of different sizes. This can be more easily accomplished if the paper is folded as many times as possible.

Strings of these hearts can be used to decorate the windows, doorways and chandeliers, and others should be festooned about the edge of the table.

If you serve a buffet supper, an attractive centerpiece may be arranged in this manner: Procure a small spruce tree and place it firmly in a pot. From red paper cut three hearts, of sufficient size to cover the pot, and fasten them to the pot with mucilage. Red ribbon two or three inches wide may be used to hold the hearts in place and the ends tied in a pretty bow.

From red paper cut a large heart, to correspond with those used on the pot, which will serve for a doily on which the tree is placed. On narrow, red ribbon string plenty of hearts and hang these from the branches of the tree.

All the lamp and candle shades should be decorated with hearts hung from ribbons, and with a little ingenuity these can be arranged to produce really artistic effects.

Plain white candleshades are purchasable at the shops where crepe paper is sold, and these, if decorated with hearts tinted with watercolor paints, are extremely attractive. A fringe of tiniest red hearts hung from the lowest edge of the shades adds an unusual touch.

An attractive method of inviting your guests is to cut two white hearts from paper and thread them on red ribbon. To do this successfully, two slashes are cut in each heart and through these the ribbon is drawn. On the first heart write the date on which the party is to be given and on the lower one your address.

If possible, have these "hearty invitations" delivered by a small boy who will suggest Dan Cupid.

When your guests have assembled, take strings of hearts on each of which is written the name of a famous lover or his sweetheart.

History and romance will supply you with an almost endless lot of couples; for instance, Francesca and Paolo; Hero and Leander; Harlequin and Columbine; Dante and Beatrice; Petrarch and Laura; Heloise and Abelard; Portia and Bassanio; Antony and Cleopatra; Pelleas and Melisande; Romeo and Juliet; Helen and Paris, and Aucassin and Nicolette. Distribute the sweethearts among the girls and the "lovers" among the boys and have them "match up" for the dance, game or supper.

An appropriate menu for a St. Valentine's supper or luncheon consists of:

Fruit Cocktails
Chicken Salad — Wafers
Sandwiches
Olives — Salted Nuts — Bonbons
Ice Cream — Cakes
Coffee

Decorate the cocktails with tiny hearts cut from maraschino cherries and have the sandwiches heart-shaped and the ice cream molded in the shape of hearts.

It will not be a difficult matter to procure little heart-shaped cakes at the bakeshops.

Favors always play a conspicuous part in the Valentine's day party, and for the ladies have the lovely boutonnieres of artificial flowers which come in so many attractive forms. Mount these on hearts cut from red paper, on which the name of the guest is then written. For the men have heart-shaped keyrings of silver, which are not expensive if the plain designs are chosen.

Heart-shaped bonbon dishes and receptacles for salted nuts may be had at the confectioner's, who also has a supply of heart-shaped candies for St. Valentine's day.

An amusement which is always a success at a party of this variety is to provide the guests with tissue or crepe paper, scrap pictures, narrow ribbon and mucilage, requesting them to make valentines. Allow twenty minutes or a half hour for this purpose, and award a suitable prize to the maker of the most artistic valentine.

"Hail to thy returning festival, old Bishop Valentine! Great immortal go-between! Who and what manner of person art thou?

"Art thou but a name typifying the restless principle which impels poor humans to seek perfection in union? Or wert thou indeed a mortal prelate with thy tippet and thy apron on, and decent lawn sleeves?

"Mysterious personage! Like unto thee, assuredly there was no other mitred father in the calendar. Thou comest attended with thousands and tens of thousands of little loves, and the air is 'Brushed with the kiss of rustling wings.'

"This is the day on which these charming little missives called valentines cross and intercross each other at every turning."

Do not allow the day to pass unrecognized.

TABLE COVERS AND OTHER DETAILS

By Ethel Davis Seal

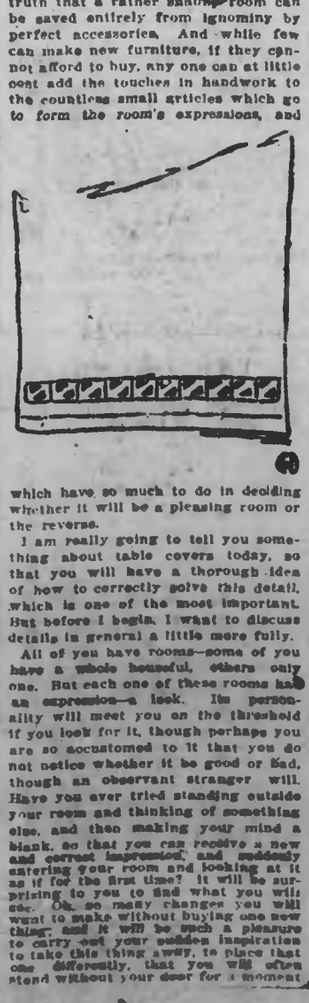
NOW that Christmas is well in the background, and we have had time to recover from the attendant rush and bustle, and with still a goodly number of weeks before our modern Easter claims us, let us turn our attention to some of the details of our houses—details which, in this strenuous life, are often sadly neglected. For details are important, no matter how correct and faultless may be our furniture; a homely set of pillows, a cut-glass vase of flowers, a florid jardiniere, a too-brightly colored picture, a sloppy table cover—or one in poor taste—will mar any room. And just one of these can do it.

The rule can be inverted most beautifully, too, and it can be said with truth that a rather shabby room can be saved entirely from ignominy by perfect accessories. And while few can make new furniture, if they cannot afford to buy, any one can at little cost add the touches in handwork to the countless small articles which go to form the room's expressions, and in order to enter your room with clear vision and an open mind. It will be good for you as well as for your room; it will train your observation, quicken your judgment and educate your taste. And you will find that in other rooms you will be able to mentally change things about and make improvements its owner wots not of—changes which you will wish that you only dared make in reality. But even if you can't, you will find it great fun to exercise your new faculties of observation, taste and imagination.

Which reminds me of a man I know who travels a great deal in the New York subway and sometimes passes his time and gets great amusement from imagining the passengers dressed up in each other's clothes, and gets delightful effects in which a derby hat, a pegtop skirt and a cowhide boot, size 9, may figure very laughably.

I don't know why the average homemaker feels in furnishing her room, that she has to have it full. After she has all the necessary furniture in it (and we should only have just enough furniture to meet the daily needs), if there are any open spaces at all, they annoy her and she crowds them with pictures, vases, pillows, overcrowded tables—anything, everything, just to make it look "cosy." Why, I know a man who admired brass plaques and bought ten in varying sizes, and he had them stuck up in every conceivable bare spot on his lower floor. The effect was ludicrous. I know a woman who was upset by a bare mahogany table holding a really excellent handmade bowl of flowers, and wasn't content until she had laid a "tidy" on it, two photographs, a Chinese god and a cologne bottle. If you would only learn to realize the dignity of space. And in this space to have just the right sort of decorations—to have the few details quite perfect. It may be a tea table holding a tea kettle and some old china. It may be a bright bit of color in pillow or table cover. For a table there is almost enough fineness and beauty in just the right kind of a table cover. Not quite, of course, for a little something is required to keep the cover in its place in the scheme of things. And an absolutely correct and beautiful table cover will make everything else nearly 10 per cent better looking—the owner included!

In a quite beautiful room furnished in mahogany, I noticed on the table in the center of the room a natural linen square table cover embroidered in red and green, with a heavy thread lace edge. This table cover wasn't atrocious, but it was just bad enough to make one glance again at the decidedly good furniture to see if it was quite so good, after all. What should have been on that mahogany table was a runner of crash. This runner could have been stenciled, embroidered or plain.



For living room tables, either long or square, large or small, the runner is the best covering. For the average table 2 to 2½ yards is ample. The ends are usually hemstitched, though sometimes a couched hem makes a pleasant change. This couching, which is very easy to do and is an exceptionally decorative stitch, is also used to outline stenciling, old gold or black silk being advised for general use. A heavy thread of silk is held on the top of the material and guided with the fingers of the left hand in the desired direction. A needle threaded with a length of the same silk is pushed in and out from the wrong to the right side by the right hand, catching and holding down at regular intervals the top thread. A couched runner is shown in the first drawing. Little triangular designs are embroidered in solid king's blue, and a couched line of old gold runs in straight lines around these, with another line of couching on the hem.

Swedish darning is also an effective decoration for a runner. Threads are drawn as for hemstitching, only usually the width of the drawing runs to about an inch and a half. This space is darned in with colored cotton in various designs. The principles would be very easy to learn. I believe lessons are given in the department stores.

Stenciling, the old standby, is always effective, provided a good design is chosen, good colors are used and neatness and care are observed.

For round tables, a round cloth of ecru linen or of the pervading room color, stenciled in dull tones and in size coming to about two inches of the table edge, is good, especially when the table is too beautiful to hide. Also a large square cover is an excellent choice, the size from side to side measuring about a foot wider than the table's diameter. This may be hemmed or hemstitched if of crash, hemmed or supplied with a narrow white upholstering fringe if of chintz, hemmed or couched if of monk's cloth or arras. Stenciling or embroidery is an attractive finish for a table cover of this kind. A correct type of stencil pattern is shown in the second sketch.

A large table cover should only be of cretonne when the table is in a large, restful room or when the room seems to require this rich touch of color.

Great care should be used in choosing such material. A prominent allover design need not necessarily be spotty.

A small runner for a tea table is much better than a white cloth, no matter how fine the embroidery. White tea cloths are not used much nowadays, the runner being all sufficient for most simple tea serving. And the more elaborate silver tea service is usually supplied with a tray, whereby making it possible to dispense with a cloth in any form. The use of the runner for a simple tea table is shown in the third drawing. It goes without saying that this is more effective than the old-time big white cloth.

The fourth sketch shows a stenciled or embroidered centerpiece, with plate doilies to match, for setting the dining table. These are in dull tones of blue, old rose, green and brown or ecru linen. Either these or the scheme of two runners going side by side the length of the dining table gives the charming and up-to-date touch to the most interesting dining room.

With a final word in the shape of another runner suitable for a living room table and shown in the last drawing I will bow myself out, hoping to talk to you again next week on—— But I guess you had better wait and see!

THE ENTERTAINER

A Snow Frolic

THE month of January, with its ice-covered lakes and snow-blanketed fields, offers the proper setting for a snow frolic. This may be an entertainment for children or their elders—both will find it interesting. If possible, arrange for the party after a snowstorm. Send out invitations decorated with watercolor sketches representing scenes in the mountain or country. Decorate the home with evergreens, which may be brought from the neighboring woods, and sprinkle them with snowdrifts of cotton.

At the shops where favors are sold snowballs fashioned of cotton are purchasable. These come in different sizes, and can be utilized effectively in the decorations. Suspend these in a shower from the chandelier, using narrow white or red ribbon for the purpose. If these are not to be had in your locality they can be made with very little expense or trouble. Take a piece of ordinary cotton batting and roll it between the hands to form a snowball. Cover the outside with a dusting of snowdust, which will stick readily to the cotton.

Have the guests come in costume if the party is given at night. This always adds interest to the winter party. Jolly characters to portray would represent Old Christmas, Jack Frost, the Fairy Queen, Ice Sprites, Snowballs, Snow Birds, Snowdrops or the North Wind. Accompanying the latter have a bear dressed to represent Dr. Cook, and an Arctic explorer to represent Mr. Peary, who may also be a sprinkling of polar bears, Eskimos and holly elves.

When the guests have assembled invite them to the snow cave, which is a room decorated to resemble a cave. The walls should be covered with white crepe paper dotted with tufts of cotton, and a number of icicles may be effectively arranged by fastening small bits of cotton from the cotton, using white thread of unequal lengths for this purpose. About the edge of the cave arrange a row of snow mounds, on which the guests are seated. These are made by covering small boxes with white paper. If you number among your friends talented dancers, have them arrange for a special dance which will represent the revels of snow fairies or the joy of the ice sprites. A short play could also be arranged if you are original and talented along this line. A snow frolic is not complete without dancing, so arrange for this in another room.

Serve a buffet supper, and have the table tastefully decorated with white and green. For the centerpiece have a mirror wreathed with white flowers to simulate a frozen lake. On its glassy surface have tiny dolls in skating costumes or drawing miniature sleds. Place white shades over the candles and have appropriate favors, such as thermometers, tiny snowshoes, sleds, skates or any article fashioned of glass. You will have no difficulty in finding these, for there is a wide variety to choose from, namely, paperweights, candlesticks, bead necklaces, dishes, vases or mirrors.

Serve only cold refreshments, which need not be elaborate. Sandwiches, salad, wafers, cakes, ices, bonbons, salted nuts, olives and fruit punch will be sufficient.

Spend the balance of the evening in games, and end the evening's fun with a snowball battle out of doors. This of course should be when the guests have their topcoats on and are in no danger of taking cold.

If your home happens to be near a lake, skating may be included in the entertainment. This will, however, make fancy costumes an impossibility.

By all means, entertain your friends at a snow frolic.

Baby Eczema Becomes Chronic

Causing Great Suffering and Anxiety —Prompt Relief and Cure by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

This is one reason why every mother should know about Dr. Chase's Ointment, since it is an unfailing cure for all itching skin diseases.

Mrs. F. Clarke, Belmont, Man., writes:—"My baby had eczema on her ear. The sore was very bad, and nothing seemed to do her much good. Hearing of the remarkable cures Dr. Chase's Ointment was making, we sent for some, and after the third application the sore began to heal. I am glad to say that it is quite well now, and we give the credit to Dr. Chase's Ointment. We cannot recommend this preparation too highly."

Here is another letter, which tells of the cure of a five-weeks-old baby: Mrs. Wallace Mingon, River John Road, Colchester County, N.S., writes: "My little girl took eczema when she was five weeks old. Though we doctored her until she was nearly a year old, she got no better. I was advised to use Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this treatment completely cured her."

GEMS OF THOUGHT.

There is an education that comes to the soul from vital faith in God and a power for good upon society that abstract right cannot give: that in atheistic or agnostic morality, set upon the pinnacle of altruism, is utterly unable to supply.—George A. Gordon.

The good never dies. Evil dies. Cruelty, oppression, selfishness, greed—these die, but nobility, love, sacrifice, generosity, truth, thank God for it, small as they are, difficult as it is to discover them—these live forever: these are eternal.—Frank Norris.

I believe freedom to be the first condition of moral life. It needs, however, to be accompanied by much instruction. It is like money in this—that in order to profit by it one must know how to use it properly.—Julia Ward Howe.

Charity's Reward

It Came at a Rummage Sale.

By MURIEL HAYNES.

"Dicky Ames, you're the most provoking"—

"But best brother that ever lived," concluded Richard Ames. "Look here, Maude. I'll give up my intention of taking Miss Hempsted out driving and devote the time instead to the noble cause of rummage, but only with the understanding that if I give up the society of the beautiful Miss Hempsted for sweet charity I am to pick my own company.

"The way you fired me at Nella Brewster's head the night of the church sociable was nothing short of indecent. If she doesn't want to speak to me again why should you deprive her of that satisfaction?"

"It's not a satisfaction," insisted Dick's sister. "Nella is as utterly miserable as you, and you know it."

"She didn't look that way this afternoon when I passed her skating with Ben Harkinson," commented Dick.

"She's game. She would smile if she had the toothache and happened to see you coming," persisted Maude. "She wouldn't let you see that she was hurt by the way you have acted, but—well, any woman can see that she is dreadfully hurt."

"So much hurt that she could not answer a letter of abject apology I sent her," suggested Dick.

"Did you really send it?" demanded Maude curiously. "She says she never got it and that you didn't even answer hers."

"Because there was none to answer," retorted Dick. "Come on, now! Let us get down to the church and to that charity which is its own reward."

Maude paused uncertainly. It was the first time that Dick had spoken freely about his quarrel with Nella Brewster, and she wanted to sound the trouble to its greatest depths. But here was Dick drawing off just as she had seemed about to reach the bottom.

That the trouble had been trivial at the start she knew, and with two persons like her brother and Nella it was hard to tell where the trouble might end, but the chances were that they would drift farther and farther apart.

Meekly she slipped into her wraps and prepared for the walk to the church, where a rummage sale for the poor was being prepared.

Old clothes were pouring in to be sold to the needy for whatever their slender purses could afford. When Maude led Dick into the Sunday school room he whistled in surprise at the stacks of clothing.

"I didn't know that there were so many old clothes in town," he declared wonderingly, and one of the workers directed him briskly toward one of the piles.

"This is only the first lot," she said. "These are the men's and boys' clothes. Will you help get those straightened out? We want them sorted roughly by sizes."

Dick followed the example of the other men in the room and slipped off his coat before he attacked the pile of garments.

Here were clothes of all sizes and weights, and as he picked up the first garment one of the men on the other side called to him.

"Better go through all the pockets first. I found a dollar bill in a vest awhile ago, and Cheevers did better than that. He found two."

"We should leave them in the clothing," suggested Dick. "Perhaps the donors put them there on purpose."

"They forgot them," declared the other man as he turned to lay a coat on its proper heap, and Dick again bent to his task.

The pile of clothing seemed formidable, but with half a dozen men working briskly they had disposed of the entire lot before the mounds of feminine wear were half sorted.

"They are stopping all the time to talk about styles," explained Cheevers. "The moment they get a dress that is out of the ordinary they all stop to see how it's made."

"I heard Gracie Chester say that at last she could be certain that Mrs. Pomeroy's dress wasn't silk lined," answered Dick, with a chuckle.

"By the way," went on Cheevers, "here's something I found in the overcoat of the little darkey that the Brewsters brought up from the south with them last winter. Looks as though Alexander had been holding out some letters on you."

He passed over a thin package of letters, and Dick gasped. The envelopes were grimy and worn, but he could see that they were some letters from himself that never had been delivered and others from Nella that had shared the same fate.

He recognized even the letter in which he had sought to win forgiveness for all he had said during their last quarrel—a quarrel which had started over some of her letters which he now held in his hand for the first time.

There was a bulky one from Nella that he opened first, and his heart glowed as he realized that without waiting for him to speak Nella had written her own letter of forgiveness.

It was clear now. Alexander was worse than forgetful. He could not forget because he never seemed to know anything.

The letters that were handed him he failed to deliver and then lied out of it when he was taxed. Now Nella was angry because Dick had not answered her gracious little note, and he could not blame her when he knew that she never had received any of his more recent letters.

He slipped the package into his pocket with a word of thanks to Cheevers, and then he left the "sorting" of the rummage sale to look for Nella.

He met her just leaving her home, and as he came up the walk she regarded him curiously.

"I came to deliver my letters in person and to make certain of their delivery," announced Dick. "Can you give me a few minutes?"

Nella made no move to re-enter the house, and Dick was too wise to press the point.

"I was helping Maude at the rummage sale," he explained. "Cheevers found these letters in Alexander's old overcoat. I might explain that when I left my letter—this thick one—Alexander was just going out, and he had his overcoat on when he came to the door, but he promised to deliver it to you at once. His idea of delivery seem to be to stuff things in his pocket and forget all about them."

Nella started as she recognized her own letters, and hastily she glanced over some of them. She saw in a moment what Dick had already realized, and her lips trembled as she recalled the misery she had suffered since the quarrel.

She loved Dick very dearly, even well enough to offer forgiveness when she had felt that he was in the wrong, and to have him make no reply to the kindly letter had hurt both heart and pride.

Now she could see that Dick had promptly cancelled his error and that all the suffering had been caused by one small and very black youngster, who had been brought home from the south because he had seemed so "cute."

"I am afraid that Alexander will never make a messenger for Cupid," said Nella softly. "I am so sorry, Dick, that we trusted too much to him, but I had no idea that he was so careless. Think of the trouble that he has caused us both! Will you come in and"—

"Make up?" asked Dick promptly. "To be sure I will and only too glad to do it."

She led the way into the house, and as the great hall door swung shut behind them he caught her in his arms and covered her face with kisses. A low chuckle from the far end of the hall disturbed them, and without a word Dick darted down into the shadows.

There followed wild yells and the sound of strange expletives. Dick came back flushed, but smiling.

"I shook him some," he explained, "for both you and me. Wasn't it just like Alexander to be hanging around?"

"He will be sent home," declared Nella. "We cannot trust him again. You were a dear, Dick, that you didn't kill him."

"I wanted to," admitted Dick; "but, then, what's the use? I've got you again, and all because I helped Maude at the rummage sale. She said that charity, like virtue, was its own reward, but I didn't realize the high premium I paid."

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Pain in the Feet.

In many cases pain in the feet is owing to the presence of corns or bunions. But there are more obscure affections that cause pain in walking. Two of the most common are flat foot and the opposite condition—an overhigh arch.

When the arch is too high the weight of the body is not properly distributed, but falls on the heel and the ball of the foot. In flat foot the pain is most severe in the early stages, when the fibrous sheet that stretches between the ball of the foot and the heel has to do all the work of keeping the foot in shape, since the ligaments that are meant to support the arch are already weakened and elongated. After this fibrous structure—the Plantar fascia it is called—has yielded and the flat foot is fully established the pain is much less acute.

When both heels are painful it usually means either that flat foot is beginning or that the rheumatic or gouty tendency is declaring itself. When only one heel is affected the cause is usually bruise or strain. As soon as the doctor discovers the source of the trouble he must try to remove it, and the patient can often help him.

The Short-Memoried Public and The Long-Headed Advertiser

WHY, do you suppose, does a certain successful manufacturer of a summer beverage continue to advertise that beverage in the winter-time?

He is, simply, a thorough believer in the old adage: "Out-of-sight, out-of-mind."

He does not advertise in the winter, with any expectation of selling much of his product while the weather is cold—but with a view of keeping up his sales the following summer. Pronounced as is the impression his advertising creates in the summer, he does not believe in expecting that impression to "carry over" the winter months.

The public has not a long memory. The manufacturers who want lasting patronage for their product must indeed "keep everlastingly at it." How surprising that some of them lose sight of this fact.

Experience has shown this maker of beverages that it is unwise to discontinue his advertising in the winter.

It would be just as unwise for the makers of shoes, or hats, or stoves, or chocolates, or automobiles, to cease advertising in the summer.

Yes, the "out-of-sight, out-of-mind" theory is sound, as applied to advertising. It is but human of us to favour the goods which are kept continually before us through advertising, be the weather cold or not.

You can obtain helpful advice on advertising free of cost and without obligation, by consulting the Business Department of The EVENING EXAMINER.

LONDON, July 3.—(C.A.P. To Ward Off Summer Complexion Ills

To keep the face smooth, white and beautiful all summer there's nothing quite so good as ordinary mercolized wax. Over freckled or discolored skin, so completely does the cream in quality absorbed, the outer skin is gradually removed by the newer, fresh skin beneath. The face exhibits no trace of the wax, the latter being applied at bedtime and washed off morning. Blemishes, freckles and roughness, on the other hand, are apt to appear more conspicuous than usual these days of excessive perspiration. Just get an ounce of mercolized wax at any drug store and use like cold cream. This will help any skin at once, and in a week or so the complexion will look remarkably youthful and healthy.

Sun, wind and flying dust often cause squinting and other distortions which make wrinkles, but you can quickly get rid of every wrinkle, however produced, by using a harmless face bath made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in 1-2 pt. witch hazel.

MANY TO BE DEPORTED.

Government Will Take Drastic Measures With Useless Immigrants.

OTTAWA, July 3. — Unemployed immigrants in Canadian cities who have been in Canada less than three years and have become public charges will be deported by the Immigration Department under the act after notification by the secretary of the municipality concerned.

This was the announcement made by Mr. W. D. Scott, superintendent of immigration, last evening, and it furnishes a possible solution for some of the labor troubles which Canadian cities are experiencing just now. By far the largest proportion of those out of work in Halifax, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Winnipeg and other centres are foreigners, and of these many have come to Canada within the last three years. If the secretary of the city certifies that certain of these people have become public charges—that is, have accepted charity or relief from charitable institutions—the department will carry out that clause of the Immigration Act which provides for their deportation at the expense of the transportation company which brought them here.

This announcement was made by Mr. Scott yesterday to a delegation of Bulgarians and Ruthenians which waited on him in regard to the problem of finding employment. The workings of the Immigration Act were explained to them, and they were told that it would be strictly enforced. They were, however, all offered employment on farms if they were willing to take it up, and this proposal will be considered by them.

ERIN MAN HELD UP.

Road Agents Rob Alvin Carmichael on Way Home.

GUELPH, July 3.—Alvan Carmichael of Erin was held up by two men on the Erin road Wednesday night about eight o'clock, and deprived of his watch and all the money he had on his person. Mr. Carmichael had been into Guelph on business and was on his way home when he was confronted by two men, one of whom seized the horse by the head, the other, who was armed, ordering him to hand over his watch and money. Mr. Carmichael, seeing the odds were against him, did as he was ordered. A short time before the held-up took place, a farmer passing along the road noticed an automobile without lights on the side of the road near the point where Mr. Carmichael was held up, and it is thought that the highwaymen concerned in the affair, came in the machine. The automobile was traced as far as Erin Village. The only description that Mr. Carmichael could give of the men is that one was tall and the other short, and that both wore peaked caps.

WHAT DYSPEPTICS SHOULD EAT

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

"Indigestion and practically all forms of stomach trouble are, nine times out of ten, due to acidity; therefore stomach sufferers should, whenever possible, avoid eating food that is acid in its nature, or which by chemical action in the stomach develops acidity. Unfortunately, such a rule eliminates most foods which are pleasant to the taste, as well as those which are rich in blood, flesh and nerve building properties. This is the reason why dyspeptics and stomach sufferers are usually so thin, emaciated and lacking in that vital energy which can only come from a well fed body. For the benefit of those sufferers who have been obliged to exclude from their diet all starchy, sweet or fatty food, and are trying to keep up a miserable existence on gluten products, I would suggest that you should try a meal of any food or foods which you may like, in moderate amount, eating immediately afterwards a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia in a little hot or cold water. This will neutralize any acid which may be present, or which may be formed, and instead of the usual feeling of uneasiness and fullness, you will find that your food agrees with you perfectly. Bisurated magnesia is doubtless the best food corrective and antacid known. It has no direct action on the stomach; but by neutralizing the acidity of the food contents, and thus removing the causes of of the acid irritation which inflames the delicate stomach lining, it does more than could possibly be done by any drug or medicine. As a physician, I believe in the use of medicine whenever necessary, but I must admit that I cannot see the sense of dosing an inflamed and irritated stomach with drugs instead of getting rid of the acid—the cause of all the trouble. Get a little bisurated magnesia from your druggist, eat what you want at your next meal, take some of the bisurated magnesia as directed above, and see if I am not right."

WILL REAUME RETIRE?

Probability is That Minister of Public Works Will Quit.

TORONTO, July 3. — With every member on hand the Ontario Cabinet held yesterday its first meeting since the election. The session was of a congratulatory order and little work was done.

On Tuesday next, however, a full Cabinet meeting will be held, when various unfinished business of importance that has had to wait for the election will be taken up.

The most pressing item before the Government at present is the appointment of commissioners to administer the Workmen's Compensation Act. It is expected that the appointment of commissioners will be made in the near future.

The future course of Hon. Dr. Reaume was not indicated yesterday, but a statement will probably be issued at the beginning of the week. The Minister spent the day attending to departmental business. He would not discuss his plans. It is stated, however, that Hon. Dr. Reaume will give up his portfolio and devote himself to his private interests.

The question of a successor, should the Minister drop out, is being canvassed. At the present time there is only one French-Canadian member on the Government side, Morel, of Nipissing, a man who has never taken much part in the proceedings of the House, and who cannot be considered as Cabinet material. The eastern part of the province is understood to be urging the promotion of one of three men from eastern ridings. Hon. Dr. Preston, T. W. McGarry of Renfrew and G. Howard Ferguson would be the most likely candidates.

MEXICO CITY, July 3.—In spite of the insistent advice of Sir Lionel Carden, the British Minister, only 26 British subjects, mostly women and children, left for Vera Cruz at seven o'clock yesterday morning on their way to Jamaica. Several who had declared to leave were deterred from doing so at the last moment by the high rate of foreign exchange, the Mexico peso to-day being worth only 27 cents of American money.

FISHERMAN FINDS BODY.

Angler at Haileybury Reveals What May Be Murder.

HAILEYBURY, Ont., July 3.—What appears to be a case of foul play came to light yesterday when Joe Sherill dashed up a dead body at the end of his line as he was angling at the end of the Haileybury wharf. The body of the man was identified as that of Frank O'Leary, a camp cook. There is a wound on the back of his head which doctors think may have caused death before he was thrown into the water.

A post-mortem is being held to ascertain as far as possible if the wound could have caused death. An inquest will be held to-day.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A MISAPPREHENSION

Mira Morton stood in the dahlia-bordered patch picking the gorgeous blossoms. In her white dress with its blue girdle and a blue band in her hair she made an extraordinarily effective picture among the flowers.

"A typical snow maiden," thought Captain Patch, as his motor car shot out of a side street and came alongside the pretty vision.

"Oh, Miss Morton!" he called. "Get your hat and come for a run. The air is glorious."

"Thank you, but I've an engagement in half an hour. I couldn't possibly."

"May I come in and see the flowers then, and stop until you have to go?"

He fancied she hesitated, though in the next instant she said, "Certainly, if you like," and moved toward him.

Captain Patch sprang out, vaulted the stone wall and joined her. "What a horticultural display," he said, looking around him. "Do you know I think I shall adopt the dahlia as my favourite flower forthwith."

"That's odd," the girl parried, though not with her usual readiness, Louis Patch thought, and was cast down accordingly. "Mr. Carleton said virtually the same thing the other day."

Louis Patch felt chilled. Why had she said that, introduced Carleton's name when she know how he disliked him? His pride was touched, and he answered quickly: "That only goes to prove that there is more than one man of taste among your acquaintances."

"In dahlias?" she asked quickly, colouring at his tone, but meeting his eye without faltering.

"In dahlias, of course," he retorted.

Where they stood the straight lines of the opposite borders curved in from the walk in two great dahlia-bordered semi-circles, and in the crescents thus formed, garden seats had been placed. Mira led the way to one. "If you're an admirer of dahlias come here and sit, and look at the colours of those opposite us. They are really quite wonderful.

"I can see nothing but blue and white," he said boldly.

"Blue and white?" she repeated, puzzled for an instant, and then blushing furiously.

He touched a fold of her dress, an end of her girdle. "Blue of your eyes, snow of your gown. I love you, Mira."

To his amazement she sprang to her feet and drew away from him. "I feel insulted, Captain Patch!" she said, in a proud but trembling voice.

He was stupid with astonishment. "Insulted!" he repeated vaguely. "Miss Morton!"

"You have behaved inexcusably!" she went on passionately.

"Inexcusably!" he repeated, foolishly.

She laughed a little cutting laugh. "Good afternoon, Captain Patch," she said, and walked off.

Louis Patch watched her go swiftly to the house and enter by a side door. Then he drew a long breath, vaulted the wall again and got into his car. The speed at which he drove off matched in some degree the pace of his thoughts and feelings. Insulted! What possible reason could Miss Morton have had for saying so preposterous a thing as that! It was utterly beyond comprehension.

When the Mortons were opening their mail the next day at lunch Mrs. Morton after glancing through a note uttered an exclamation of regret. "It's from Captain Patch," she said. "He is leaving immediately. Has not time even to come and say good-bye. What do you suppose it means, James?"

"Business, probably." James Morton exchanged a quick glance with his wife. Each asked, had Mira anything to do with it? "You had a note, too, didn't you, Mira?" asked Mr. Moroton. "'Twas the same hand and the same stationery. Does he explain to you?"

"I haven't opened it yet," says the girl in a hard tone. "It can wait. I am hungry."

Nothing more was said while Mira was there, but after she had taken her letters and gone up to her room, Mrs. Morton sighed heavily. "There's something wrong," she said. "Do you suppose she has refused him?"

"She has seemed to like him well enough," said Mr. Morton. "I own I've expected something to come of it. Well, we were mistaken, evidently."

Mrs. Morton was silent for a moment. Then she looked at her husband as if uncertain how he would regard what she was going to say. "Why not call at the hotel on your way down to the office, James, just to say goodbye for us all?"

"That would look well, wouldn't it?" sneered Mr. Morton.

"Oh, dear!" sighed his wife. 'These terrible conventions!" She thought a moment longer and her face cleared. "I have it. He left a lot of photographs here the other evening, family pictures, that he evidently valued inordinately. You'll return them for me won't you, dear? That won't do any violence to the properties."

"Oh, do, James," she added, as he hesitated. "I'm frantic to have you see him."

"I suppose that might do," said James Morton reluctantly.

"It's the most natural thing in the world," insisted his wife. "We've been such friends!" She caught his hand and squeezed it. "And you'll telephone me as soon as you get to the office, won't you?

"Indeed I won't." He spoke inflexibly. "You'll have to wait until I get home. My office telephone is sacred to business."

"Well, if this isn't serious business I don't know what to call it," Mrs. Morton mourned.

In spite of what he had said Mr. Morton did ring his wife up on arriving at his office, although all he said was: "Did you ever notice any inscription on any of those photographs of Patch's, Ada?"

"I don't remember now," she answered eagerly. "Why?"

"That's the gist of the matter in my opinion."

'Oh, tell me!" she begged.

But he had rung off and would not answer her call when she tried to get him, and it was three hours to his return. She did not know how she could get through them.

As she came out of the telephone closet the doorbell rang, and she opened to Captain Patch. "Oh, you are not going!" she cried. 'How nice!"

"I don't know whether I'm going or not," he returned rapidly. "I must see Mira. Where is she?"

"Out among her dahlias, I suppose. Wait. I can see from the window." She looked out, turned and nodded. "Yes, she is there, on a bench half way down."

"There's a misunderstanding. I'm all at sea," confessed Captain Patch. "Yesterday I told Mira I loved her, Mrs. Morton, and she said she felt insulted."

"Captain Patch! how terrible. What could she have meant?"

'She gave me no chance to ask. Mr. Morton thinks we have the clue here." He took a photograph from his pocket and handed it to her. It was a picture of a charming girl, with something quaint and old-fashioned about her costume and hair though neither was very unlike certain fashions prevailing to-day. 'Turn it over,' he said. "It is my uncle's wife at 22."

Mrs. Morton turned it and read some faintly written words: "To Captain Louis Patch, from Judith Coldwell, his wife-to-be." 'Oh," she cried quickly. 'Mira thinks you are the Captain Louis Patch meant, of course.'

"I hope so. I've come to find out."

"Oh, hurry," she cried, shamelessly, and waved him off.

When he had gone she took her work to a verandah on the opposite side of the house and waited. She waited hours, she thought, before the joyous young couple found her there and announced their engagement.

DEATH OF THE HON. JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN

For Many Years He Was One of the Most Outstanding Figures in World of British Politics

BIRMINGHAM'S IDOL

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 3.—Right Honourable Joseph Chamberlain, for many years the most outstanding figure in British politics, died last night, at 10 o'clock, aged 78 years. The cause of death was heart failure, but he succumbed from the protracted illness which, for years, barred him from active public life. All the members of the immediate family were present when the end came, but it was so unexpected to the general public that only one paper, the Birmingham Daily Mail, had the news this morning. Right Honourable Joseph Chamberlain's most popular nick name (he had many) was "Brummagem Joe."

For two generations he practically held the politics of his native City, Birmingham, in the hollow of his hand, and was always elected when he ran for the Commons, and the six fellow members from that city were invariably his nominees. Chamberlain has been both Liberal and Conservative, but his greatest policy was imperialism and tariff reform. He was blamed for starting the South African war. He was the most cordially loved and hated political figure of his time. Chamberlain was wealthy and was thrice married, his third and surviving wife being a native of the United States.

Prepared for any Climate.—Various uniforms used by the Royal North West Mounted Police. James Wallace Sentenced This Morning on a Charge of Theft---Many Cases Before the Court.

A FAMILY ROW

Another long session, in the Police Court, greeted Magistrate Dumble this morning.

Stephen Wilcox, a rather old man who was remanded from the 24th of June for being drunk, was let go this morning, as he will be shipped back to friends in Toronto, who say they want him.

George Sexsmith was charged with allowing his fowl to run at large, thereby causing harm to the garden of Mr. Matthews, 560 Romaine Street. Their arguments over the matter were rehashed in court, Sexsmith telling Matthews that he would see him in h— before he would shut up his chickens, but Magistrate Dumble settled the case by fining Sexsmith $2.

A charge of theft was read against James Wallace, who elected to be tried summarily by Magistrate Dumble. This case came up last week, Wallace pleading guilty, but he was remanded for a week and this morning he pleaded not guilty, Mr. Widdifield defending him. Robert Elliott, who had the money stolen from him, said that he had been boarding with Mrs. Wallace, the prisoner's mother, on Bethune Street, and had left the $60 in a pocket book in a coat which he had put in a valise on a Tuesday. Putting on the coat on Saturday he found that the money was gone and who ever took it, left him $10. Detective Newhall took the stand and said he went to the prisoner's house and arrested the man, on the 24th of June. He said he had the prisoner's fingerprints and these resembled those found on the valise. The prisoner told him he knew he had made a fool of himself, and that he wanted to get out of jail to work and pay the money back. Detective Meagher corroborated Newhall's statement. Wallace admitted that he had been drinking heavily all that week. Some of the charges for which he has appeared in court before are getting drunk four times while on the blacklist, creating a public disturbance, assaulting his mother and stealing one dollar. Magistrate Dumble said that his previous character had been bad and that he found him guilty of the theft of the $50, sentencing him to six months in the Central Prison.

Two families, who reside on Water Street, threshed out a family squabble in Court this morning, in which the defendant was charged with using insulting language. A number of witnesses appeared and gave evidence, and the case was discharged. Mr. Dixon appeared for the defendant, and Mr. Widdifield for the Crown.

Robert Robinson threatened to strangle John Bailey and there seemed to be an outstanding quarrel between these two men, but it is over now as Robinson promised to leave town, and the Court is letting the charge stand over.

HOT ASHES CAUSE FIRE

$200 Blaze on College Street Last Night--Tenants Had Just Left the House

DISCOVERED IN TIME

The Fire Brigade received a telephone call at 8:30 last evening to a fire at 510 College street, caused by smouldering hot ashes.

The tenants left the house only yesterday and the hot ashes were left in the woodshed. The result was that the building was soon ablaze, and the conflagration was gaining access to the house via the back door when the Brigade arrived. A line of hose was laid and the flame extinguished. The damage, which was caused mainly to the woodshed, is estimated at tbout $200.

COW TESTING HAS PROVED ITS VALUE TO DAIRYMEN

One of the many advantages reaped from systematic cow testing is the fact that it not only detects cows of indifferent value (saving dairymen the burden of providing for worthless cows; instead of their having good cows to support them), but also it has has frequently discovered valuable cows.. For instance, a farmer at Ennismore, Ontario, had a small, undersized 'native' cow which he intended to sell, not placing much value on her. But cow testing showed that she is one of the best in the herd both for milk and fat production. Don't sacrifice good cows.

This recalls another cow at Ayers Cliff, Quebec, bought at auction for $28.00 because no one knew her value. Indeed, she was put in with three others as the four poorest in the herd of the man who was selling out. The present owner believes in cow testing, and has refused $100.00 for her; she gave 322 pounds of fat in seven months.

The men who have built up herds that average 8,000 or 9,000 pounds of milk per cow are just those men who know, through having proved it, that cow testing pays. Your cow may be like fancy china, of very fine appearance, but they may not wear well. But the tested cows, that do produce, that do wear well, may bring you in sixty or seventy dollars each during the seven months' factory season.

THE WINNIPEG EIGHT BEATEN AT HENLEY

Canadian Oarsmen Defeated After a Hard Struggle With Harvard Crew in Semi-finals.

UNCLE SAM IN FINALS

Examiner Special:

HENLEY, ENG., July 3—Harvard's oarsmen at Henley Regatta won their way to the finals in the grand challenge cup race to-day when, after a desperate struggle, they defeated the Winnipeg Rowing Club by three-quarters of a length, in the fast time of seven minutes, flat. Harvard's steady stroke and machine-like precision finally told, but the Canadians put up a remarkably fine fight.

This afternoon the Union Boat Club of Boston won their semi-finals in the Grand Challenge race. This means that the Union crew will row Harvard to-morrow for the finals. Two United States crews in the finals for this trophy is an unusual feature.

The weather was as bad as it possibly could be and showed little prospect of improvement. The day opened with a drizzling rain, which later developed into a downpour, accompanied by a strong cold north wind, which kicked up miniature white caps on the course.

DIBBLE BEATEN.

Guiseppe Sintgaglia, the giant Italian, defeated Robert Dibble of Canada in the semi-finals for the diamond sculls to-day, by five lengths. This Italian is now favourite for the finals.

SUMMER CAMP FOR CHILDREN OF PETERBORO'

Has Been Arranged by the Peterborough Health Association in Jackson Park

CAMP OPENS TO-MORROW

To-morrow morning, under the auspices of the Peterborough Health Association, the summer camp at Jackson Park, designed to give all the children of the city who would be physically benefited by an outing and who otherwise would not be able to have one, will be opened. Ten local children will be given a whole day in the fresh air under the supervision of a trained nurse and a matron interested in the welfare of the little tots.

The object of the camp is to give as many children of the city under 12 years of age as can be provided for, a chance to spend many of the beautiful days that are bound to come with the Canadian summer, in the open, enjoying themselves in a way that will result in bettering their physical condition, and in improving their mental outlook on life. While delicate children who need a few weeks in the open under careful supervision will be made especially welcome, the Health Association announce that they cannot allow children with infectious diseases to attend the camp, as that would endanger the health of the other children.

Already there has been provision made for twenty children, but there are twenty-five of the young folks who have already announced their wish of being provided for in the camp.

To-morrow the camp wil open with ten children, and the number will gradually be increased until the accommodation provided becomes taxed to the utmost. Miss Fannie Dixon of this City is the nurse in charge of the camp, and all who have come in touch with Miss Dixon, know that she will make an effective supervisor. Mrs. Read has been engaged as matron. The children will be called for every morning and will be driven to the camp, where, on their arrival, they will be given a light lunch. At dinner time a substantial and well-cooked meal will be served and late in the afternoon, after a light lunch, they will be brought home in time for supper. The camp will be especially of value in safeguarding the health of those children whose mothers are so engaged during the day that they cannot be at home with them.

The Health Association deserves much praise for the venture, which is an effective means of encountering one of the problems in the care of the children of this City. Undoubtedly the camp will be very valuable in this regard and merits the support of all who wish to help its work by donations. The public is again reminded that the camp will not be as much a hospital as a place where the children's health wil be built up to withstand disease, and that no children with infectious diseases can be allowed to attend the camp.

HOME TALENT AT BIG PICNIC

At a meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association last night, at which arrangements for the big picnic, on July 16th, were discussed, the merchants decided to adhere to their policy of having home talent for the programme at the picnic grounds. Some suggestions had been made that would mean a departure from this principle, but the merchants decided that Peterborough talent would more than fill the bill.

CAUGHT A 23 POUND 'LUNGE

Mr. Ed. Murphy, who resides at 21 Aylmer Street, fell in with fishermen's luck while trawling an appetising bait through the waters of the Otonabee, last evening. What afterwards proved to be a 23-pound maskinonge, fell a victim to the glowing deceit, but did not give up its life without a desperate struggle. The canoe in which Mr. Murphy was seated, almost capsized, and it was not before the fisherman boarded a scow, that he was able to land his catch and end its life. The catch was made near the Peterborough Lumber Company's mill.

"I hear the sea captain is in hard luck. He married a girl and she ran away from him." "Yes; he took her for a mate, but she was a skipper."

"Y" Boys Are Having Great Time In Camp

CLEAR LAKE, July 2. — The Y.M.C.A. Boys' Camp at Sandy Point is in full swing, and the boys are having the time of their lives. Every boy in camp is in the best of health, and how could it help it with the good big meals three times a day, and plenty of recreation and fun. The first night in camp was a hummer. The boys went ot sleep at 8 o'clock and were up at 4 o'clock for a big time.

The boys are making all kinds of friends, every time the boys pass a cottage the people have a smile and a good word for them. Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald, of Lakefield, are exceptionally kind to the boys and those in charge. When they arrived, Mrs. Fitzgerald kindly lent everything that was necessary for them to get started with.

The boys had a great time Wednesday night. Mr. Ivor Brock took the boys for a motor boat trip around the lake. It was a great sight to see the big car canoe towing behind the fast motor boat. When they arrived at Juniper Island the boys noticed that Mr. Brock and Dr. Middleton were making their way up to the [illegible] that was a sign that there was [illegible] thing doing and sure [illegible] When Mr. Brock and Dr. Middleton came back they had two big watermelons under each arm, for the boys. The four watermelons did not last long when the boys got going at them. The boys gave three cheers and a tiger for Mr. Brock and Dr. Middleton, and you ought to have heard them cheer. Mr. Brock has promised to take the boys on another trip.

The following boys and leaders are at camp this year: G. L. Galley, C. N. Meserve, Will Morris, Arthur Lewis, Roy White, Ruben Head, Maurice Pringle, Dewart Lewis, J. Turner, Vernon Wall, Jack Hu[illegible] Kneel Hewsley, Jack Tewsley, Cl[illegible] Armstrong, Meldon Fanning, J[illegible] Fanning, Kenneth Lang, H[illegible] Lang, Robert Breckenridge, A[illegible] Johnstone, Edwin Johnstone, [illegible] man Whiteroft, Herbert Mason, [illegible] Hunter, Harold Gallop, Jack McC[illegible] lough, John Martinson, Clifford S[illegible] den, Geo. Dunsford, Henry Sa[illegible] Harold Devins, Stewart Th[illegible] Roderick Cameron, Ralph Meserve.

They are off to Burleigh this afternoon for a hike to see the folks.

Friday is our Field Day, when a good programme of sports will be run off.

The boys are expecting a large number of their parents up to the camp Friday, Parents' Day.

The boys Bible Study every morning is proving a great success, not one boy has missed a morning in study so far.

HOT SHOTS FOR MILITANTS.

But, mad or sane, these furies are imperilling the safety of woman. They have brought us to the verge of the sex war which they proclaimed. In an age of crumbling ideals and battered conventions they have laid their hatchets to the pedestal on which woman was enthroned. Their works are manifest in the decay of courtesy and the loss of pity for "the weaker vessel." If they are neither deported nor shut up in asylums for the insane, the whole basis of civilized society will be overturned by their crime.—London Express.

THE VOTE IN TORONTO.

The Globe is correct in its contention that the total Conservative majority in Toronto, as shown by the Provincial election, is 12,000 or 13,000, instead of 25,000 or 30,000. Where an elector votes for two candidates only one ballot may fairly be counted in the total. The ruth is that outside of Brant county, the Opposition did better in Toronto then in any other portion of the Province save in the French communities. In the Dominion general election of 1911 there was a Conservative majority of over 20,000 in Toronto. But 12,000 or 13,000 is a good "working majority."—Toronto News.

ONE DAY IN SEVEN.

The House of Commons rejected by a considerable majority yesterday a Bill which sought to secure by law one day's rest in seven to the worker. It was exceedingly clumsy and badly drawn, and Mr. Ellis Griffith, while accepting the principle on behalf of the Government, indicated that in its existing form it was impossible. There can scarcely be any weight of serious opinion in England to-day—or indeed in any really civilized country—which believes that any class of workers ought to work more than six days a week. To enshrine the principle of the six days week in a rigid statute without injury to very wide and complicated interests is difficult; but we have no doubt ourselves that it ought to be done and that it could be done.—London Daily News.

A BROAD POLICY.

One of Mr. Rowell's critics says that he had a one-plank platform, remarks the Toronto Star. This is an odd criticism. The platform advocates the abolition of the bar and the improvement of the local option law so as to allow the by-law to be carried by a simple majority vote, instead of three-fifths. It advocates tax reform of such a character as to encourage industry and enterprise and discourage speculation. It advocates the appointment of a Minister of Labour, the improvement of the factory laws, and various labour measures. It advocates the appointment of a commission to enquire into rural conditions. In addition to that, Mr. Rowell said that he would appoint the best available expert to head the Department of Agriculture, and would endeavour to extend its usefulness. He has a policy for developing New Ontario. There are various other proposals, which anyone may read in the campaign handbook. A more comprehensive policy was never submitted to the people of Ontario.

But in a general election one feature of a programme comes to the front, because the people are interested in that. Thus protection was the main issue in 1878. The Northwest rebellion and Riel were the leading questions in 1887, the Manitoba school question in 1896, reciprocity in 1891 and 1911. In 1896 the people of Ontario were discussing Mowat's alleged favours to the Roman Catholics. In every election a host of important questions are passed by with very little notice.

What really distinguished the recent election from others was the almost entire absence of personalities and the moderate character of the criticism of the Government's record. The question of the abolition of the bar thus stood out with unusual clearness. That was not because Mr. Rowell had nothing else in his mind, but because the people were peculiarly interested in that question, and the speakers tried to meet their wish to have it discussed.

THE REAL DICTATORS.

We do not agree with Mr. McNaught that the result of the election was a protest against the bulldozing policy of certain preachers. It is well understood that a preacher is not a dictator. He has a right to say what he thinks. He does not lose his citizenship because of his position as a preacher. If his people admire his character and work, and have confidence in his judgment, the people pays a good deal of attention to what he says. His influence, like that of any other citizen, depends upon his character and his record.

But the curious thing is that men who are quick to resent even the appearance of dictation from the pulpit should so tamely submit to the dictation of ward bosses. To be a preacher it is necessary to have some intellect to begin with, and some education. But men may rise to the position of political bosses, ward politicians, and Tammany leaders without giving any evidence that they understand the history or institutions of their country. They meet, decide who the candidates are to be, and call upon the electors to vote for them or be branded as traitors. And they are obeyed. The educated men of the community walk up to the polls and mark their ballots for candidates chosen by men who may be absolutely ignorant of the first principles of statesmanship and may hardly know the meaning of the word—men who may never have read any history except the school books, and may never have read even an elementary work on the constitution of their own country. Why do educated men submit to this bondage of ignorance?

Now and then one reads in a review wan article written by some scholar who declaims against democracy. But he does nothing to educate the people; and on election day he trots up to the poll as obediently as man who canot read or write, and votes for the man who is nominated by th eward bosses. He sighs over the failings of the democracy. He obeys the misleaders of the democracy. Of what use is the education of such a man? Of what use is education, except for public service?

We speak not merely of men educated in universities. Thr is education through business. There is education through intelligent farming. There is education through skilled artizanship. A man who does his own daily work intelligently is capable of understanding the work of public men; for all service is public service.—Toronto Star.

THE DEPRESSION DOING GOOD

(Montreal Herald)

The Candian outlook is essentially optimistic. That is a part of the national inheritance. It comes from the fact that we, one of the smallest nations of the world, have one of the largest of national territories, and one of the richest and most fertile portions of the earth's surface. Because we are optimistic we have been able to bear the depression of the past twelve months with cheerfulness, and to say in all sincerity that it will do the country good eventually.

Mr. J. G. Bury, the vice-president in charge of the western lines of the C.P.R., now supplies concrete evidence that the "good" we have been predicting from the depression is already beginning to appear. He has just returned from an extended tour throughout the west, and this is what he says:

He found that many of the industrial bureaux and boards of trade were giving more time to farming questions and less to efforts to transplant industries to places where they were entirely out of place or a long time in advance of the time. He found the belief was gradually taking hold that it would be better to develop the surrounding country rather than to endeavour to attract a greater population than the surrounding country would support. Had this policy, which has been consistently preached, been followed earlier, there would not be the disappointment that is found in some places at the present and for which every cause but the right one is blamed.

These remarks go to the very root of one of the greatest of the national problems—the problem of the overcrowding of the cities and the impovishment of rural communities. Every little townsite community in Western Canada has been ambitious to become a great manufacturing and commercial centre. Obviously it is impossible for the majority of them to do so. But some of them have succeeded in forcing the growth by unnatural methods, and many have found that the expenditure of much time and energy and money in the effort to attract factories has been worse than wasted. Now, thanks to the depression, the west is getting back once more to first principles. It is learning that the Prairie cannot be made to sprout iron and steel industries, but that it is one of the finest places on earth for raising wheat. It is learning that while a location on the banks of the Saskatchewan River may, after all, never be converted into a salmon canning centre, it can attain the front rank in mixed farming. It is learning that the road to real prosperity and permanent success is to develop that particular kind of industry which may be said to be native to the soil.

This is a lesson that was badly needed in the prairie country, among the townsite boomers, for as Mr. Bury says: "there are thousands of acres of the best and that was ever seen ready to produce all kinds of grain, grasses and garden produce, all lying idle—and the people in the cities studying how best to solve the problem of the unemployed! When one stops to think soberly the whole thing is a travesty of common sense."

BODIES ARE RELEASED.

Four Recovered From Empress—Board's Finding Next Week.

QUEBEC, July 3. — Diver Schinseng, of Mr. Wotherspoon's diving crew, recovered four more bodies from the Empress wreck yesterday, these being those of two men and two women. One of the women had jewels on her fingers, otherwise, owing to the condition of the bodies, there would be but little chance of identification.

Mr. Butler Aspinall, who represented the C. P. R. in the enquiry, left yesterday for England on the Alsatian, but the American lawyers for the Storstad and the other interested parties are likely to be here in person to hear the judgment of the tribunal, which will probably be rendered late next week. The commissioners are working hard every day, and have frequent meetings to study points of importance. Lord Mersey is regularly at his office in the courthouse.

Suffragettes Violent In Court.

CARNARVON, Wales, July 3.—A scene of great violence was created yesterday by two militant suffragettes, Georgina Lloyd and Phyllis North, when they were brought up for trial at the Carnarvon sessions on charges connected with a window smashing campaign on June 2 at Criccieth, in the constituency of Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd George.

The prisoners fought like wildcats and it took five wardens to keep them in the prisoners' enclosure.

Motorist Meets Strange Death.

BURLINGTON, Iowa, July 3.—Clifford Johnson, aged 25, met death in an unusual automobile accident early yesterday. He was riding with two girl companions, both of whom, it is said, were asleep. As the car passed over a bridge, Johnson stood up, raised his arm in the air and it caught in the bridge girders, whisking him from the car. When his absence was discovered a few minutes later the car was run back and Johnson was found dead. His arm had been pulled out at the socket and he had bled to death.

HUSBAND AND WIFE BECAME RECONCILED

Wife Pays Costs of Court Case —Chief of Police Had to Call For Order on Account of Dispute

(Lindsay Warder.)

The case of wife desertion in which a former local bartender was charged with deserting his wife, came before Magistrate Jackson at 9.30 a.m. The charge was originally made under Section 242, but was changed before the court to read under section 242A, a recent amendment to the Criminal Code. The accused was allowed to go under suspended sentence. Costs were paid by the wife, till financial assistance could be given by the husband. Complete reconciliation was effected. L. R. Knight acted for the complainant.

A lively verbal tilt took place during and after the case between the solicitor and Magistrate Jackson. The discussion became of such a personal nature that the Chief of Police called for order.—Warder.

BRUCE ISMAY HIDES IN REMOTE IRELAND

COSTELLO, Galway Bay Ireland, July 1.—Where is Bruce Ismay? During two years the director arraigned for the tragedy of the Titanic has been missing from the world he knew.

The loneliest road in Ireland runs from Minto to Costello along the shore of Galway bay. Sheer moor, quite treeless, bleak beyond words, hardly a stone cabin in sight and no path but the straight mail road. More terile than Donegal, more pitiful than Clare, the strange network of grey land and greyer water constitutes the country of far Connacht.

In the heart of this Irish wilderness a solitary lodge shows white against its surrounding patch of green. A locked gate forbids entrance. Here lives Bruce Ismay. Money he has and all that money will buy. But he cannot shake off the memories on his mind. Day after day he must hear them—the shrieks of drowning men crying down the wind. This is his curse. What he did will be remembered until the Steame is forgotten.

Convention of Deaf Closed With Patriotic Songs

Messrs. J. Crough, D. Fleming and A. O'Brien attended the annual convention of the Ontario Association for the Deaf, held at London this week. In the races at Springbank they captured eleven prizes between them, anad Jack Crough, who had four prizes, was kept out of other entries, having obtained the limited number of prizes. He was defeated by only a few votes in the balloting for position of first vice-president. One hundred and sixty members were in attendance. They had a very pleasant time in London. Mr. Crough made an effort to secure the next convention for Peterborough, but Brantford got it. "Those who were wise," he says, "voted for Peterborough, but those who were less wise were for Brantford." But then most of them have not yet seen Peterborough. The convention closed with patriotic songs "signed" by the members.

MENZIES-WEIR WEDDING

Took Place in Kingston on Tuesday Morning, June 30th.

A pretty June wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Weir, Tuesday morning, June 30th, at ten o'clock, when their only daughter, Anna May, was united in marriage to Earl Roy, only son of Donald Menzies, Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. MacGillivray of Chalmers Presbyterian Church, in the drawing room, under a bell canopy and a bower of ferns and Marguerites. As the bride entered the drawing room, resting on the arm of her father, who gave her away, Mrs. Harry Ralston, of Toronto, cousin of the bride, played the Lohengrin wedding march.

The bride wore a gown of ivory, charmeuse satin and a train, the bodice being trimmed with old point lace and pearls. The cap and veil were caught with orange blossoms and the bridal bouquet was a shower of white roses and lilies of the valley. Little Miss Dorothy Lappage, of Toronto, flower girl, was becomingly gowned in pink silk and shadow lace. She carried a basket of pink sweet pets and wore the broom's gift of a turquoise ring.

A buffet luncheon was served on the bride's table, which looked beautiful, the wedding cake forming a centrepiece which was surrounded by tulle and white, bridal roses.

The groom's gift to the bride was a chaste bracelet, and to Mrs. Rolston a pearl pin. Mr. and Mrs. Menzies left, on the noon train, for Ottawa, and on their return will reside at 139 Alfred street.—Kingston Whig.

THE UNION BANK OF CANADA IN LONDON, ENGLAND.

The Union Bank of Canada, which opened a Branch Office in London, England, some three years ago, having found their business has grown to such an extent that their premises on Threadneedle Street have become too small for requirements, arrangements have been made for new and commodious premises at No. 6 Princess Street, in the heart of the financial district, which will give them sufficient accommodation to handle a larger volume of business. Owing to the number of branches which this Bank has in Canada, their London Office has proved to be a great convenience to its clientele, and last year, for the convenience of the travelling public, a second branch was opened in the West End, on the corner of Panton Street and Haymarket, which has proved of great benefit to Canadian visitors.

Vienna Is Under Martial Law To-day

Examiner Special:

VIENNA, July 3—Even death, the alleged leveller, was powerless in the Austrian Court. The Royal birth of Archduke Ferdinand was emphasized over that of his morganatic wife, who gave her love and life, bore his children and stauched blood from the wounds of the assassin's bullet, even when her own life was ebbing away. As the bodies lay in state here to-day the golden coffin of the Archduke was set on a higher level than the silver grey one of his consort, to emphasize the fact that he was of Royal blood, but she was not. The City is practicaly under martial law to-day. Serious outbreaks are feared. The aged Emperor Franz osef, is indisposed and said to be close to collapse. The newspapers are openly proclaiming an advent of days of evil, terror and revolution in Austria.

HERE TO OPEN LODGE

Col. G. B. Griffith, the International Director of the great Moose Order, is here to build a lodge in this City. This organization has had a most phenomenal growth in the last eight years, has increased its membership 700,000, and is now running over 100,000 per year. It is the first fraternal order to purchase a town and incorporate it to itself and for the benefit of its membership. Mooseheart, 37 miles from Chicago, has been built up for the care of orphan children and disabled members of the Order. It has an annual endowment of one million from the Order; also a sanatarium is being built this season for the care of those afflicted with toberculosis. Col. Griffith intends to build up a strong local organization here, giving it a permanent Club Home, as they have in all like towns. Oshawa Lodge has just organized with a membership of four hundred for a town of 6,000 population. The Colonel says this Lodge should have 1000 members in three months. With the Moose system of organization, and he has the reputation of building fine, large lodges for the Order without a single exception. Colonel Griffith is a Spanish War veteran. He modestly refrains from exploiting his own war record, but glories in the fact that his grandfather was with Wellington, and died on the battlefield of Waterloo, while his father was all through the Crimean War and to the Relief of Lucknow. The Colonel is staying at the Oriental.

NOW YOU KNOW

The promised visit of the "Count" has kept Peterborough people guessing as to his identity. This has now been revealed in the page display advertisement of Messrs. Grafton & Co., who announce that the famous Count Discount" is to be at their store for the next twenty days, and every customer will have the pleasure of meeting him.

The Count says there is a twenty-five per cent. discount on all lines in every department of the store, and the evidence of it will be seen everywhere to-morrow morning, when Count Discount will have full possession, and present an array of bargain prices that he has slashed to twenty-five per cent. less than the original. Be sure and meet him.

Salvation Army's Pageant of the Nations.—The assembly of Salvation Army members on the Thames enbankment in London, prior to the march to Hyde Park. The world-wide work of the Salvation Army was brought hon to Englishmen uwhile—not as long as you two fellers are on the premises. London in London assembled on the embankment and marched to Hyde Park. The Congress numbers several thousands, representing fifty countries, and speaking over thirty languages. In the foreground of the picture we see a group of German peasants for the Black Forest in costumes consisting of bright red waistcoats and long blue and emerald green coats. Behind is a mounted American Salvationist with a megaphone. There were fifty-seven bands in the procession.

BOTH PERISHED

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, N.Y., July 3—Bowed in an attitude of prayer before the window through which they sought to escape, Mrs Hannah Nicholson and her daughter perished in an incendiary, fire which destroyed the five storey apartment house on Fifth Avenue to-day. Four others are dying. One hundred were saved through the heroic work of the police and firemen

ICE NOT EXTENSIVELY USED IN IRELAND

Ice in Ireland is as rare as snakes in Ireland—that is, ice for refrigerating purposes. The opening of a bar in that country advertising iced drinks did not prove successful, and the moderate climate makes the artificial cooling of meats and other provisions unnecessary. The maximum and minimum temperatures taken at Ballinacurra for the month of July, 1913, were 66.7 degrees and 50.8 degrees Fahrenheit, respectively.

Congratulates The Commissioners

Examiner Special:

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 3. — "I am intensely proud of the way you represented your country," was President Wilson's salutation in the White House corridor to-day to Justice Lamar and Frederick Lehmann, the United States commissioners to the Mediation Conference, who arrived from Niagara Falls, Ont., to-day. They said the conferences would be resumed as soon as the waring Mexier on a plan of provisional government.

Five Arrests Made.

HAILEYBURY, Ont., July 3.—The majority of Malcolm Lang, Liberal, member-elect for Cochrane, is reduced to seven with all polls heard from. There will be a recount and possibly a protest. Five arrests have been made on charges of impersonation and voting twice.

Magladery's majority in Timiskaming is over 600.

ASSINIBOIA STILL ASHORE

Examiner Special:

MONTREAL, Q., July 3. — The Canadian Pacific steamer Assiniboia is still ashore on Cove Island, Georgian Bay, although the officials here say she will probably be refloated this afternoon, considerable of her cargo having been lightened. Passengers have been transferred and safely landed at Port McNicholl.

SHORT HANDED.

The local police force, is rather shorthanded at present. Police Chief Thompson is on his vacations at Winnipeg, and Sergeant Brown has gone to Bonnie Scotland, his native home, to take to himself a wife. The force, however, is still maintaining its high standard of efficiency.

MEETING OF ASSOCIATION OF SPIRITUALISTS

ROCHESTER, N. Y., July 30.—The State Association of Spiritualists in convention here last week adopted a constitution that was racy on the earth and conforms with the drastic laws of the State regarding the shifty spirits. The principal address of the session was delivered by Thomas Grimshaw, and in the evening John Slater, a noted platform medium, talked with a number of spirits he knows, and gave them some of the late dope on the Mexican situation.

The lecture by Rev. R. R. Schleuser, accompanied by spirit photographs aroused great interest. It was evident that they were of moving spirits, for they were blurred in all cases, the spirits having moved just as the plate was exposed, apparently. Mr. Schleuser made it clear that every one has an aura, but that ordinary persons could not see them with the naked eye. He explained that if anyone cared particularly to get a line on one it was possible to arrange the matter by buying a glass made by a spiritualist in England. These glasses are small and convenient, may be carried in the vest pocket or an express waggon, and sell very reasonably, considering the fact that you can enjoy the sight of whole droves of auras. The sight is always of interest, but particularly so at feeding time.

Frank Casasbeer of Binghampton, and Lottie Brun, rapping mediums, gave an exhibition, in which they rapped the present stringency in the money market. Mr. Cassabeer explained that he had discovered a marvellous method of curing illness of all kinds. This is to have a great number of persons join hands, repeat the name of the person afflicted, then the name of the affliction, and finally to repeat a verse which he has written. He guarantees that it will at least not make the patient any worse than he was. The beauty of this healthful boon is that it only costs 25 cents, and the healer can cure a person at the other end of the country by concentrating his mind. He's a dead shot with the treatment at any distance.

Altogether the day was a spirited one and the inquiries passed back and forth showed that the folk who have passed beyond are getting along great and like the work.

FAIR HOLIDAYS IN SCOTLAND

John Wilmot's Annual Carnival! Name to be conjured with; and who amongst the natives of the Land o' Cakes and heather does not remember the happy hours spent on the Caledonian Hunters, the swings, the motor cars, or amongst the Mollie-Dollies, shooting saloons, or menageries?

Yesterday, the "Fer" was set in motion at the good old burghs of Greenock and the "Port." And with the carnival come thoughts of holidays "doon the watter" for the ten days' vacation—when all outside business is suspended for this period to allow the jaded and weary workers of shipyard and engineering shop to enjoy a real holiday.

As the writer thinks of the times spent—and money, too—at this stage of the year's work, he, with others, no doubt, wishes he could take the wings of a dove and "fly just for a day to my ain countree."

And again in the evening, just to think of missing the sight of the Belfast boat with its freight of Erin's sons and daughters leaving Princes Pier for the Green Isle! But there—they are enjoying themselves. We wish them a happy vacation!

Glasgow and Paisley celebrate the next two weeks, respectively.

Calling the Kettle Black.

"I despise a hypocrite."

"So do I."

"Now, take Jackson, for example; he's the biggest hypocrite on earth."

"But you appear to be his best friend."

"Oh, yes, I try to appear friendly toward him. It pays better in the end!"

GUM

How many people in the United States chew gum? A very conservative estimate may place the number at 10,000,000, dividing them into two classes, the inveterate or habitual chewers and the occasional chewers. Under the latter class may be placed the school children who are not permitted to chew gum during study hours. The latest statistics published by the department of commerce show that during the calendar year 1913, the United States imported 13,401,316 pounds of chicle, valued at $5,119,500. According to the pamphlet on Mexico, recently issued by the Pan-American Union at Washington, D.C., the word "chicle" is of Aztec origin, and is the name given to the sap of the sapote tree, botanically known as the Sapota Zapotilla. It is this sap which is the basis of virtually all of the chewing gum used in this country.

The tree is indigenous to the northern countries of South America, and especially Mexico, the last named furnishing about six-sevenths of the supply. It is usually found in groups, frequently growing to a height of 40 to 50 feet, and has a long clear trunk, which makes it most desirable for timber. The wood is of a reddish mahogany color, is hard, heavy, compact in texture, and very fine grained. Door silsl and frames of this remarkable wood have been unearthed in the prehistoric ruins of Uxmal and found to be in an excellent state of preservation. The wood is in demand to-day by the cabinetmakers, who employ it in the manufacture of high-grade furniture and household fittings. The fruit the sapodilla pear, was once very popular in Latin American markets, but the constant demand for the gum and the consequent tapping, so reduced the size and the quantity of the fruit that it has become almost a negligible quantity.

Throughout the rainy season while the sap is up, the tapping is done by the "chicleros," whose only implements are a machete and a piece of rope. The rope is fastened about the waist and slipped around a tree, leaving the chiclero's hands free to make the V-shaped incisions spirally all around the tree. The sap runs along the incision, and is collected in cups at the base. It looks like milk at first but very soon turns to a yellowish colour and then thickens to the consistency of treacle. It is collected and boiled in a rather primitive manner in large kettles and when it has reached the proper consistency it is kneaded and the surplus moisture pressed out. It is then moulded into large loaves and is ready for shipment. When it reaches the United States it is boiled in large copper kettles to a required consistency and flavoring extracts are added with the required amount of sugar. It is then whipped into a dough, kneaded in powdered sugar, rolled into sheets, cut to desired sizes, wrapped by machines and packed in boxes. It is estimated that 300,000,000 packages of gum are sold annually in the United States, each containing on the average five pieces. If the physical energy used in chewing this amount of gum could be reduced to foot-pounds and mechanically applied, it would furnish a power beside which that of Niagara Falls would dwindle into insignificance. — Philadelphia North American.

DEATH OF MRS. JOHN McCRAE

A very highly esteemed resident of Omemee passed away early this morning in the person of Elizabeth Roberts, wife of Mr. John McCrae of that village. The late Mrs. McCrae was 45 years of age, and is well known not only in Omemee, where she has resided for the past seven or eight years, but in Peterborough, Cobourg and many other places where her father, the Rev. Edward Roberts, has had charge of different pastorates. Her death will be learned of with deep regret by a large number of friends and acquaintances in this district, and the circumstances surrounding her death are particularly sad in that up till a few days ago she enjoyed her usual health, but on Tuesday was seized with an attack of heart failure that proved fatal.

Deceased is survived by her husband, Mr. John McCrae, Omemee, her mother and one sister in Cobourg, and one niece, Miss Roberts of Peterborough. The funeral will be held to-morrow afternoon at two o'clock from the family residence to the Omemee Cemetery.

Too Many Last Words.

There is a traditional anecdote of Richard Baxter which was popularly current many years ago in the west of England. Richard Baxter was born at Rowstown, in Shropshire, in 1615. When he lost his wife he published for the edification of other pious Nonconformists a "broad sheet," headed "Last Words of Mrs. Baxter."

This "broad sheet" had an immense sale and the printer shortly afterward brought out a second and spurious "broad sheet," headed "More Last Words of Mrs. Baxter."

Richard Baxter, unable to endure this, then issued a small handbill, with the concise assertion. "Mrs. Baxter did not say anything else."

Participating versus Non-Participating Life Policies Again
FIFTEEN YEARS AGO a Publisher of this City at age 43 took out a Ten Pay 15 year Endowment Policy of $2000, No 81226 in The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada paying therefore an annual premium of $187.20.
The Non-Participating Premium would have been $170.40.
The extra paid for profits per year (for 10 years only was $16.80.
On the 1st of May 1914 the above Policy matured and he received in cash $2620.25.
Had this man taken a Non-Participating Policy he would have saved $168.00 extra in premiums paid for profits during the ten years but he would have lost $620.25 at maturity of Policy as he would have received only $2000.00 instead of $2620.25 as he did.
Where is there a man that would not like to invest money at such a rate and that too in the Largest and Strongest Life Insurance Company in the British Empire?
You are invited to call and investigate.

ERUPTION ON HEAD HAD TO CUT HAIR
Formed Pimples and Matter Spread. For Three Months Did Not Go to School. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured in Ten Days.

60 Rue Dorsailly, Ville Emard, Montreal, Que.—"Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured my little girl, aged eleven, of itch of the head. It formed a pimple and that pimple broke and the matter spread and wherever the matter went another formed. She had large scabs on her head and at night she scratched until the blood came. I was obliged to cut her hair all around the eruption. For three months she did not go to school and I cared for it during that time without result.
"I was told to wash it and to make an ointment of ———, but after washing it she was worse. One evening when reading the paper I saw the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and I wrote at once. After receiving the sample I immediately washed her head with the Cuticura Soap, then I put the Cuticura Ointment on. I did that twice a day, evening and morning. From the time I commenced using the Cuticura Soap and Ointment that night she did not scratch any more. It stopped the itching from the first evening. After buying some Cuticura Soap and another box of Cuticura Ointment, in ten days she was completely cured." (Signed) Mrs. Arthur Poirier, July 5, 1913.
Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. A single cut is often sufficient. For a liberal free sample of each, with 32-p. book, send post-card to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. D, Boston, U. S. A.

Tango and Hesitation on Brighton Beach, England.—Even the hot summer weather has not forced the discontinuance of the popular dances which took England by storm during the winter season. Tangoing on the Beach promises to be the popular pastime this summer, and it is likely that this form of amusement will extend to this country and the United States before long.

How to Make a Real Wrinkle Remover
In these days of cleverly advertised "beautifiers" of 57 varieties and more, it is hard for a woman to believe she can make a simple home remedy for those hateful marks of age, worry and illness, which will do her more good and cost her much less than the greatest made preparation. There's nothing in the world so effective for removing or preventing wrinkles, crow's feet and crepy skin as a solution made by dissolving an ounce of pure powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. Every druggist has the ingredients.
Use this harmless mixture daily as a refreshing lotion, bathing the face in it two or three minutes at a time. The quick and satisfactory results will surprise you. Even the first application produces wonderful improvement. The wrinkles are less in evidence and the face has a fresh, "solid," comfortable feeling.

ILL-LUCK OF THE HAPSBURGS SHOWS AGAIN

Emperor of Austria's Life Has Been One Long Series of Tragedies

Crowned with years and sorrows, the Emperor of Austria, whose nephew and heir has just been assassinated, comes of an ill-fated house, and his own life has been one long series of tragedies. The phrase, "The Hapsburg Luck," has long been a synonym for tragedy.

Marie Antoinette, the ill-ated wife Napoleon I., was the Emperor's aunt, to the guillotine, was the Emperor's great-great-aunt, being a daughter of the Emperor Francis I. of the Holy Roman Empire (the Duke of Lorraine), and sister of Leopold II., the Emperor's great-grandfather.

Marie Louise, the second wife of Napoleon I., was the Effperor's aunt, being the sister of his father, Francis Charles. She was appointed regent of France in 1814, when Napoleon was in the field. But the son whom she bore Napoleon found his titles, "King of Rome," and Napoleon II. merely empty ones. She afterwards married the Count von Neipperg, and ruled with him in Parma, but after his death she had to take refuge with the Austrains, and, on their restoring her rule, Parma became merely an outwork of the Austrian Empire.

By the abdication of his uncle, the Emperor Ferdinand, and the renunciation of the crown by his weakling father, Francis Charles, the Emperor came to the throne as a boy of eighteen. At once revolution dogged him, and he waded in the gore of one battlefield after another. His defeat by the Prussians at Sadowa was the bitterest of blows to him. But his blackest griefs were domestic ones.

His Private Sorrows.

His marriage with Elizabeth, daughter of Duke Maxmillan, of Bavaria, was unhappy in its earliest stages, at all events. Five years after their marriage she left him, and they were separated for eight years. She became eccentric, and remained so till her death, being inordinately addicted to the consumption of tobacco. Two weeks after the reconciliation, another tragedy befel the Emperor. His brother, Emperor Maximilian, of Mexico, was executed, and Maxmillian's consort, the Empress Carlotta, became suddenly insane in the presence of Pope Pius IX.

The "Meyerling Mystery," the tragedy which resulted in the deaths of his only son, Rudolph, and the baroness Marie Vetsera, was the next blow to fall on the Emperor. His nephew, the Grand Duke John Salvator, married beneath him, and vanished into thin space. His brother, Louis Victor, was convicted of a crime, and banished. His nephew, the Archduke Leopold, married beneath him, and was banished to Switzerland. His niece, Louise, ran away with her tutor, who subsequently divorced her. Her granddaughter, Elizabeth, made a mesalliance of which she has since bitterly repented. In 1898 his wife, the Empress, was assassinated in Geneva.

The Late Franz Ferdinand.

The late Franz Ferdinand, crown prince of Austria, was the son of the Emperor of Austria's brother, Charles Louis. He had married morganatically the Bohemian Countess Sophie Chotek, and by so doing his children were debarred from the throne, though the Emperor conferred on her the title "Duchess of Hohenburg." She was extremely popular, which was more than could be said of Franz Ferdinand himself. He was at once a recluse and and a reactionary. The coup which resulted in the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina and which was a distinct breach of the Treaty of Berlin, was attributed to him, and it has always been a marvel that the Emperor of Austria yielded to him in this matter, for the latter regarded him with the utmost contempt.

Unlike the Emperor, who can speak all the various dialects of his people with ease, Franz Ferdinand neglected to master Magyar and the other dialects. His neglect in this and in other ways made him so disliked that it was freely predicted that, on the Emperor's death, Austria and Hungary would break up into two independent States. It has been said of Franz Ferdinand that he rather resembled the German Emperor in character, but without either the brilliance or the loveableness of the latter.

The succession to the throne of Austria-Hungary now falls to Karl Franz, the Emperor's great-nephew, and Franz Ferdinand's nephew. This prince, who is well spoken of, is the son of the Archduke Otto, nephew of the Emperor. This Archduke, who died in 1906, once, for a bet, jumped his horse over a coffin which was being borne in a funeral procession through the street.

We must come to terms with our female betters,
Seeing that summer will soon be nigh;
If they would be rid of the skirt that fetters,
They might free us from the collar and tie;
It's neck or nothing! I ask you whether
We can't be conspicuous now and then;
I think these challenges go together—
Trousers for women! Low necks for men!

The Athabasca Trail

The attached poem by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is released for the press, no rights reserved:

My life is gliding downwards; it speeds swiftly to the day
When it shoots the last dark canon to the Plains of Far-away.
But while the stream is running through the years that are to be,
The mighty voice of Canada will ever call to me.
I shall hear the roar of rivers where the rapids foam and tear
I shall smell the virgin upland with its balsam-laden air.
And shall dream that I am riding down the winding woody vale,
With the packer and the packhorse on the Athabasca Trail.

I have passed the warden cities at the Easter water-gate,
Where the hero and the martyr laid the corner stone of State
The Habitant, coureur-des-bois— and hardy voyageur,
Where lives a breed more strong at need to venture or endure?
I have seen the gorge of Erie where the roaring waters run,
I have crossed the Inland Ocean, lying golden in the sun,
But the last and best and sweetest is the ride by hill and dale,
With the packer and the packhorse on the Athabasca Trail.

I'll dream again of fields of grain that stretch from sky to sky,
And the little prairie hamlets, where the cars go roaring by.
Wooden hamlets as I saw them—noble cities still to be,
To girdle stately Canada with gems from sea to sea;
Mother of a mighty manhood, Land of glamour and of hope,
From the eastward sea-swept Islands to the sunny western slope.
Ever more my heart is with you, ever more till life shall fail,
I'll be out with pack and packer on the Athabasca Trail.

Jasper Park, Alberta.

"PEBLO"
The Glass of Quality
We have'nt any doubt but that most people value their eyesight sufficiently to want to take the best care of it. That is why we went to the expense of securing for our Optical Trade the Highest Grade of Lenses than can be made and which we handle exclusively under the trade mark "PEBLO." We believed our patrons would appreciate having their eyeglasses fitted with this superior quality lens, and after two years exclusive use of "PEBLO" Lenses, we are well satisfied with the result, judging by the hundreds of satisfied customers whom we have fitted with these beautiful lenses. It is interesting to know that in spite of the expense of procuring "PEBLO" Lenses the prices to our patrons are no more than when we used other makes of lenses, this being due to the large quantity we buy at a time. We manufacture these "PEBLO" Lenses from the finest "PEBLO" glass, in our own lens grinding department.
Any kind of lens duplicated while you wait, and all work guaranteed.

"THE TERMS OF SURRENDER"

By LOUIS TRACY

A servant entered, bringing a cablegram. It read:

"Cable received. Everything in order.—Mac."

Then Power smiled wearily; for the real struggle was postponed until that sealed envelope reached him. There followed some disturbing days. He told Nancy of her lover's visit, and its outcome, and had to allay her fears as best he could. Then, on the day of the bazaar, when he hoped to have many hours of her company, he discovered, in the nick of time, that Marten and the whole house-party from the castle had accompanied her; so he remained away.

Next morning he received a letter:

"Dear Mr. Power,—My father, by some means, has heard that you and I have become friends. He has forbidden me ever to meet you again, or to write. I am disobeying him this once, because I cannot bring myself to cut adrift from a friendship dear to me without one word of explanation. All at once my bright world is becoming grey and threatening. I am miserable, and full of foreboding. But I remain, and shall ever be,—Your sincere friend and wellwisher,

"Nancy Marten."

That same day Howard returned from the Continent. He brought a full budget. But, in a time when the world was ever greyer for Power than for Nancy, one person contrived to give him a very real and pleasurable surprise. On the twelfth day after he had received MacGonigal's cablegram a man in the uniform of a London commissionaire brought him a big linen envelope, profusely sealed. He chanced to be out when the messenger came; so the man awaited him in the hall. He rose and saluted Power when a house-servant indicated him.

"The gentleman who sent this package from London was very particular, sir, that it should be given into your own hands," he explained. He also instructed me to ask for a receipt written by yourself."

"Indeed. What is the gentleman's name?" inquired Power, scrutinizing the envelope to see if the address woud enlighten him.

"Name of MacGonigal, sir."

"What?"

"Yes, sir, MacGonigal. A stout gentleman, sir, an American, and very dry. He made me laugh like anything. Talked about hold-ups, and road agents, and landslides on the railway, he did. Oh, very dry!"

MacGonigal himself cleared up the mystery:

"Dear Derry (he wrote),—I wasn't taking any chances; so I've brought that little parcel myself. Time I saw London, anyhow, and here I am. A man in our consulate tells me these boys with medals and crossbars are O.K., and one of them is making the next train. I didn't come myself, because I don't know how you are fixed; but I'll stand around till I hear from you. London is some size. I think I'll like it when I learn the language.—Yours,

"Mac."

Power's first impulse, warmly supported by Dacre, was to telegraph and bid the wanderer come straight to Devonshire. But he decided unwillingly to wait until he had won or lost the coming battle. He telegraphed, of course, and told MacGonigal to enjoy life till they met, which would be in the course of three days, at the uttermost. Then he retired, and spent many hours in writing, refusing Howard's help, and taking a meal in his own room. It was long after midnight when his task was ended; table in the best of health and spirits, but he appeared at the breakfast

Dacre, aware of something unusual and disturbing in his friend's attitude of late, was glad to see this pleasant change, and talked of a long-deferred drive into the heart of Dartmoor.

"To-morrow," agreed Power cheerfully. "I am calling at Valescure Castle this morning, and the best hours of the day will be lost before I am at liberty."

Dacre had the invaluable faculty of passing lightly over the gravest concerns of life. He had noticed the abrupt termination of Power's friendship with Nancy, and guessed its cause; but he made no effort now to dissuade the other from a visit which was so pregnant of evil.

When the meal was ended Power summoned his secretary to a short conclave. Then he entered a carriage, and was driven to the castle by the roundabout road. He could have walked there in less time; but his reason for appearing in state became evident when he alighted at the main entrance, and a foreman hurried to the door.

"Mr. Marten in?" he inquired.

"Yes, sir."

"Is he in the library?"

"Yes, sir."

"Kindly take me to him."

"What name, sir?"

Power gave his name and followed close on the man's heels, and the servant did not dare bid such a distinguished-looking visitor wait in the hall. Still, he hastened on in front, knocked at the door, and said:

"Mr. John Darien Power to see you, sir."

"Tell Mr. Power——" came a stern voice; but too late to be effective, for Power was in the room.

"You can tell me yourself, Mr. Marten," he said quietly. "I'm sorry to thrust myself in on you in this way; but it was necessary, as my business is important and will brook no delay."

Marten had risen from a table littered with papers. A cold light gleamed in his eyes; but he had the sense and courage to refrain from creating a scene before the discomfited footman.

"You may go," he said to the man, and the door closed.

"Now, Mr. Power," he continued, "we are alone, and, whatever your business, I must inform you that your presence here is an unwelcome intrusion."

"May I ask why?"

"I mean to make that quite clear. In the first place, I have learned, to my astonishment, that you have wormed your way into my daughter's confidence, and thereby brought about the only approach to a quarrel that has marred our relations. Secondly, but the one reason should suffice. I do not desire to have any communication with you or hear anything you have to say, or explain. Is that definite enough?"

Power turned suddenly, locked the door, and put the key in his pocket.

"How dare you?"

"I had to answer, and I chose the most effective method," was the calm reply. "Your long experience of life should have taught you that there are times and seasons when closing the ears is ineffectual. The wise man listens, even to his worst enemy. Then he weighs. Ultimately, he decides. That is what you are going to do now. Won't you be seated? And may I sit down? Promise me we shall not be interrupted till I have finished, and I'll unlock the door."

Marten had not spoken to Power, nor, to his knowledge, seen him, for twenty-three years. The young and enthusiastic engineer he had sent to the Sacramento placer mine had developed into a man whose appearance and words would sway any gathering, no matter how eminent or noteworthy its component members. For some reason, utterly hidden from the financier's ken—for he was not one likely to recognise the magnetic aura which seemed to emanate from Power in his contact with men generally—he was momentarily cowed. He sank back into the chair he had just quitted, but said, truculently enough:

"It would certainly be less melodramatic if my servants could enter the room should I be summoned in haste."

Power unlocked the door, and drew up a chair facing his unwilling host.

"I am here," he began, "to urge on you the vital necessity of dismissing the Principe del Montecastello from your house, and of permitting the announcement of Nancy's forthcoming marriage with the Honourable Philip Lindsay, son of the Earl of Colonsay——"

"I guessed as much," broke in Marten wrathfully. "Colonsay is as poor as a church mouse. It was your money which that young prig paraded before my astonished eyes."

"I thought it advisable to state the motive of my visit frankly," said Power. "I take it you are not inclined to discuss the matter in an amicable way; though I am at a loss to understand why—before I have reached any of the points I want you to consider—you are so markedly hostile both to me and to my purpose."

"Then I'll tell you," and Marten took a letter from a portfolio on the table. "It appears that my late father-in-law, Francis Willard, had taken your measure more accurately than I. I remember treating you as a trustworthy subordinate; but your conduct during my temporary absence from America at a certain period led him to regard you as unprincipled and knavish. He has been dead several years; but he still lives to watch you. He left funds with a firm of lawyers in New York to carry out his instructions, which were that, if ever you were found hanging about any place where I or any member of my family was residing, I should be warned against you, because, owing to his action, and that alone, my dear wife was saved from something worse than a mere indiscretion in which you were the prime factor. A dead hand can reach far sometimes. On this occasion it has stretched across the Atlantic. The communication I received a few days ago is quite explicit. These lawyers have, at times, been much troubled to discover your whereabouts; but on this occasion, their English agents have kept their eyes open."

"Can vengeance be pursued farther than death?" murmured Power, shocked by this revelation of Willard's undying hatred.

The other did not recognise the quotation.

"Yes, and what is more," he snarled, "they go on to say that Willard has entrusted a document to their care which will scare you effectually if this present remonstrance is unavailing. In that event, they will act on their own initiative, and not through me. I wonder what the precious scandal is?"

"I am here to make it known, known beyond reach of doubt or dispute."

Marten moved uneasily. He tossed the letter back into the portfolio, and glared at Power in silence for a few seconds.

"I neither care to hear your secrets nor mean to attach any significance to them when heard," he said at last. "My only anxiety is to prevent you from sapping my daughter's affections from me. D——n you, you have caused the one cloud that has come between us!"

"I, too, have Nancy's welfare at heart."

"I don't see what good purpose you serve by alluding to my daughter in that impertinently familiar way."

"Now we are close to the heart of the mystery."

the mystery. Nancy is not your daughter! She is my daughter!"

Marten leaned back in his chair, and glowered at the self-possessed man who had uttered these extraordinary words so calmly. His voice was tinged with sadness, it is true, but otherwise wholly devoid of emotion.

"Do you realize what you are saying?" demanded the older man, and the words came thickly, as though he spoke with difficulty.

"Yes."

"But such raving is not argument. I thought you remarked that you were here to convince me of the error of my ways."

Power produced an envelope, and extracted some papers. "Read!" he said, leaning forward and thrusting the folded sheets before Marten. "The letters quoted there are not in original, of course. I have left those in safe keeping, and they will be burned on the day I know for certain that my daughter is married to the man she loves. Read! Note the dates! I need not say another word. I have supplied such brief explanatory passages as are required. I was not aware that Mawlem & Son had tendered other evidence. Though slight, it is helpful."

And Marten read, and his face, dark and lowering as he began, soon faded to the tint of old ivory. For his hawk's eyes were perusing the story of his own and Willard's perfidy, and of his wife's revolt, and love, and final surrender. It was soon told. Nancy's pitiful scrawl, left in the hut by the lake, Willard's letter to Mrs. Power, the two cablegrams, and Nancy's two letters from London—these, with Power's notes, giving chapter and verse for his arrival at Newport, his flight with Nancy into the Adirondacks, and her departure with Willard, made up a document hard to disbelieve, almost impossible to gainsay. Some dry and faded strands of white heather had fallen from among the papers to the table, and Marten gave no heed to them at first. Now he knew he was gazing at the remnants of Nancy's bridal bouquet.

THOUGHT IT WOULD KILL HIM

Terrible Torture From Chronic Indigestion, Short Treatment With "Fruit-a-tives" Completely Cured The Whole Trouble.

C. T. HILL, Esq.

Chatham, Ont., April 3rd, 1913

"Some two years ago, I was a great sufferer from Indigestion. I treated with a prominent physician here for some time, but I did not get any better so I went in to see him one day and said "Doctor, what do I owe you? I am not getting any better and am going to quit you." I paid him his bill and he remarked to me, "Charlie, you have a case of chronic Indigestion that will be hard to cure."

I left his office and as I stepped out on the street my eye caught a bill board advertisement of "Fruit-a-tives"—that big "Fat Man and Thin Man" and I said to myself, "If Fruit-a-tives will build me up like that, it's good enough for me." I walked directly over to Park's Drug Store and I bought a box of "Fruit-a-tives." After taking these wonderful tablets for only three weeks, I found myself greatly improved. I continued taking them for a short time longer and cured myself entirely. My case was no light one either, for many times when I was on the street, I was compelled to go into some store or business place until the acute spasms wore away. Gas would often form in my stomach and I was in daily fear it would get around my heart and kill me. To-day, I have no such fears. "Fruit-a-tives" is the only remedy for Indigestion, Dyspepsia and Stomach Troubles."

C. T. HILL.

Perhaps your case is exactly like Mr. Hill's. If so, do exactly as he did—take "Fruit-a-tives" and cure yourself. "Fruit-a-tives" will prevent the formation of gas in the stomach by making digestion complete. It will insure the food being promptly digested by providing an abundance of gastric juice in the stomach. It keeps the stomach sweet and clean, not only by helping the digestion but also by regulating Kidneys and Bowels and toning up the system.

If you suffer with Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach, Belching, Gas on the Stomach, Heart Pains after Eating, take "Fruit-a-tives." 50c. a box. 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. at all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

IN THE USUAL WAY.

"When I married you," said Mrs. Naggers, "I thought to reform you."

"Yes," answered the husband "and like a number of reformers you seized the first opportunity to become a boss."

AN HONORABLE BURGLAR

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.

Mr. Glenshaw should have taken the 6 o'clock suburban train to his seaside cottage, but he missed it. He should have taken the train an hour later, but a business matter detained him. The last train down was at 9 o'clock. He was waiting for it when he encountered a neighbor, who said:

"If I were you I'd run up and take a look through the house. Three of them on our block have been robbed within a week."

Mr. Glenshaw decided to go. He would see that the house was all right and then go to a hotel for the night. He walked up the steps as carelessly as if the house had been open, unlocked the door and lighted the hall gas, and the first thing he saw was an open window. The next was a man who stood in careless attitude beside the writing desk with a revolver in his hand. He was not a bad or rough looking man. He had lately been clean shaved, and a fashionable hat helped him to look like a gentleman. If he had been taken by surprise he didn't betray the fact. There was a half smile on his face as he looked steadily at Mr. Glenshaw, and his voice was soft and pleasant as he finally said:

"Let's sit down, please. We will have to consult together, and I hope to find you a reasonable, sensible man. I am going to lay this weapon aside and chat with you on even terms. You don't look like a man who'd do anything foolish."

"Look here, now," began Mr. Glenshaw, with a note of anger in his voice; "I don't quite understand this thing. You are as cool as if you were really a robber, or is it some joke put up by some of the fellows at the club?"

"I am cool," replied the man, "because nerve is a part of my profession. I am by profession a burglar. As to the joke—no. Mr. Glenshaw, this is straight goods."

"You—you know my name?"

"Why not? Let me ask you about that safe. Was it warranted burglar proof?"

"No."

"That's better. The combination was set on two numbers. I had it open in ten minutes. It is needless to add that I was disappointed in the contents."

"I—I can't make out this burglar business," replied Mr. Glenshaw, with a troubled look on his face. "You are here to rob my house. Instead of sitting here talking to you I ought to be hunting for a policeman. Do you suppose I'm going to tamely submit to be plundered? Why, hang it, I ought to go for you slambang!"

"There is a situation here," replied the burglar. "It is one for argument instead of force. I'm willing to meet you halfway, and you couldn't ask anything fairer than that. I have a lot of plunder packed up when you walk in on me. It seems to me that an honorable compromise is the best way out of it for both of us."

"Well?"

"Well, suppose we say $200 for the plunder? You save at least $300 and I am decently paid for three hours' work."

"I haven't got that much cash."

"I shouldn't object to the cash, but you can draw me a check for the amount and certify to my signature."

"You are not afraid I'll have a detective at the bank to nab you?"

"Not in the least. You wouldn't have this thing get out for any $200. Besides, you look upon me as an honorable man. I see a check book here on the desk, and perhaps we'd better close the deal."

Mr. Glenshaw sat down and wrote the check. The burglar then wrote the name of "Henry Saunders" across the back of it, and Mr. Glenshaw certified to the correctness of the signature.

"Perfectly safe and correct," said the burglar as he looked at the paper, "and it will be paid on sight. It is an honorable deal, honorably consummated, and I am ready to go. Just a word, however—a sort of brotherly word. Don't spend money trying to keep burglars out. They can beat any sort of lock or catch. Better deal squarely with them. Will you accompany me to the front door? I always prefer to come and go that way when possible."

"I—I didn't know that burglars were gentlemen," stammered Mr. Glenshaw, with a look of relief on his face.

"No? Well, all burglars are not, more's the pity, though there is no good reason for it. I have met lawyers and doctors who were not gentlemen. Ours is a gentle profession, and the A1 burglar does nothing to disgrace himself. If I were a common thief or robber I should leave by the back window."

Mr. Glenshaw followed him down the hall to the door and stood with him on the steps for a moment before saying:

"Well, you are not such a bad lot, after all."

"Thank you," replied the burglar with a bow and smile, "and the compliment is returned. Two men of honor and horse sense can always do business to their mutual advantage."

"I—I can't really say that I hope we shall meet again," laughed Mr. Glenshaw.

"No, of course not, and I can't say I'll call around occasionally and see how you get along. We'll have to leave that an open question. Well, good night to you, Mr. Glenshaw."

"Good night, Honorable Burglar!"

And each waved his hand and smiled and bowed and went his way.

Every Meal Brought Agony

But Since Taking "Little Digesters" He Can Eat Heartily

From Osgoode Station, Ont., comes a story of five years of suffering from Indigestion and Dyspepsia—five years of doctoring in vain—then "Little Digesters" and a complete cure. Mr. K. H. Ralph tells the story—his own story—thus:

"I have been a sufferer from Indigestion and Stomach Trouble for five years. I had treatment from several doctors. I did not find a cure until I began using "Little Digesters".

I can hardly describe how much I suffered at times. Every meal brought with it more or less agony and I seemed to have a complete distaste for food. I had almost begun to think my case incurable when I came across an advertisement in the papers about "Little Digesters". I decided to give them a trial. I am very thankful that I did so for I had not been taking them long when I found them helping me. I can now eat heartily and no longer feel pain and discomfort after eating."

Does Indigestion or Dyspepsia make your life miserable? Take "Little Digesters"—they will cure you or your money will be refunded.

Death of a Royal Chef.

The late King Edward used to think much of Juste Alphonse Menager, the royal chef, whose death took place a few days ago. Once His Majesty took a particular fancy to one of Menager's dishes. "Ah," he said, "this is Menager at his best." Then he corrected himself. "No, Menager is always at his best; this is just one of his inspirations."

Menager was cook to Baron Alphonse de Rothschild before 1883, when he entered the kitchen of Marlborough House. After King Edward's accession he earned an ambassadorial salary, with free lodgings near Buckingham Palace thrown in. Menager was a great chef, a cook of cooks, and his masterpieces were appreciated by all the royalties of Europe, who presented him with diamond scarf pins galore.

Those Three Legs.

The arms of the Isle of Man, which, though it may sound like an Irish bull to say so, are legs—three legs bent at the knee and apparently kicking outward from a common centre in the midst of a shield—have provoked a number of jocular descriptions, of which the best declares that one leg spurns Ireland, one kicks at Scotland and the third kneels to England.

On July 5 of every year the laws of the Isle of Man are still read aloud to the assembled people from the top of Tynwald hill. This is the most interesting and archaic legal ceremony observed to-day in Europe.

Nothing Left.

"Have you," asked the judge of a recently convicted man, "anything to offer the court before sentence is passed?"

"No, your honor," replied the prisoner. "My lawyer took my last farthing."—London Tit-Bits.

Great Britain's Dog Town.

The greatest dog town in Great Britain is Haverfordwest. There are many men in the town who live by breeding, buying and selling dogs. Although the population is only 6,000, at least 6,000 dog licenses are issued annually, and there are also a large number of exemptions. Almost daily there are more dogs than people in the public streets, though valuable animals are never allowed to run loose.

Haverfordwest dog breeders are known for their working terriers, show terriers, pointers, setters and spaniels, which are daily traded for big sums through the fanciers' journals and go everywhere. It is the home of the Sealyham breed of terriers, the origin of which has puzzled the keenest sportsmen. One fancier's kennel recently sold by auction realized $1,000, but $1,250 is not an unusual price for a single dog, while $300, $350 and $400 are almost common. The quaint old town, with its mixed Welsh, English and Flemish population, is almost the hub of the dogs' universe.

WORK IS DRUDGERY.

"Gloomy" Dean Inge Disbelieves Talk About Enjoying It.

Dean Inge of St. Paul's Cathedral, known as the "Gloomy Dean," has started another suggestive subject for controversy. In his Easter sermon in the cathedral this ultra-pessimist said:

"Nine-tenths of all work is drudgery."

Dean Inge, in the course of his sermon, also said that persons who talked about the pleasure of work did not know what hard work meant. All such talk he described as "cant."

The Daily Mirror was one of the first papers to see the opportunity afforded by the Dean's remarks. It quoted a remark made by the Lord Chief Justice some years ago:

"I hate holidays. I am never so happy as when I am in the courts and fighting cases. I never know what to do with a holiday."

The Daily Mirror omitted to mention that the former Sir Rufus Isaacs is one of the most fortunate of living men, and that he would be, indeed, ungrateful if he were to "hate holidays."

Others referred to are Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, who once said she felt weary whenever she had no work at the theatre, and Col. Roosevelt, whose recipe for happiness is "Work, and more work."

Lord Chancellor Haldane has set it on record that in his belief work is so beneficial to the human frame that three or four hours' sleep at the most is sufficient for rest.

"Dean Inge," says an editorial, "would probably retort that such work as this—work taken up out of personal desire—is not really work at all, but rather a pastime and a pleasure. This is where the two camps of opinion differ issue. They must find themselves arguing over the question, When is work a pleasure and when does pleasure become work? The anti-workers will probably state that by work they mean any set task or daily duty performed by wage earners."

Among those interviewed was a large employer of labor who has a daily opportunity of watching hundreds of clerks and "yard hands." He said that in his experience the majority of wage-earners became thoroughly miserable when the working system of their lives was interrupted for any length of time. He added:

"The average man gets miserable and restless long before the end of the average holiday. He enjoys it at first, but then the lack of occupation pulls upon him. The old legend about people coming back to work reluctantly, with gloomy faces and unwilling hands is all rubbish.

"It must be remembered that for the average human being a set task is an absolute necessity. It is only the exception that possesses the constructive ability to select or invent the grade and ability of work which they wish to do. The rest are simply aimlessly bewildered over the problem of what to do with their time."

A clergyman is quoted as saying: "Dean Inge's remarks are astonishing. Surely he does not find his appointed work of saving men's souls so much drudgery."

A novelist declared that writing fiction was at once work and pleasure, but, he added, he had never written or talked fiction about work as he left that to Dean Inge.

DEMOCRACY.

In my own country we are growing more and more to believe that the only safe rule in a democracy is to give the people themselves the right after due deliberation to decide finally on every subject which they deem of vital importance. The public servants—legislators, executives and judges alike—must be in very fact the servants of the people. The people must have the right to make and unmake these public servants in order to hold them strictly accountable for their stewardship. They must also have the right on their own initiative to pass upon laws which the legislature has passed or which it has refused to pass if the legislature does not correctly represent them. Finally the people must not surrender to the judiciary any more than to the executive or legislative branches of the government the final decision as to what laws they are to be permitted to have. —Theodore Roosevelt to Argentinians.

BLUE.

The night has a thousand eyes
And the day but one:
Yet the light of the bright world dies
With the dying sun.

The mind has a thousand eyes
And the heart but one:
Yet the light of a whole life dies
When love is done.
—Francis W. Bourdillon.

THE OLD HOME.

There, there, I said, flattering leaves,
Glimmer my father's eaves,
And the worn threshold of my youth beneath—
I know them by the moss
And the old elms that toss
Their lithe arms up where Winds the smoke's gray wreath.
—Benjamin Bussey Thatcher.

Had No Power Over The Limbs

Locomotor Ataxia, Heart Trouble and Nervous Spells Yielded to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

It would be easy to tell you how Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cures locomotor ataxia and derangements of heart and nerves, but it may be more satisfactory to you to read this letter.

Mrs. Thos. Allan, R.F.D. 3, Sombra, Ont., writes:—"Five years ago I suffered a complete breakdown, and frequently had palpitation of the heart. Since that illness I have had dizzy spells had no power over my limbs (locomotor ataxia) and could not walk straight. At night I would have severe nervous spells, with heart palpitation, and would shake as though I had the ague. I felt improvement after using the first box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after continuing the treatment can now walk, eat and sleep well, have no nervous spells and do not require heart medicine. I have told several of my neighbours of the splendid results obtained from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

A PAGE OF THE BEST HUMOR OF THE WEEK

IN THE WISDOM OF AGE.
By H. Fustin.

Now Lizzie was just sweet sixteen!
Prettier girl you've never seen.
Adored by every Johnnie.
Bertie Brown oft so could be Sought out this fair maid's company;
Intentions—Matrimony.
"My darling girl—would like to wed—
Pray, take the chance now,
Lizzie."
But she stood gazing horrified—
Then to her "Ma" softly replied,
"Mr. Brown!—WHO IS HE?"

Now, Lizzie's age is six and twenty;
Lovers she can boast of plenty;
But Cupid hasn't caught her.
Percy Smith in a motor car
Called round one day to see her
"Ma."

And asked to wed her daughter.
Mother cried: "Now dear, don't be absurd,
Young Mr. Smith awaits your word.
Be sensible, dear Lizzie!"
There she stood hesitating,
Then in voice exasperating—
"Mr. Smith—WHAT IS HE?"

Ten years have fled, she's thirty-six,
And up to all the latest tricks
To make herself youthful.
One day there called a dry old bach—
(For her, no doubt, a splendid match;
I really must be truthful).
Once more the gray-haired mother tried
To persuade her child—"Be a bride"—
This news turned Lizzie dizzy.
She did not stand, as if in doubt,
But in great joy gave one glad shout:
Oh, mother dear, "WHERE IS HE?"

An Unconscious Critic.

The worst stricture, perhaps, that can be uttered against some of the prevailing fashions was the unconscious criticism of a little boy.

He was looking at a photograph of a very beautiful lady. This beautiful lady wore a ball gown of diaphanous white stuff like gossamer. Her white arms were bare. Great V's in front and back bared her neck and shoulders. A slash on the left side of the skirt revealed her white silk stocking, her little white shoe, and the shoe's fastenings of narrow ribbon that ran in criss-cross, sandal fashion, up her slim, glistening ankle.

The little boy studied this beautiful photograph gravely. Then he said: "She's dressing, isn't she?"

An Excuse That Didn't.

The Mistress: "And, Mary, we'll have that small piece of meat as well."

The New Maid: "Please'm, the cat's eat it."

The Mistress: "What cat?"

The New Maid (surprised): "Oh, lawks! Ain't there a cat?"

A stitch in time saves nine, but some of the new costumes for ladies don't seem to need that many.

There is little cause for surprise in the announcement that Elvira Ahrenboersterbauemer won first prize in a spelling match at St. Louis this week. Consider the practice the girl has had with her own name.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Mistress: "I'm surprised that you want to leave, Mary. I consider you've a very good situation. As you know, I do some of the work myself."
Mary: "Yes, but you don't do it to my satisfaction."

TACT AND ECONOMY.

Mrs. Jellus (to prospective parlormaid): "I am afraid you won't do. You see you are—er—very good-looking, and my husband being an artist is a great admirer of female beauty and—"
Parlormaid (interposing): "Yes, ma'am, anyone can see that by his marrying you."
Mrs Jellus: "Er—well, anyway I will give you a month's trial."

A Good Definition.

They seem to have a waiter at the Hotel Cecil with a gift for phrase-making.

A guest one morning, looking over the menu, said to this waiter: "What is a whiting?"

"A whiting, sir," said the waiter, "is a fish, sir."

"I know that," said the guest; "but what kind of a fish? How does it taste?"

The waiter pondered the matter for a moment.

"I'll tell you, sir," he said. "A whiting is like a 'adduck, sir—only more refined."

The Poet's Dream.

The poet was talking. "When they see my poetry in all the magazines, people think that I live at the Carlton. Alas! they don't know the poetry rates. A young lady said to me the other day:

"'I like your poetry so much. I have often heard the expression—beautiful as a poet's dream. Tell me, what are poets dreams like?'

"'Well, my dear young lady,' I replied, 'mine are usually about three square meals a day, clean linen, and an occasional 3d. cigar.'"

Descendants of the English nobleman who made a vast fortune in cereals will be able to refer to the time when Knighthood was in Flour."—Youngstown Telegram.

Because he was always prompt and pleasant a New York bell boy recently received $30,000 by the will of a former guest of the hotel where he was employed. It is to be hoped, however, that the tip will not be recognized as a new standard.—Chicago Herald.

Chistopher A. Papageorgacoupoulos took the name of Moore because it was less.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Irate Virginia Colonel (to his daughter): "Elizabeth, how could you be so inhospitable to that young man who called last night?"

Bess: "Inhospitable! Why, dad—"

Pater: "You should by no means have let him go without asking him to breakfast."—Columbia Jester.

Term Too Brief.

"I think a congressman ought to be elected for more than two years."

"You can't accomplish much in that time, eh?"

"Why, my wife can't return all the calls she receives."

The Reason Thereof.

Painter: "Fortunately! They evidently recognized its value, and hung it beyond reach of the slashing militants, y'know!"—Puck.

The Next Thing.

"I'd like to rent your hall, please."

"What for?"

"Well, you see, we're organizing a fraternal society called the Sons of Moving Picture Veterans of the Mexican War."

At the Summer Resort.

The Serious Girl: "I always work so that I will be engaged at a higher salary each year than the year before."

The Frivolous Girl: "And I always try to be engaged to a higher salary than the year before."

Light.

Skids: "What kind of work do you think he's suited for?"

Skittles: "I think he'd make a good stage hand at a moving picture theatre."

Perfect Peace.

First Indolent: "Deuced quiet club, old chap."

Second Indolent: "My word, yes! They do not serve soup here on account of the noise."

Numerous Ties.

"I don't care much for Lonelyville."

"Why don't you move, then?"

"Too many ties. One neighbor has my card-table, another my wheelbarrow, and a third my lawn mower."

Modern Ways.

There is no call for the old-fashioned, Chesterfield type of man today. Today is the day of the maxixe, the slashed skirt, and the cigaret. With these the Chesterfield type can't cope."

We overheard two pretty girls at the Savoy. They were taking tea, smoking cigarets in long amber tubes, and swinging their slim silken ankles in and out of the slash in their skirts.

"Fred," said the first girl, "kissed me solemnly on the forehead after I accepted him. Wasn't that funny?"

"If a man kissed me on the forehead," said the other, "I'd call him down. Yes, I'd call him down four inches."

The Wrong Target.

Pat was a young recruit, and was undergoing his first course in musketry. The soldiers had finished firing, and Pat was taken before the officer for his bad shooting, and was told he would have to do better at the next distance.

"Now, Pat, you fire at No. 5 target."

Pat banged away his seven rounds and waited for the result, which showed he had hit No. 4 target the possible number of hits, but had not hit No. 5 target once.

"What target did you aim at?" asked the disgusted officer.

"No. 5, sir," answered Pat.

"And have hit No. 4 every time," continued the officer, getting cross.

"Bedad, sir," retorted Pat, "'twould be a grand thing in war. Sure, I might aim at a private and hit a General."

One On the Boss.

"What a change," exclaimed a novelist, "one little woman can make in a man's life."

"Exactly," said a victim, "and what a heap of 'change' she requires while doing it!"

Unsound.

A young Tory heir to a peerage was once pelted with rotten eggs while making a political speech.

"Ah," he remarked, wiping the mess from his clothes, "I've always said that the arguments of my opponents were unsound."

A Typographical Error.

"I've come," said the visitor, "to see why you called me a political robber in your paper today."

"I regret that error of type quite as much as you," replied the editor. "Ah! Then you didn't mean to call me that?"

"No, sir. I wrote 'robber' very distinctly."

A Stayer.

It isn't steadiness and humdrum regularity that win a man success in New York today. No, indeed, it is brilliance. It is audacity."

The speaker was Johnson Bowen, the successful Chicago promoter; the scene a banquet of advertising men in New York. He went on:

"Two millionaire business men were lunching in Fifth avenue when an old graybeard stumped by.

"'That's Brown. He works for me,' said the first business man.

"'He's an honest-looking chap. Has he got staying powers?' asked the second business man.

"'He has that, said the first. 'He began at the bottom of the ladder in '76, and he's stayed there ever since.'"

Mal de Mer.

A group of teachers bound for South America under the auspices of the International Conciliation Association were exchanging seasickness stories in the smoking-room of the Vandyke.

Percy Bentley Burnet of Kansas City said:

"The trip to Bermuda is a very seasickish one. A Kansas City man told me he suffered dreadfully, both going and coming.

"'I could keep nothing on my stomach,' he said.

"'Nothing whatever?' I asked in awe.

"'Nothing,' he answered 'except a mustard plaster and my hands.'"

The Frenchman did not like the look of the barking dog barring his way.

"It's all right," said his host; "don't you know the proverb, 'Barking dogs don't bite'?"

"Ah, yes," said the Frenchman, "I know ze proverbe, you know ze proverbe; but ze dog—does he know ze proverb?"

"I think, father, that you do Arthur a great injustice when you say that he is penurious."

Precocious Brother: "What's penurious, father?"

Father: "Why, 'penurious' means close."

Precocious Brother: "Then you're right. That young man is awfully penurious when he comes to see Sis!"

At a dinner-table the other day someone quoted the story of the usher who, reproved for announcing a family of fourteen with all their Christian names at length, while a string of people waited impatiently, grouped a Mr., Mrs., and Miss Penny into a laconic "Three Pence."

This led to the recital of a companion story. The butler announced "Mr. Tootle." Then suddenly perceiving Mrs. Tootle, who had stepped aside for a moment, he further announced, "And Mrs. Tootle, too."

An Unpleasant Jolt.

"We oldsters set for the youngsters a higher standard than we set for ourselves. Forgetting that you can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear, the stupidest and ugliest failures of parents expect their sons and daughters to grow up miracles of beauty, intelligence and success."

The speaker was Wilton Lackaye, the occasion the Lambs' Gambol in New York. He continued:

"Sometimes, tho, such parents are called sharply to themselves. The jolt is unpleasant.

"A father said to his pretty daughter one evening with a scornful, angry laugh:

"'That young Jamson has the face to want to marry you! A mere bookkeeper!'

"'But father,' said the girl, 'I love Mr. Jamson. What is your objection to our marriage?'

"'Why,' roared the old man, 'why, he couldn't support you decently.'

"'But, father,' said the girl, 'neither can you.'"

No A. B.

Capt. Kendall of the ill-fated Empress of Ireland was very popular with his passengers. On his former ship, the Montrose, he once said to a young lady passenger who had asked a foolish question:

"Your question indicates a certain lack of seamanship. You are like the little schoolboy.

"This little schoolboy was reading aloud out of his reading book, thus:

"'The captain shivered his timbers and gave a hitch to his trousers, and neither brig nor sloop, but something larger, namely a—a—'

"Here the boy paused; he could not pronounce the next word.

"'Barque,' prompted his teacher. 'Barque.'

"The boy looked round at his fellow pupils timidly, lifted up his head like a hound, and went:

"'Bow-wow-wow! Bow-wow-wow! Bow-wow-wow!'"

She Wouldn't Tell.

Mr. Blank had given his neighbor's maid a ride to the village. On arriving she thanked him profusely, and he pleasantly replied:

"Don't mention it!"

"No, sir," was the astonishing answer. "I won't mention it to a soul."

The Alternative.

Pat: "Yis, sorr, wur-rk is scarce, but Oi got a job last Sunday that brought me a pound."

Mr. Goodman: "What—you broke the Sabbath?"

Pat (apologetically): "Well, sorr, 'twas wan av us as had t' be broke."

Mrs. McTavish (travelling in the tube for the first time): "Man Jock, I'm feelin' awfu' sick."
Jock McTavish: "Losh, woman, ye musna be that. If a body has tae pay forty shillin' for spittin' what wid it cost me for yer being' sick?"

Nothing Now.

A propos of certain fresh revelations of corruption in the realms of his finance, Thomas W. Lawson said at a dinner in Boston:

"Columbus found out that the world was round.' But surely lots of investors before him must have found out that it was anything but square."

No Bible Student.

Percival H. Dodo, the well-known diplomat, said at Niagara Falls to a newspaper correspondent:

"Diplomacy, like any other profession, requires training, and he who attempts to step from his law office or his factory straight into the diplomatic world is apt to commit a few solecisms.

"Yes, he is apt to show a diplomatic ignorance similar to the biblical ignorance of Senator Blanc.

"Senator Blanc, you know, accused the senate chaplain of plagiarism. He declared heatedly as to the prayer just uttered by the chaplain, that he had heard of it, almost word for word, at a funeral three years before.

"Investigation proved that it was the Lord's Prayer to which the senator referred."

The teacher was intent on the lesson, and continued impressively:

"And vast swarms of flies descended on the land and came into the houses of the Egyptians and covered their clothing and their tables and all their food, but (emphatically) there were no flies on the children of Israel."

A small boy from the rear of the room interrupted:

"Please, ma'am, there ain't now, aither."

"The man who gives in when he is wrong," said the street orator, "is a wise man, but he who gives in when he is right is——"

"Married!" said a meek voice in the crowd.

Office Boy: "There are two men here, sir, who want to see you. One of them is a poet and the other a deaf man."

Editor: "Well, go out and tell the poet that the deaf man is not taking in and let them fight it out between them."

Sandy, strolling up the banks of the river, came upon an English visitor fishing in the stream.

"Man," said Sandy, "ye'll no catch ony fish there. You'll hae tae gang a bit further up till ye come tae a guid spot."

"Ah," said the visitor, "but how will I know when I come to a good spot?"

"Hoots, man," said Sandy, "you can easy tell a guid spot by the number o' empty bottles lying about."

When It Happens.

"Does the office ever really seek the man?"

"Well, yes; sometimes. For instance, when the cashier skips to Canada."

Saving His Parent.

Father: "What did the teacher say when she heard you swear?"

Boy: "She asked me where I learned it."

Father: "What did you tell her?"

Boy: "I didn't want to give you away, pa, so I blamed it on the parrot."

Altogether Likely.

In a certain town a Mr. Cobb married a Miss Webb, and it was said he fell in love with her as soon as he spied her.

Might Be Misunderstood.

"He's a perfect duck of a doctor!"

"For heaven's sake don't tell people so."

"Why?"

"Naturally, they'll think he's a quack."

The friend who is to accompany a pair of newlyweds on a two-months' trip thru Europe will be simply drifting with the tied.

A navvy who had been reported as missing for several days was discovered at the bottom of a disused pit-shaft, quite drunk, but uninjured, and happily playing a mouth organ. In our opinion this is playing it rather low down.

Every time Umson sees a broken bottle in the road he carefully kicks the pieces out of the way and gets credit for being thoughtful. But in reality he only wants people to think he owns an automobile.

"Crossed cricket-bats were held above the heads of a bride and bridegroom as they passed out of St. Anne's Church, Wandsworth, at the end of the marriage ceremony." A survival, possibly, of the good old custom still in use among the Australian aborigines, we believe, of batting one's bride over the head.

Qualification.

I would I were a Suffragette
On England's foggy strand,
Where every argument is met,
One might say, brick in hand.

I'd like to chuck a stone or two
At George, if he were near,
Or pummel Churchill black and blue
Or box friend Asquith's ear.

I want to be a fighting dame
And squabble in the mob;
I'd feel that I was in the game
And strictly on the job.

I want to do some crazy thing
That all the world may note;
It's such good evidence to bring
That I am to fit to vote.

THE HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

Pleasant Evening Reveries—A Column Dedicated to Tired Mothers as They Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

THE KEYNOTE OF HAPPINESS.

How few women realize when they are railing against men — his faults and deficiencies — how largely they have themselves to blame for the masculine feelings. The men who make ba husbands, nine times out of ten have had weak, querikous, irritable mothers, and the women they marry, as a rule, content themselves with resenting the act of their shortcomings without making any strenuous efforts to rectify them. So history repeats itself, and the sons, like their fathers before them, grow up in an atmosphere filled with bickerings and dissensions. How can great and good men be products of such lives? The sooner that women awaken to a thorough understanding that the key note to all family happiness is harmony, and that it devolves upon them alone to establish that harmony, there will be more heard of domestic felicity and less of the "new woman." Every man, no matter how viciously inclined, clings to his ideal when he can find one, and it is surprising how they sometmes manage to defy the most ordinary of feminine mortals. If each and every woman would determine to be worthy of deification by the man she loves, that man (were he rightly so-called), would be inspired by her example, and the desire to rise to her level would soon find place in his heart. We don't say that this is an easy part for a woman to play, but surely it is better than being content to slip down off the pedestal that man would place us on, and insisting upon being made of no finer clay than he.

BOOKS.

Few finer tributes to books have ever been paid than this of Henry Ward Beecher:

"When, one by one, a loving student has gathered from all departments of human learning a multitude of books, they are not alabaster vases filled with the sweetest perfume of the human soul, they are living creatures; they are companions; they have received the homage of our best hours. We have hung our hearts upon them, and as they sprang from the noblest parts of their authors, they are clothed with the noblest associations of our own lives."

Nothing gives more serenity to old age and so fortifies against inward or outward woes as a collection of good books. The young couple who are wasting their income in a mad effort to keep pace with all that shifting fashions demand in clothes could insure far greater happiness for the future by investing in a modest library as they go along.

Daniel Webster, in speaking of the log cabin, that once stood amid the snow drifts of New Hampshire's hills, and where part of his father's family was born, uses the following beautiful language:

"Its remains still exist. I make to it an annual visit. I carry my children to it to teach them the hardships endured by the generations which have gone before them. I love to dwell on the tender recollections, the kindred ties, the early affections, and the touching narratives and incidents which mingle with all I know of this primitive family abode. I weep to think that none of those who inhabited it are now among the living, and if ever I am ashamed of it, or if ever I fail in affectionate veneration for him who reared it, and defended it against savage violence and destruction, cherished all the domestic virtues beneath its roof, and through the fire and blood of seven years' revolutionary war, shrunk from no danger, no toil, no sacrifice, to serve his country, and to raise his children to a condition better than his own, may my name and the name of my posterity be blotted forever from the mmeory of mankind."

The first question a man asks when he sees a girl flirting is whether she is a respectable girl or not. You see how it raises a doubt at once. This being the case, surely no modest girl can afford the slightest degree of this pastime. When the down is brushed from a peach the beauty is so marred that it can never be restored, and so when a young girl throws lightly aside that sweet and modest reserve so becoming to a maiden, and which so elevates her and enables her to command the respect of all, she loses her greatest charm and becomes rather common and che too use no rash term. Flirting may seem to the giddy and thoughtless girl to be wonderfully amusing, and she may even get an idea that she is quite fascinating, but it is a most degrading thing and should be frowned upon by every young lady who has an ambition to become a worthy and charming woman.

If a child has any sensibility, scolding either kills it or makes it vicious. Children have rights which ought to be respected as much as their elder's. They can reason as well as older and wiser heads. They are as quick to see an injustice and know as well as any one else when parents are making fools of themselves.

A well regulated home is a millennium on a small scale.

THE TREATMENT OF ACUTE DISEASES.

Bear in mind that Nature Cure regards every acute disease as the result of a healing, cleansing effort of Nature; in other words, as Nature's attempt to eliminate waste matter or poison, to overcome some obstruction or to repair some breach of continuity in the system. From these premises, we rightfully infer that we must not counteract Nature in her work of purification and repair but on the contrary assist her:

1st. By establishing normal habits in a normal surroundings about the patient.

2nd. (a) By the economy of vital force; this necessitaes stopping all leaks and unnecessary expenditure of force; (b)is necessitates stopping all rest and sleeping.

3rd. By elimination, which necessitates pure food and drink, judicious fasting, Hydrotherapy (Water Cure), Light and Air Bath, Massage, Osteopathy, Homeopathy and simple herb remedies.

Anything that promotes the processes of purification and repair, without unduly forcing, poisoning or mutilating the organism, is good Nature Cure practice. Let there be an abundance of fresh air in the sick room, day and night. Make use of frequent air and sun baths (exposing the nude body to air and sunlight). From the appearance of the first suspicious symptoms until the fever abates and there is a hearty natural hunger, feeding should be reduced to a minimum or, better still, entirely suspended. If any food is given, it should consist of raw, juicy fruits, cooked fruits, raw, juicy vegetables, or vegetables cooked in a proper manner, that is, by steaming them in their own juices. Raw vegetables may be prepared with lemon juice and olice oil. Salt, pepper, vinegar and other condiments should not be used. All starchy and proteid fruits should be omitted or restricted to a minimum of toast, rice, potatoes or some light cereal.

Total abstinence from food, as long as there is no natura l hunger, is of primary importance in the treatment of febrile diseases. There is no greater fallacy than the idea that a fever patient must be sustained (?) by strengthening food and drink, or worse still by poisonous tonics and stimulants. Only too often habits and appetite are mistaken for hunger. A common spectacle witnessed at the bedside of the sick is that of well-meaning but misguided physicians and friends forcing food and drink on the patient, when his whole organism rebels against it and the nauseated stomach expels the food as soon as taken. Virulent poisons, so-called sedatives and tonics are then resorted to, in order to paralyze the digestive organs into submission. For the following reasons, aversion to eating in febrile condition is perfectly natural:

The entire organism, including the mucous membranes lining the digestive tract, is engaged in processes of elmination, not of assimilation. Nausea, slimy and fetid discharges, constipation alternating with diarrhoea, etc., indicate that the digestive track is throwing off disease matter, and that it is not in a condition to digest and assimilate food.

Fasting is imperative, as we have seen in acute diseases and during eliminative healing crises. For vigorous, fleshy persons, positive mentally and physically, short fasts frequently repeated are indicated for the reduction of superfluous flesh and for the elimination of morbid and waste material.

The sanguine, vital temperament, with animal qualities srongly developed, enslaved by bad habits and evil passions, is greatly benefited by short and frequent fasts. In these cases, the experience affords a fine drill for self discipline, the strengthening of self-control and the conquest of the lower appetites.

Dear Doctor,—I have seen many questions answered in this paper, but none so far how to stop a nosebleed. I am troubled with it quite often, and am obliged at times to call in our family doctor to stop it. S. J.

I have an several occasions told how to overcome nosebleed, but an pleased to repeat it for your benefit, as well as recent subscribers.

Persistent and profuse nosebleed, is due to some constitutional difficulty, and you either suffer from an oversupply of blood in the veins, or there is some obstruction which retards the flow of the blood. It can also be due to lack of blood—anemia. You should avoid blowing he nose when it bleeds, also avoid hawking and coughing. You should sit still, holding the head upright, if possible, unless you are very weak, when you should lie on the side from which the blood flows, as it is very seldom that the nose bleeds from both nostrils at one time. A piece of ice can be placed on the side of the face from which the blood is flowing, and another piece held in the mouth. One very good method is to inject a little ice-water in which has been dissolved a little salt into the nose.

If these methods do not give the desired relief the nose must be plugged with clean cotton, using a round stick the size of a small lead pencil for the purpose of putting it up into the nostrils. In other cases placing cold water or ice against the back of the neck is effective. The latter is valuable in anemia or lack of blood. If you are anemic it is of course necessary for you to build up your general health so as to increase the quantity and quality of the blood. A special preparation of properly selected tissue foods would be valuable in such a case.

Collection Of Egyptian Charms

The modern woman who delights to jingle a bunch of miscellaneous charms at her wrist, and who is on the lookout for fresh ideas will learn with satisfaction of a collection which includes every form of luck emblem the world has known. This collection, at a moment when every automobile has its mascot and every watch chain its fetish, has a rather ironical significance and illustrates how little human nature has really changed.

The collection is included in the Historical Medical Museum, founded by Henry S. Wellcome, and comprises Roman, Egyptian, Arabic, African, Chinese, Japanese and European pieces, ancient and modern.

The Egyptian charms include several small examples of that most famous and potent of all, the "Ankh," or key of life, which in Egyptian pictures is often seen in the hands of divine personages.

But by far the commonest is that known as the "uatchat." To ward off the prevalent ophthalmia and other eye affections the ancient Egyptians used to trace on the lower eyelid a mazical scroll-shaped pattern with powdered antimony, and the model of an eye so decorated (uatchat) was also worn as a charm.

The Roman collection dates back to about the time of Christ. The exhibits are made of copper bronze and are of the usual shapes. A very interesting figure, concerning the nature of which very little is known, represents a small horse, while another shows a shark's tooth imbedded in a clasp of metal. These are rather bigger and more clumsy than the Egyptian ones and much less desirable as ornaments.

Besie the Roman exhibits are early and late pieces from West and Central Africa, the Congo and Arabia. mong these is a necklace labelled "Kubil," or "Kill Sixty," which was no doubt worn by a warrior. There are also several wood crocodiles with flat, smooth backs. It is said that these were used by doctors when puzzling out a difficult case. The doctor rubbed the crocodile's back and the animal told him what was wrong.

The modern collection is even more interesting than the ancient. It is a revelation in present day superstitions, every item of it having been recovered from the original owners within the last few years.

The first piece is a small stone, like a human foot, carried about by a Frenchman who believed that it cured his gout and who parted with it very reluctantly. In the next case is a piece of amber shaped like a heart and used to ward off rheumatism until three years ago. A "rheumatism potato" from Norfolk lies beside it.

Near these are two cards, each bearing a pair of moles feet, which in Norfolk are still carried about as a toothache cure.

PAT'S MAKESHIFT

Pat was making his first voyage on the sea, when suddenly the dread cry of "Man overboard!" rang out. Away rushed Pat to assist in the rescue.

"Throw him the buoy! Throw him the buoy!" roared the captain.

Pat thought he understood. Seising the steward (a little man), who stood near, he dropped him over the side, saying:

"You ain't exactly a boy, old 'un, but you're only a little chap, so pr'aps you'll do as well."

VACATION SUGGESTIONS for the SEASHORE

THOUSANDS of people in Canada enjoy vacations every year. Practically everybody who can afford it, takes a summer outing for health and recreation.

We have no right to live only to do business. Rest, different environment and a change from the daily grind of life result in healthier, happier people.

TAKE A VACATION!

BIRDSEYE VACATION VIEW.

How the People of the United States Play in Summer Time.

Among the agricultural population, after haying and reaping the early grain, there is a lull in the press of farm work, which gives time for the August excursion to the seashore. The dwellers in the seashore cities take their vacations on the farms and the mountains of the back country.

The people of the south move to their own springs in the Alleghenies and to the seaside resorts of New Jersey and New England. The great lakes furnish resting spots for the middle west, and the farther west has its cool summer dwelling places in the Rocky mountains and their foothills. This annual summer transfer of millions of people is a strong factor in welding together the different sections of the United States.

TO LEARN CRAWL STROKE.

You Are but Half a Swimmer Unless You Know This.

One is but half a swimmer if he has not learned the crawl stroke. The general stroke may be acquired by a land drill. Begin with right foot advanced, knees stiff, leaning forward to imaginary water level; face turned toward left elevated shoulder, with top of head down and mouth up. Move the arms regularly and continuously, after the fashion of a windmill, but more slowly, always maintaining the same relative distance apart. Left arm swings upward and forward, with palm of hand upward. Right wrist bends so as to hook and grip the water. Right arm swings downward and backward.

In the next position the right shoulder is depressed, right elbow up, right thumb down, hands flat, left elbow up, left palm up, little finger in advance. Swing the right arm back, the left forward. In the third position the right shoulder and elbow are elevated, face turned to the upper shoulder. Swing the left arm back, the right forward. On the extreme right the

In the cut the swimmer is shown in the water. Note how the water is gripped by the strongly curved right wrist edgewise, like the blade of an oar. The left hand has just left the water with a vigorous jerk. In the next position breathe out through the nose under the water, working the arms like a double bladed paddle in the hands of a canoeist. When the left arm has finished its stroke and is swinging forward the right arm has begun its stroke and is swinging backward. Note that the palm is up.

There is no system of motion so powerful for correcting round shoulders as the crawl stroke. This is because the crawl is chiefly deep breathing and shoulder action.

LET THE FROG TEACH YOU.

Learn to Swim by Not Trying to Keep Head Out of Water.

The frog, a champion swimmer, the model of man, has his mouth on top of his head. Man uses the mouth, not the nose, in breathing while swimming. The nose is usually choked with water.

When dogs begin to swim they try to keep their heads away up. When they learn how to swim they keep only the nose above water. So it is with all other animals.

But their heads, being light, do not drag them under, as man's head does him. So they survive to learn better.

The chief effort of every beginner in swimming is to keep his body from the waist up out of water. The higher his head is above it the better he is pleased.

Not even a champion could swim very far that way. He would tire and drown.

Man's swimming motions are as natural as any animal's. He can learn to swim in a day if he will only go about it right.

Tennis More Popular Than Ever.

Tennis is more the go this year even than last.

USING THE SHOTGUN.

Proper Way to Pull Trigger Is First Essential.

An axiom of shotgun shooting is that the arm is never to be held still upon anything—in this differing radically from the rifle. The trigger should be pressed, therefore, without checking the regular rising movement of the barrels, the pulling and upward movement of the sight being so well timed that the discharge will take place just before the center is covered.

Press the trigger, not by any conscious crooking of the forefinger, but by tightening the grip of both hands, the one pushing forward and the other drawing back. This is not only the right manner of pulling trigger on a shotgun, but tightening the grip of the hands enables the gunner to catch the recoil just as the blow of a fist is warded off before it gathers momentum.

"YOU LOOKED UP TOO SOON."

Here's a Tip For the New Man on the Golf Links.

If the golf player will direct his attention when making his swing upon applying his greatest effort after his club head reaches the ball he will find a tremendous increase in the distance he gets as well as a much smoother finish throughout the swing.

If the player will just try hard to see how long he can keep his club head against the ball he will find that he has no inclination to look up too soon or to apply the power at the wrong time.

You will hear the criticism, "You looked up too soon," more often on the links than any other thing, and this fault can be quickly and positively cured if the player will make this experiment.

FOOD FOR CAMPERS.

Don't Forget to Take Right Kind of Salt Pork.

In these days of canned meats, vegetables and fruits the camper is saved the necessity of carrying bulky soup piles. Canned meats, though, do not displace salt pork.

Nothing can take the place of that. It fries the fish and flavors the stew and is good for itself alone. Buy pork that is hard and of a pink color. White hardy looking pork avoid at any price.

Twenty pounds of good pork is little enough for a party of four to use in two weeks under ordinary circumstances.

"Are you making any sacrifice during Lent?"

"Oh, yes. I'm not running bills at any of the dry goods stores this month."

NOT SCARED BY BILLS.

"It is said that women are braver than men. Do you believe it?"

"Well, I think more of them would take a chance at marriage."

WHAT CROMWELL DID.

When British Army Triumphed Over the Parliament.

Is the army of Great Britain to be obedient to the ministry, that is, the House of Commons, or may there be a commander with the resolution of a Cromwell to dissolve the House? It was on April 20, 1653, that Cromwell dissolved the rump Parliament placing military power above civil government. Cromwell having ordered a company of musketeers to follow him, entered the House. He was dressed in plain black clothes and gray worsted stockings. Sitting down, he listened for a time to the proceedings. The members were deliberating on a bill for future representation, in which they should have a permanent place. Cromwell was resolved to make an end of them.

When the question was put, he rose, put on his hat and began to speak. He was interrupted by Sir Peter Wentworth, who remonstrated with him for his abusive language. Blazing up, Cromwell clapped on his hat, saying: "We have had enough of this. I will put an end to your prating." And stamping his feet, he said: "It is not fit you should be here any longer. You have sat too long for any good you have been doing lately. You shall now give place to better men. Call them in," he exclaimed, and his officer, Harrison, and a file of soldiers entered the House.

"You are no Parliament. Some of you are drunkards," bending a stern eye upon Mr. Chalenor; "some of you are ——," a word expressive of a worse immorality, here he looked at Henry Marten and Sir Peter Wentworth, "living open contempt of God's commandments. Some of you are corrupt, unjust persons—how can you be a Parliament for God's people? Depart, I say, and let us have done with you."

He lifted the mace from the table and gave it to a musketeer to be taken away. The members were then driven out. When all had gone out, he went out, too, and locked the door. From that time Cromwell was master of the three kingdoms for about five and one-half years.

London Still Buys Birds.

In the great London market, the sale of birds and plumage still goes on. A recent report says that in February 24,800 humming bird skins were sold, and that, taken in large lots, they only cost two cents each. In three London sales, 223,490 birds were sold. Egrets are still most fashionable, notwithstanding the agitation of bird lovers. Of these, 139,168 were sold. The beautiful bird of paradise is in danger of becoming extinct, the milliners buying 21,698 of their skins.

The United States will not allow the importation of the plumage of any wild bird, and the British Parliament is sure, it is believed, to pass the plumage bill. Already it has passed its second reading almost without opposition.

A campaign has been started in Europe by James Buckland, who believes that many insect pests would be exterminated if women would stop wearing plumage in their hats and if small boys would stop shooting them.

It appears that the dealers in plumage are threatening to boycott the ostrich trade, but this has no effect on the advocates of the plumage bill in England. In this matter women have not done what they might. There would have been no need for legislation had any considerable number of ladies in any country refused to wear the feathers of wild birds.

Move Sir Isaac Newton's House.

The British are much more sensitive to the appeal of historic monuments than ourselves, and they are correspondingly more expert in their preservation. Sir Isaac Newton's house, which had been condemned to demolition, commended itself to the preservation societies, and, being unable to save the house on its site, they took it to pieces, brick by brick, and board by board, to rebuild elsewhere when a suitable place can be chosen. Every detail of its construction, from the tiles to the floor boards, was marked and numbered, and a plan of the structure was recorded by a prominent firm of London architects. The building has thus been packed away, and it is announced that its more important rooms will be set up again at the Manor House in 1914 for a special Newton and Burney exhibition.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

GETTING OUT OF THE DEPTHS

The heart and the fight had gone out of Tyler, and as he sagged back in the car seat it seemed to him that he knew just how a man feels who decides to go out of life the quickest and easiest way with the help of a river or a revolver. He thought he knew how such a man feels, but it was a cowardly way to dodge the issues of life, and not his way; he was of the stuff that faces them, no matter how hopeless the outlook.

His outlook was hopelessness supreme. He was on his way to a session of the state court where he was to be tried for a crime with which he had been charged. Other men were on the same errand. Below him he could see a man handcuffed to a sheriff; but Tyler knew that his own case was unusual. He had, innocently, and with no criminal intent, done what the law would not forgive. The irony of his position was made stronger by the fact that he would be convicted by the evidence of one man, and that man refused to believe that the intent was innocent. Tyler's lawyer had vainly urged the man Drummond by name, to give Tyler the benefit of the doubt, but had been flatly refused.

It was in keeping with Drummond's character to refuse. Tyler could see him ahead in the car, shrugged down in the seat, his beefy thick neck upholding a thick, bullet-like head.

It was a comedy as far as Drummond's steady, unyielding refusal to withdraw from his position was concerned; it was tragedy as far as Tyler was concerned, for it meant jail for him, the failure of his business, and the breaking up of his home. The slow tears came into Tyler's eyes and he turned with a sigh to the window.

It was a queer position to be in—to have have one's happiness suspended in a man's opinion, but Tyler was in it. Drummond believed Tyler's intent was dishonourable, and would testify to his guilt. On the other hand, if Drummond believed the motive was honourable, but mistaken, his testimony would free Tyler. Over and over Tyler thought of that, coming to the inevitable conclusion that he could not avoid.

He decided he would go into another coach, where he could not see the back of the bullethead whose obstinacy was to mean his conviction. Wearily he arose and started out to the rear coach.

The train was shooting along swiftly. He opened the door and, clinging to his hat, stepped across the platform, when something seemed to rise underneath him with a shriek and roar and catapult him through the air.

He landed in something soft, and rolled over and over until stopped. He gathered himself up with a cry of wonder; slowly his dizziness passed; then the full realization of what had happened came to him—a wreck! Next he cries of men in agony, the shouts of those who were running wildly hither and yon, penetrated to his consciousness. The sounds steadied him, and he scrambled to his fet. Beyond him, down the embankment, the coaches were piled; smoke was beginning to rise from them, and the hissing streams of steam.

He started toward the coaches on he run, limping a little and gasping for the breath that had been knocked out of him. Confusion and excitement were everywhere; not one of those who had escaped seemed to know what to do, and vainly did Tyler try to rally them.

As he hurried back after drawing the crumpled figure from beneath the twisted mass, he heard someone's low moaning cry for help. Glancing in the direction Tyler saw that the cry came from a man pinioned near a broken steam pipe, upon whom the steam was beating mercilessly.

Tyler jumped over the wreckage and looked under the twisted car. A glance told him who the man was—Drumnd. Drumond saw him and cried for aid. A sudden wild joy went through Tyler; the grim, vengeful spirit of some past ancestor seemed to rise within Tyler. He would leave Drummond there, and the red hot steam would shut the German's lips so tight that they would never open in an earthly court. Without the testimoy of Drummond, Tyler knew he would be freed! Freed!

He turned away, and the beseeching of the pinioned man followed him like a child's piteous pleading. Tyler went steadily on toward the other coaches; then the old spirit of revenge, the brutal nature that had arisen, sank back. He remembered that Drummond had a little family that he loved; and his loss would mean to them poverty and a broken home with grieving hearts.

Tyler ran back. One look told him that Drummond was unconscious. Tyler crept in among the tangled pipes. With an axe he had found in one of the broken emergency cases of the coach he chopped away the bonds that held the silent man. He drew him out and, lifting him, bore him down the hill and turned him over to a physician, who, with an arm in a sling, was nevertheless doing what he could for the sufferers.

Tyler worked on. The wreckage train came, and on into the night, among the flickering flames of the burning cars, the work of rescue went on. Tyler did not let up until a gray-haired veteran of the railroad put his powerful hand on Tyler's shoulders and told him to quit.

The tension broke and Tyler realized the strain he had been under. Back again came the bitter memories. He had saved Drummond, let him live to tie the ropes of conviction about himself. He had saved him; such assistance ought to count. Tyler reasoned in desperation, with even a man of Drummond's hard type.

Tyler gave the facts to his lawyer, and the lawyer communicated with Drummond. Drummond's reply was characteristic; the meatof it was in a few words: "I saw him (Tyler) come, look at me, go off. Did he help me? No! You say he came back—bah! when he looked at me, I saw he wanted me to die! Wouldn't it be good for him if I did?. I'll testify against him—yes! Somebody helped me out, but not him!"

Gray with the shock of the blunt words, Tyler shook his head as he read the letter, and looked into the sober face of his lawyer. "Bell," he said, "did you ever hear of a man in such a hole as I am? I didn't do wrong ,et am to suffer; save a man and he doesn't believe it."

The day of the trial came. Tyler's case was called, and with his lawyer he entered the court room through one of the side entrances and took his seat in the enclosure beside Bell. Tyler was conscious of inquisitive faces in the seats reserved for the spectators and others connected with cases not yet called, and he listened bitterly to the murmurs that greeted his appearance, even catching a low exclamation of wonder. He smiled grimly as he heard it, and drew a little comfort from the thought that someone, perhaps, was surprised to see that he did not look the criminal he was charged with being.

Tyler did not glance up as the man came in whose testimony was so fatal. He knew how the German looked; how determined and set the fat face would be.

The prosecuting attorney asked the first question and Drummond answered. The answer started a murmur of conversation about the room, and the questioning attorney stared. He went on, and amazement spread over his face. Drummond was testifying for Tyler.

Tyler's heart began to beat almost painfully, as he listened. Bell was sitting forward in his seat, his face tense but alert.

Question after question came, and answer followed answer—all for Tyler. The attorney threw down his papers. "Didn't you say you would testify for the state?" he asked Drummond.

The German hesitated, then said stolidly: "I say what I think."

It was the beginning of the end. Without the testimony, the case against Tyler was hopeless, and it was closed in short order.

In one of the witness rooms, Drummond held out his hand to Tyler.

"Tyler, I am one —— fool. I'm sorry. I went to the doctor at the wreck, an' he tell me wrong—he say the wrong man save me. Just a while ago, he sees you come in court, and then, sudden, he knew his mistake. Just as they send for me he catch me, an' tell me the truth. Tyler, you won't love me much yet, but forgive me some, eh?" he asked, his face sober and set with emotion.

"I'll forgive you." Tyler said, smiling. "I have things to be forgiven for, and forgotten, too!"

LOST LOVE.

Who wins his love shall lose her.
Who loses her shall gain,
For still the spirit woos her—
A soul without a stain—
And memory still pursues her,
With longings not in vain!

He loses her who gains her,
Who watches day by day
The dust of time that stains her,
The griefs that leave her gray,
The flesh that yet enchains her
Whose grace hath passed away!

Oh, happier he who gains not
The love some seem to gain.
The joy that custom stains not
Shall still with him remain,
The loveliness that wanes not,
The love that ne'er can wane.

In dreams she grows not older
The land of dream among,
Though all the world wax colder,
Though all the songs be sung,
In dreams doth he behold her
Still fair and kind and young.

—Andrew Lang.

Changed the Bidding.

Some excitement was caused at Christie's recently by the peculiar nature of the bidding for a Rembrandt portrait. It is a picture of an old man in a dark dress trimmed with fur on a panel, and the first bid was only £21. No one seemed anxious to secure it at first, and the bidding advanced very slowly to £189 10s. At that figure the hammer was about to fall when a newcomer suddenly hurried into the saleroom and offered a higher bid. Competition at once set in, and by rapid bids the price was carried up to £982 10s., when it fell to Mr. Permain.—London Answers.

14. Verses 8-9—What principle is illustrated in the fact that those who worked but an hour got the same pay at those who had worked a full day?

PRAYER.

Communication with his Maker by prayer is the most exalted function in which man can be engaged because it exercises the highest functions of the soul with the intellect and the world. It is the channel of heaven's choicest blessings. It excludes no one. It embraces all in the circle of its benediction. It gives us access to our Heavenly Father at all times, in all places and under all circumstances. In a word, prayer renders us co-operators with our Creator in the moral government of the world. —Cardinal Gibbons.

PERILS OF ALCOHOLISM

Infant Mortality Doubled When Women Drink

Tuberculosis has a little more than doubled in France since 1887, according to figures supplied to the Temps by Henri Schmidt, the Republican radical deputy, who is one of the leading figures in the temperance movement in France.

Deputy Schmidt also traces statistically the effects of drunkenness on births and upon the lives of children whose parents have been intemperate.

Infantile mortality in Normandy, where women drink exclusively, is just double what is in the temperate department of the Gers, where the people are sober, although much wine and brandy are produced in that district. Infantile mortality is at is highest in those districts where absinthe drinking is prevalent.

The writer assembles figures showing that after the age of sixty sober men have one-third greater expectation of life than intemperate men.

City Dwellers Degenerate

A well known American writer has said apropos of the rapid increase in urban population, as compared with rural dwellers, that "life in the city destroys the nerve of a man to take his chances with just nature. He would rather risk pauperism to get a 'job' than to endure wind and tide the chances of the seasons in the country. He has lost his plowhandle muscles, and his capacity to hope for a harvest just from the earth. He wants wages 'by the day' or month.' He lacks the courage to believe in the soil, to endure the hardships of cold in the winter, and of heat in the summer." For these and other reasons he does not care to return to the farm.

NO STATISTICAL MATTER

Unemployment is a Problem That Must be Grappled With

"Unemployment is not merely a matter of statistics to juggle with," declared Mr. G. E. Jackson of the Department of Economics in Toronto University College. "The problem of unemployment must be looked at at its proper perspective and in human terms. There is danger of our getting out of touch with the fact that unemployment results in actual suffering in the lives of the people affected. Their physiques are impaired, their stamina is lessened, and some of them are driven to crime. The greatest need in connection with this question is more knowledge. We know a certain amount—for example, we know that bad winters come with quite remarkable regularity, and, therefore, can be warned to look out for unemployment before it comes, and we know the causes of unemployment. What we do not know is the real extent of unemployment, what proportion of it is due to seasonal causes, and what is cyclical, what amount of work could be provided for men in the Canadian woods in winter, and among the unemployed the proportion of good workers and those known as 'work-shy.'" Mr. Jackson said that a university course should be a training for public life. It must not turn out merely technically trained men, but men who will take a broad view of social problems such as unemployment.

VALUE OF RHEUMA FROM THE COURT

Judge Barhorst Was Relieved of Rheumatism After Doctors Failed

If you have tried many other remedies and doctors' treatments for Rheumatism and found they failed, do not be skeptical about trying RHEUMA. Read the testimony of Judge John Barhorst of Fort Loraine, O.:

"After treatment by three doctors without result, I have been cured of a very bad case of Rheumatism by using two bottles of RHEUMA. It is now two years since I used the remedy, and I am still as well as ever. Previously, I was a cripple, walking with crutches."

Such testimony should be convincing. 50 cents of Warne Drug Co., guaranteed.

A NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

Can Be Averted by Feeding the Starved Nerves With Rich, Red Blood

Nourish your nerves — that is the only way you can overcome life's worst misery, nervous exhaustion. The fits of depression and irritation, the prostrating headaches, the weakness and trembling of the legs, the unsteady hand and the imperfect digestion that mark the victim of nerve weakness, must end in nervous breakdown if neglected.

Nourish your nerves by the natural process of filling your veins with rich, red, health-giving blood. Your nerves are crying out for pure blood and the mission of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is to make new, rich blood. This explains why these pills have proved successful in so many cases of nervous disease that did not yield to ordinary treatment. For example, Mr. W. H. Weldon, Annapolis, N.S., says: "In the strenuous life I have to follow the drain on my system was so great that my nerves became shattered, the blood impoverished and my whole system undermined. I tried a number of so-called remedies without deriving any benefit. Finally having read so much about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I decided to try them. The result was beyond by expectation. I regained my energy; the blood and nerves were rebuilt; I lost the sense of constant tiredness I had felt and was filled with new life and energy. I have since used the pills with beneficial results in my family and will always have a word of praise for them."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

PERMANENT SETTLEMENT OF THE IRISH PROBLEM NOW SEEMS TO BE IN SIGHT

Both Parties Have Virtually Agreed to Accept the Amending Bill, Effecting a Truce.

PROPOSALS REVIVED

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 4—Now that both parties have virtually agreed to accept the amending bill with further amendments as a truce, the politicians are busy attempting to frame an acceptable permanent Irish settlement. The Unionists have virtually dropped the open demand for an immediate reference of the question to the country by a general election. The Times admits, with the Archbishop of York, that this would probably precipitate a collision in Ireland. Among the old proposals now being revived is home rule within home rule, or the administrative autonomy of Ulster within a united Ireland is coming back into favour. Lords Macdonnel and Courtney, whose views carry great weight, favour this.

Among the Liberal newspapers the Manchester Guardian has from the first advocated it. It is impossible to forecast the final settlement. All that is certain is that the Unionist peers are now showing for the first time an appreciation of the real Irish problem.

DAIRY PRODUCE WAS ABUNDANT

Brisk Inside Market This Morning

Fresh fruit was more abundant on the market this morning, but the farmers were unable to say that the crop will be large. The first lot of red currants realized 25c for 2 baskets. So is cauliflower, while the price will lower for the crop appears to be somewhat small. Gooseberries were 75c per 6-qt. basket, and cherries 60c for the same amount. Strawberries are still 15c per basket, and are reaching their end for this season. Radishes, onions, lettuce, and rhubarb are all 5c a bunch, and new potatoes 60c a peck.

The produce in the inside market was more abundant. Spring chickens sold for 50c each, and the larger ones for 60 and 70c each, while geese realized 75c each. Butter was 25c and eggs 20c, 24c and 26c per dozen.

Canoeists Are Now Well On Their Way

The two Peterborough boys, Jack Davidson and Donald Cameron, who are accompanying Mr. Gordon Graham, of Lakefield, on a 1,000 mile canoe trip to New York City, are getting along finely, although their progress has been a little slower than was expected. The bad weather of the past week impeded the boys, who were weather-bound on several occasions. Word was last heard from them at Belleville, but by this time they will be nearing Montreal, and soon will be starting the second half of their journey.

NO HALF HOLIDAY FOR OFFICE STAFF

The question of giving the staff of the City offices a weekly half-holiday came up at the Committee of the Whole meeting last night. The Councillors, however, did not think it advisable to close the offices on Thursday afternoon during the summer. No action, therefore, was taken in the matter, but it was agreed that as long as the offices remained opened on Thursday afternoons with some competent person in charge, that the remainder of the staff could be given the half day off.

WOMAN'S COUNCIL RAPS MERCHANTS' MARKET IDEAS

Object to Retailers Being Allowed to Purchase Early—Want Fowl Weighed as at Present—To Present Petition to Council.

MERCHANTS ARE ILLOGICAL

The local Women's Council, acting in the interests of a large body of housekeepers, have a petition to be presented to the City Council, in which they object to the following:

First—To the merchants and wholesale dealers being allowed to buy on the market after nine o'clock, because then the merchants and wholesale dealers will buy up the best produce, and re-sell it at an advanced price to the housekeeper. If the council passes this by-law it will only be a short time before the market ceases to exist, for the housekeeper will not go to market when she knows that only left-over produce awaits her and the average housekeeper cannot reach the market before ten o'clock.

DISPLAY THE NAMES

Second,—We object to the proposed by-law, which says that the market vendors need not display their names on their baskets. The by-law which makes it compulsory for the names to be shown on their baskets has only been in force about six weeks, and we maintain that in that short time many of the farmers on the market have come to see that this by-law is an advantage to themselves as well as to the housekeeper, and if it were given a fair trial (six weeks is not a fair trial for any by-law) it would gradually improve the quality of their produce and the standing of the market. We, as housekeepers, insist upon the right to know the people from whom we are to buy.

WANT FOWL WEIGHED

Third,—We object to the proposed by-law that fowl need not be sold by weight. It is only just to both the merchant and the housekeeper that they should know what value they are getting for their money. A merchant may be fined if he does not give us the value of our money, and besides that the merchant has the expense of rent, delivery waggons and general up-keep. The farmer has none of these expenses, and yet the farmer may sell a fowl of four pounds and represent it as five pounds, whereas if the merchant undertook to sell a fowl under the same circumstances he he would be liable to a very heavy fine.

OBJECT TO AMENDMENTS

We feel that the by-laws which the Merchants' Association have recommended to you are unfair, illogical and inconsistent. We appeal to you not to pass them if you have the welfare of the general public, especially housekeepers, at heart.

We feel that the by-laws now in effect have not had a fair trial, and that the proposed by-laws if passed would be unjust and unfair both to farmers, housekeepers and merchants. So many sudden changes would only make the market by-laws ridiculous and seller in the eyes of the farmers and general public.

KEEP TOLLS.

Fourth,—We strongly object to abolishing the toll system. As it is, there are not funds enough to put in what improvements are needed, whereas if they were abolished it would come on the city taxes to keep the market up to the standard.

Employees Avert Threatened Fire

A fire which broke out at the Campbell Milling Company's plant, on Dalhousie Street, shortly before four o'clock, yesterday afternoon, might have resulted disastrously but for the timely efforts of the employees of the Company.

A nail, getting into the iron elevator, struck fire, and ignited the dust. The flames spread throughout the elevator and a telephone call brought the Brigade. In the meantime, however, the employees worked assiduously with the garden hose and pails of water, and when the Brigade arrived the danger was past.

The employees are to be commended for their work, for the fire looked very serious at one time. Nor was the fire extinguished easily for the clouds of binding smoke was a serious handicap to them. The damage was only slight.

CITY TO PRESS FOR PAYMENT OF OVERDUE ACC'TS

City Relief Officer Miller is Authorized to Collect Accounts for Patients at the Isolation Hospital

INDIGENTS MUST PAY

At the Finance Committee meeting last evening, at which there were present, Aldermen Anderson (chairman), Johnston and Duffus, City Relief Officer Miller was instructed to press for the payment of bills of those who were treated in the Isolation Hospital and were able to pay for their attendance there. The committee agreed that the defaulting of accounts rendered for medical attendance, etc., when a patient had been treated in the Isolation Hospital should be stopped at once and the thing be placed on a business basis. So Mr. Miller was instructed to at once turn over all accounts that he was unable to collect to the City Solicitor for collection.

Mr. Miller was handed a bouquet by Mayor Buller when the latter said that he was a shrewd guardian of the city's interests in these matters and that things of that nature could very well be left to his discretion. It was also made very plain at the meeting last night that the indigent cases treated at the hospital should not be paid for by the city.

The Finance Committee meeting was followed by a meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council with Mayor Buller in the chair. The committee was waited upon by Mr. R. B. Kinnear, representing the Canada Creosoting Company, of Toronto, who addressed the assemblage with the object of putting before them the advantages of the creosoted wood blocks as a permanent pavement for streets of the city. There were present at the meeting Aldermen Langford, Johnston, Saunders, Duffus, McIntyre, Anderson, as well as the chairman, Mayor Buller. All of these had questions that were put to Mr. Kinnear, and he made an interesting plea for his particular kind of street paving. He pointed out that, while the initial cost of laying the wood block pavement was slightly greater than the laying of other forms of pavement, the advantages and resultant satisfaction more than warranted the little extra expenditure. Then too, in reality the pavement cost less than it would seem at first, as its life was long and it required very little expense for upkeep. He pointed out that if wires had to be laid on a street, or any underground work done that it would be necessary only to remove a few of the blocks, and not necessary to tear up a large portion of the pavement near the place where the work was going to be done.

Fourteen million miles of pavement he claimed were now on the streets of the principal cities of the world, including London, New York, Paris and other cities, and there, as well as in several Canadian cities, they were giving great satisfaction. They were little affected by heavy traffic, and they obviated to a certain extent the likelihood of accidents as the motor cars and horses did not skid on the wood pavement as on the smoother varieties. Then to, the noise of horse traffic was less. Finally Mr. Kinnear was advised to wait upon the Board of Works next Wednesday night, when the tenders for street paving will be opened.

"Well and truly laid"—The Prince of Wales' First Public Duty.—What the Prince described as his first public duty was performed on behalf of the Church, when he laid the foundation stone of St. Anselm's Church, Kennington Cross, on the site of the Palace occupied by the first Duke of Cornwall, the Black Prince, five and a half centuries ago. The Church is for the convenience of worshippers on the Duchy of Cornwall estate and in the course of a singularly happy speech, the Prince stated that though at present he cannot pretend to much knowledge of the difficulties which beset the housing reformers, by studying the comfort and happiness of his tenants he hopes to gain experience.

NEW TURNBULL STORE OPENED

This Morning With a Business Rush That Augurs a Splendid Future

BARGAINS ATTRACTED

Business at the new Turnbull store opened with an auspicious rush this morning at 10:30 o'clock. Women began to gather before the George street and Simcoe street doors fully an hour before the attendants swung them back, and it was an eager and impatient swarm of shoppers that invaded the splendid new building.

While some dallied to admire the handsome furnishings the majority sought the bargain counters without any preliminary investigations. The main attraction for the women appeared to be a sale of white waists on the second floor. The women were three deep around this counter, and the half dozen clerks attending them were introduced to a whirl of real activity, while the sale was at its height. On the ground floor near the George street door a special bargain in women's hose gathered another clump of buyers, and throughout the entire first and second floors the rest of the crowd moved in easy distribution. The formal opening of this store will be held in September, and will be marked by special features. The business opening this morning must have been a great satisfaction to Mr. F. , Might and his efficient staff.

JURY RETURNS VERDICT OF "ACCIDENTAL DEATH"

Much Evidence is Taken at Adjourned Inquest into Death of James Cowie—G.T.R. Requested to Place Danger Signal at West Point—Evidence of Engineer is Interesting.

A DANGEROUS CROSSING

We, the jury empanelled to enquire into the death of James Cowie, find, from the evidence submitted that he was killed by a G.T.R. noon train at the Monaghan crossing, and that his death was accidental, and that no blame can be attached to anyone. But we would strongly recommend that the G.T.R. be requested to have an electric bell, or some other device installed at that point, so that a similar accident may be averted, on account of the crossing being considered dangerous, the view of the train being obstructed.

The above was the verdict that was returned last evening at the coroner's enquiry into the death of James Cowie, who was killed by a G.T.R. train on Dominion Day. The jury had made their finding within ten minutes, the deliberation being very short.

A large number of witnesses were called, all of whom stated almost the same story, the only point of difference being as to whether Cowie and his companion were intoxicated. Two witnesses swore that they were, while others would not take their oath on the question.

The first witness called was Arthur Kennedy, a cement contractor, who resides in Smith. He was a passenger on the train, and did not know much about the accident, only that he got out and saw the man's severed body lying on the tracks. The buggy in which the unfortunate man, Cowie, and his companion came by their accident, it transpired in cross-examination of Kennedy, was owned by him. He, in the morning, had gone over to the brewery, to ascertain whether he could get any feed for hogs, and on his return, put his horse and buggy in at the Palace Hotel. He told the hostler that in the event of his not returning, to feed the horse, as he would be going to Port Hope. The witness further stated that he saw Cowie and Lidell in the bar of the Palace Hotel on his return from the brewery, but he did not see them take a drink. He stated that he did not know that the deceased man had taken his horse and buggy. He had not given him permission to use it.

Just Before the Accident.

Patrick Corsey, 565 Romaine street, butcher, sworn, stated that he did not see the accident happen. He stated that while he was in his garden, he saw the men drive up the road in the buggy. They were at that time two blocks away from him. He could not hear them talking, but he saw them get out of the buggy for a second, and then get back. He could not swear that they were either sober or intoxicated. When they got in again, they drove off in a southerly direction, toward the track. Soon after they passed, continued the witness, I heard the train's whistle blow for the Lansdowne crossing.

He did not see the accident, but heard some one remark that Cowie had been killed, and then ran as fast as he could for the spot as Cowie was a friend of his, and he had worked with him for years. He was talking to Cowie at 9:30 in the morning near the Matthews-Blackwell packing house on George street. He did not notice anything particularly striking about the man at that time. The men in the buggy had just got out of his sight, when the whistle of the train blew, and the next thing he heard of the accident.

He recognized Cowie before he saw his head and shoulders by the clothing he was wearing, and also by the ring he wore on his finger. Witness had heard of accidents at that crossing before, and stated that the crossing had a very bad reputation, and was a dangerous place. Witness could not say whether Cowie was under the influence of liquor.

Cowie was driving the horse at the time of the accident.

Mr. Wearing, representing the Crown—You did not see them drinking out of a bottle?

Witness—No sir.

Did Not Hear Whistle.

You cannot remember the whistle blowing for the Monaghan crossing.

Witness—No sir, I can't say I do.

It might have blown?

Witness—Yes sir.

Coroner—Did you notice them whip the horse,

Witness—No sir, I did not.

Coroner—Did I not understand you, to say to me the other day that the men were trying to beat the train over the crossing?

Witness—No sir. I said that they were trying to get over the C.P.R. tracks, before the noon train came along, and they had just crossed when the train went by.

Coroner—How fast was the train that killed this man travelling?

Witness—I don't know.

Coroner — Were they travelling fast?

Witness—No, they were just jogging along.

FORTY YEARS IN SOLITARY CONFINEMENT

Jesse Pomeroy, America's Most Celebrated Murderer, Has Been in Prison Since He Was Fifteen

MANY APPEALS

Examiner Special:

BOSTON, MASS., July 4. — Forty years in solitary!

This is the world's record of Jesse Pomeroy, America's most celebrated murderer, who has just completed his with year in a small, poorly ventilated cell in the Massachusetts State's Prison, at Charlestown, Mass.

When Pomeroy was a boy of 15 he was accused of torturing children in South Boston, Mass., and later when the bodies of several children were found, showing that they had been tortured to death, the lad was accused of murder, found guilty, and sentenced to solitary confinement for life.

For many years the different Governors of Massachusetts have been appealed to in an effort on the part of the friends of the prisoner to have him freed or at least to have his terrible condition of life remedied, at Charlestown. Nothing has ever been done. Whenever a movement was started to free the prisoner, stories appeared in the newspapers telling of crimes that Pomeroy has committed since in prison and a damper was put on the efforts to make his existence less miserable.

After this forty years of hellish life in a dingy prison cell a movement is being started to help Pomeroy. Women's Clubs in various cities are taking up the matter and seeing if something cannot be done, while nearer home, District Attorney Joseph Pelletier of Boston is lecturing about New England and advocating that something should be done for the prisoner.

District Attorney Pelletier said in his last lecture at the Revere House, Boston: "I don't advocate turning Jesse Pomeroy loose, but he should not be kept in solitary confinement. No man should be kept in solitary confinement. Yes, he did commit crime, but there are other crimes among us that are being committed every day, and some of these are just as bad. I think Pomeroy has been used cruely and I am doing all I can to help him."

Pomeroy's aged mother, Mrs. Ruth Pomeroy, of 47 Pearl Street, North Weymouth, Mass., is the most pathetic figure in the Pomeroy case. She is 80, bent almost double with rheumatism, and is despondent at her failure in her 40 years of effort to free her son. All these years she has had no other thought. She has been to see in person, every Governor who has been elected in Massachusetts, since her boy was sentenced, and she has never missed the one visit a month which the prison officials allow her. Outside of the prison guards Mrs. Pomeroy is the only human being the poor wretch of a convict sees in his solitary cell, from one year's end to the other. He is allowed thirty minutes of exercise outside his cell, with a guard each day, but he sees no one else and can not talk to his keeper.

Many people in close touch with the case, say that the stories which have kept Pomeroy at those years in solitary — those stories of torturing cats in his cell, of trying every few months to escape by cutting his cell bars, digging holes in the floor of his cell and by other acts of cunning, are lies invented by heartless persons.

Even those who declare they know it to be a fact that Pomeroy has misbehaved during his forty years of confinement at Charlestown say that it is a blot on the fair name of Massachusetts to keep him longer under the conditions that would drive the average man mad in a few weeks.

THE PASTORS AND THE PREMIER.

(Toronto Globe.)

When Sir James Whitney denounced the "demagogic clergy" who fought for the abolition of the bar in the recent campaign he made a very serious miscalculation as to the attitude of the pew. Sir James seems to think that a considerable proportion of the electors sitting under the pastorate of men like Rev. J. W. Magwood and Rev. John Coburn resented the intrusion of the clergy into the field of political discussion, and were ready to follow the Premier's advice to teach them a lesson. Had Sir James been more intimately acquainted than he is with Presbyterian and Methodist Church members he never would have tried to sow seeds of dissension between pulpit and pew. Very few even among the laymen who voted for Conservative candidates resented the action of the clergy. They recognized that the leaders of the people in spiritual things who had for a generation been preaching, praying, and passing resolutions against the open bar, could not honestly take any other course than come out on the side of Mr. Rowell after his declaration that he would abolish the bar if returned to power.

To suggest, as Sir James did, that the clergymen who opposed him were animated by party spirit indicated that the Premier has little knowledge of actual conditions. When he came to power nine years ago there was no more influential factor in his victory than the support of the great body of the Methodist clergymen of the Province. In his spirited reply to Sir James' abusive tirade against political pulpiteers, the Rev. Mr. Magwood makes this plain when he says:

"And as samples of what such sermons should be, allow me to advise you that some of us have a few which we preached back in 1905, and for which we received due praise from one, James P. Whitney by name. These are very valuable documents, and are 'worthy of all commendation.' We will gladly place them at the disposal of said Commission.

"But, sir, wen you say that these clergymen were anxious, above all else, for the success of this 'party move,' you utter a positive and palpable slander against men quite as honourable and conscientious as yourself. Many of these men whom you now abuse were your former supporters, and would have been with you on this occasion had you not turned your back upon them and even insulted them when they wished to consult you on matters which, to them, are of first and vital importance.

"And again, sir, when you charge that these clergymen used 'intemperate, violent, and abusive language,' you only pile slander upon slander. That is the one and conspicuous thing we preachers did not do. We stuck to our policy, 'abolish the bar,' and advocated it with all intensity of conviction, notwithstanding the fact that we were being slandered and abused by the Government Press and Government speakers from the Premier down."

Sir James has been so accustomed to "scolding" others who listened either meekly or in silent contempt that the vigorous repudiation of his slanderous remarks regarding the motives of the clergymen who opposed his policy in the recent election may astonish him and raise his choler. For the better part of a year he has been treated with great consideration by his political opponents as well as by his friends. He must understand that this courtesy was not inspired by cowardice, and that if he descends in his public utterances to the level of a common scold he is likely to encounter now and again some one with a tongue as rough and sharp as his own. The clergymen who stood for the abolition of the bar in their pulpits and on the platform did what they conceived to be their simple duty. All the invective and scorn of which Sir James Whitney is master will not alter the outstanding fact. The Premier of Ontario had the liquor interests solidly behind him. Did he hope or expect to have the clergy with him as solidly?

AGENTS WANTED

AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE. WE have specialty selling at sight to automobile owners. Big profits. Investigate immediately. Clyde Specialty Co., 63 River St., Verdun, Que.

A DIFFERENCE NOW

A few years ago, Liberal incompetence and mal-administration in the handling of public contracts was a favourite theme with opponents of the Laurier Cabinet, says the Montreal Herald. There were insinuattions of rake-offs, graft and middlemen. There were assertions that contracts were given to favourites and that the interests of the country suffered in consequence. It was charged that men and firms were given contracts which they were not competent to handle. That was the Conservative story in the years preceding 1911.

There is another story now. It is told by no less an authority than a member of the Borden Government. "When we took office," declared Hon. Sam Hughes, in speaking of work under his department, as reported in the Unrevised Hansard for June 6th last, "we became virtuous and tried to change the contractors, but we met with loss and delay and all sorts of trouble on the part of contractors and failure on the part of men who, in the course of years, would probably have become as expert as the employees of the old contractors. The old men have been doing this kind of work for years and can do it much more satisfactorily and, therefore, we are still giving them the contracts."

The Government has found that the best work was done by the contractors who were employed by the former administration. It cannot have found that there were improper acts on the part of these contractors in other years unless it is to be assumed that Premier Borden and his colleagues are prepared to trust the business of the country in the hands of men whom they know to have been guilty of wrongdoing. The fact is plain—and it is emphasized by the admission of Colonel Hughes—that under Liberal rule contracts for public business were awarded only to competent men or firms and that the country received a dollar's worth of value for every dollar paid. Slander cries were used by Sir Robert and his allies in gaining power. The Government's acts expose the slander now.

UNEXPRESSED APPRECIATION

"Be kindly affectioned one to another."—Rom. xii., 10.

What a pity it is that under the stress and strain of everyday life, we often give vent to ill-temper and vexation, as a relief to the nerves, towards the very ones that we love the best of all. We address them as we would never think of addressing outsiders! Also we often speak, and look and act, as we would not do, if some other person were present.

Many a home would be a Heaven on earth, if each member of the family would so act towards the others, that afterwards he would have no regrets for any word or action of his.

It will never be forgotten, the sight of a young man, hanging over the lifeless body of his father. All his life the thought would haunt him, that he had not been as thoughtful, kind and loving as he might have been, and then it was too late! After our dear ones are no longer with us, we may have the life-long regret that we had never told them how much we loved them, how much they were to us.

There is far too much reticence about expressing our affection for one another. We take too much for granted. We can scarcely realise how much joy it may give, loneliness it may cheer, discouragement it may lighten, if we would but give those we love an idea of how dear they are to us.

A friend wrote lately: "John's mother is very good to me, but Oh! my heart just hungers for a loving word or look."

"Oh, my friend, it would be better,
If to those we love we gave
Tender words, while they were with us,
Than to say them o'er a grave."

WASHBURN'S SUMMER CARNIVAL

Will be in Peterborough All Next Week at the Exhibition Grounds

The coming of the big Washburn Mighty Midway Shows will see this year a complete line of new and up-to-date shows that are in every way a novelty to the carnival-going public.

Mr. Washburn as yet carries the big trained wild animal exhibition, but has added more animal acts to the arena. A treat also will be the Lioness Rose and her three cubs. The feature and sensational act this season is the high diving performance of the champion lady high diver of the world, Miss Elma Meier, who leaps from a ladder 100 feet high into a tank of water that is but five feet in depth. The Ladies' International Band of 16 pieces give free band concerts every afternoon and evening on the show grounds.

Among the many attractions this season are the Motordrome, the most exciting of all the new rides now before the public and the fearless riders that compete in the races daily do so at a great risk of life and limb.

Another feature, and one that is worth the while for every one, is the Baby Incubator or the Fat Kids, three of the largest children on earth, whose combined weight is over 600 pounds.

The same Fun Factory that has made the Coney Island folks laugh will be the rendezvous of many of the patrons of the Midway as well as that famous $10,000 Crystal Maze.

Dreamland's Famous Sideshow and Land of Freaks from all parts of the world, and the wonder of living human beings, the Ossified Man, Ky-Lo, the Monkey Man, Madame Still and her Snakeland Show. The best of Musical Shows and the Progressive Girls in a merry comedy of new and original music. Prof. Hamburg's wonderful and instructive Athletic Show with the lady wrestlers and boxers and John Kilonis, the Greco-Roman middleweight wrestler who takes all comers during the week. The treat for the big folks as well as the children is the best of all Dog-and-Pony and Monkey circuses, introduced by Prof. John De'Alma and the lady and gentlemen trainers with the attraction.

Not to mention the trained Wild Animals would be to forget that King of Lion Tamers, Prof. Herbert, and his group of nine Nubian Lions in their many tricks; Madame Louise and her troupe of six splendid leopards; Mons Bartino and his arena of different specimens of bears, and Mlle Wenthros and her group of Tigers. This is the only Tiger act before the public that is trained by a lady.

The show carries many novel devices, among them a large Ferris Wheel, an Ocean Wave and the finest Merry-Go-Round or Carousal that money can build.

Courtesy is the by-word with the shows and the public will find on a visit that the grounds are orderly in every respect and the management tolerate no class of shows that are not clean in every detail. Ladies and children can attend and will be shown the best of attention.

The Exhibition Grounds will be well lighted every evening and the free Shows start at seven o'clock sharp.

LIBRARY NOTES

It is very hard in any library to get the full benefit therefrom unless one is conversant with the way in which its contents are catalogued. As a help to those who patronise it regularly, as well as to those who make casual use of it, a few notes on how to delve into its treasures are herewith given.

It must be distinctly understood, in the first place, that the catalogue proper by no means exhausts the entire resources of the library. There are no less than four different branches of the catalogue, but the public never seem to get beyond the one that deals in a general way with fiction and the other classes of literature that appear on the shelves in the stack-room. Besides this catalogue, there are the Juvenile Catalogue, the Reference Room Catalogue, and the one that deals with the vast amount of information stowed away in the pamphlet cases in the basement. There are no less than 58 pamphlet cases filled with all sorts of brochures, articles, and clippings on diversified subjects.

Besides these there is a special catalogue devoted to maps, and as the Library is being continually supplied with maps from Ottawa, its ability to meet the needs of the public is well evidenced. Many people do not know how to use the card catalogue, in spite of the fact that printed rules are placed on the case for their benefit. The main thing necessary is to be sure of what one is looking for. In a card catalogue such as ours, the problem is rendered exceptionally easy owing to the fact that almost every phase of a subject is represented by a card. In fiction, every book is represented by two cards, one giving the author's name and the other the title of the book. But in every other class of literature there are at least three cards, giving respectively the author, title and subject of a book. Thus, for a work on chemistry, a card is given headed Chemistry, another one giving the author's name, and a third the title of the work. In many cases where a book deals with three or four important subjects a card is placed in the catalogue for each of these subjects, and therefore, the best and most rational way to consult the catalogue is to look first for the author's name, and if by any chance the work of which you are in search has been omitted from the list of books under that name, then turn to the title of the book, and failing even that source seek for the information you need under the title of the subject dealt with in the book.

In the cards already enumerated these are some bearing the cryptic letters S. B. (These simply imply that the information sought for is to be found in Scrap-Book No. 1, 2, 3 or whatever is denominated on the card.

There are very many most valuable aids to the general reader in the Reference Room, and books are being constantly added, which enhance its value to scholars and casual readers alike. The latest addition, and one of the most important yet made is taht of the Dictionary of National Biography, which was lately purchased by the Library Board. It is in 25 volumes, and contains within its covers practically all that is needed concerning the lives of those who have been distinguished in the public life of the British Empire. It is a monumental work, authoritative, and absolutely reliable.

Much Pain From Kidney Disease

Doctored in Vain Until Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Were Used.

Kidney derangements are often associated with disorders of the liver and bowels, and under these conditions ordinary kidney medicines usually fail to effect cure. It is because of their unique, combined action on the liver, kidneys and bowels that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are so generally successful, even in the most complicated cases.

Mr. Emanuel Bernard, farmer, St. Paul's, Kent County, N.B., writes:—"About eighteen years ago my wife was bad with kidney disease, and suffered greatly from headaches, pains in bowels and stomach, and her heart was affected. For a year she was treated by her doctor, with no apparent benefit. She then used five boxes of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with most satisfactory results. This gave us such a good opinion of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills that we always keep them in the house to be used for all derangements of the kidneys, liver and bowels." Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, 25c a box, 3 for $1.00, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Extraordinary Values in Women's Pretty Summer Dresses

In the free and frequent use of the word extraordinary, we believe, it is rarely, if ever, more requisite than it is to describe the values in this instance.

The prices quoted are so very much lower than these garments are worth, that we do not see how any young woman can afford to disregard such a splendid opportunity, unless she already has all the clothes she wants—and that is something that never happened in the history of the world. This schedule of prices will give you an idea of the very marked reduction:

$12.00 Dresses for $6.00	$25.00 Dresses for $12.50
$15.00 Dresses for 7.50	$30.00 Dresses for 15.00
$20.00 Dresses for 10.00	$35.00 Dresses for 17.50
$22.00 Dresses for 11.00	$40.00 Dresses for 20.00

NEW PASTOR IS WELCOMED

Rev. J. P. Wilson Has Arrived to Take Charge of Charlotte St. Church

Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A., the new pastor of the Charlotte St. Methodist Church, arrived in the city on Thursday night from Napanee and was met by the supply committee of the church. A reception was held in the school room, supper being served to Rev. Mr. Wilson, his daughter and the church officials by the ladies of the church. Speeches were made by Rev. Mr. Wilson and several of the officials. The new pastor will preach his first sermons at Charlotte St. Church to-morrow. He was formerly pastor of the George St. Methodist Church.

MARKET AND CROP SITUATION

In the review of the market and crop situation this week, Canadian Grocer says:

The general outlook has not altered materially during the week, although there has been considerable improvement in the crop situation in Ontario, where general rains have been a great benefit in districts which were being burned up, and where the filling of the fall wheat heads has been greatly assisted as well as the growth of the spring crops. The West continues to send satisfactory reports. There have been general rains, and growth as high as 32 inches has been reported, with the heads beginning to fill; damage from hail has been light, and while there are some few districts where there has not been sufficient moisture, there is a big crop assured on the whole.

Western reports, coupled with the killing of rust reports from the United States, have depressed wheat prices still lower and the flour situation is very unsettled. Canada is not in line for export business in competition with the States where the new wheat is earlier and there is much speculation as to whether prices will hold until the new Canadian crop comes in. In some quarters cuts in prices are already reported, while millers are divided on the opinion as to whether or not they should reduce the quotations even after the new crop does come in. It is generally expected, however, that there will be cheaper flour.

The strawberry pack has been a very short one, even shorter than had been predicted, and it is stated that ten cents was paid in cases where there was keen competition with as high as twelve cents for select stock for bottled jam trade. Packers are now at work on the peas, which have a good outlook except that there is damage reported from the Western Ontario fields, where there have been heavy rains. Prospects are good for vegetables in general for the canners with a smaller acreage than a year ago, although there is a heavy crop of tomatoes as the result of the failure of the peach crop and the plants so far are in good condition. Canners report stocks, which were heavy at the first of the year, as having been cleared nicely, with the result that some of the staple lines will be exhausted before the new crop comes in; this is taken to indicate that grocers have been selling at close prices and that consumers are appreciating it.

Pork is somewhat firmer, but the low prices have affected lard, which is cheaper than for several years. Butter is easier and is getting down to a basis where business may be done with the States; nothing is being shipped to Western Canada. Cheese receipts rose last week, and prices go a little easier, but this appears to be the effort of English buyers to drive prices down and the downward course is hardly warranted by the production, which is greatly below last year.

Raisins and currants are dearer, and shelled walnuts higher, and the markets are generally strong, while, with the exception of Regina, there is nothing like a significant improvement in business reported. Winnipeg sees little benefit as yet from the good crop prospects.

Prunes seem to be a little easier, and it would appear that the California damage has been fully discounted, while Pacific Coast prices are too high to tempt European bidding in the face of good crop prospects in Bosnia.

Validity of Early Closing By-law Is Upheld By Court

GALT, July 2. — At Osgoode Hall, Toronto on Tuesday, the appeal of McNaught & Son, merchants, to quash the conviction of Magistrate Blake, for a breach of the early closing by-law was dismissed. W. A. Henderson of Toronto, represented McNaught & Son, while M. A. Secord, K.C., was for the King. The decision was received here as good news as it decides all questions as to the validity of the by-law. Justice Middleton handed down the decision.

Stewards' Cup For England

Special to The Examiner.

HENLEY, July 4—British oarsmen won the final of the Stewards' Cup, on the Thames, here, to-day, when the Leanders eight defeated the crew of Mainzer Ruder Verein of Mayence, Germany, competing the distance in 7.57. The Germans were rowed out before the half-way mark, while Leander was going strong.

NO ASHES LEFT IN WOOD SHED

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—I notice in to-night's paper that the fire on College Street was caused by hot ashes left in the wood-shed. Now, I wish to contradict that statement, as there had not been a fire in the stove for some time and no ashes at all left in the wood-shed.

RATHER SOFT FOR THE HUSBAND OF MARGARET ANGLIN

NEW YORK, July 3.—Testimony given before a referee in bankruptcy by Howard Hull, whose wife is Miss Margaret Anglin, actress, revealed that Mr. Hull has been supported by his wife since the time of their marriage three years ago. Mr. Hull admitted frankly and without hesitation that Miss Anglin furnished their house, paid his car fare, bought his clothing and provided him with all his spending money. He also admitted that he did not work, and had at the present time no means of livelihood except that provided by his wife.

In his examination by the referee who sought to determine the ability of Mr. Hull to pay a judgment for $2,628.50 obtained against him several months ago by Katharine Cooper, a negress, whom his auto injured, Miss Anglin's husband said that he lived at his wife's house, 6 East Ninety-third street. Further, Mr. Hull testified that all the furnishings belonged to his wife, and that she paid all necessary expenses.

"At the time you filed your petition herein, on May 12 last, what was your business, if any?" asked the lawyer.

"I have not any business, properly speaking," said Mr. Hull.

"On what do you spend for your support and livelihood?"

"Money that I get from my wife," replied Mr. Hull.

"Do you mean to say that your wife supports you absolutely?"

"I do," answered Mr. Hull.

"How long has she been supporting you?"

"About ever since we have been married."

His Wife's Representative.

"Has she been paying all of your personal expenses?" asked Mr. de Graffenried.

"Yes," replied Mr. Hull.

"Paid for your clothing?"

"Yes."

"Cartage?"

"Yes."

In like manner Mr. Hull testified that his wife pays all his incidental expenses, including his dues in the Players' Club; all household expenses, servants' hire, grocer's and other bills.

Mr. Hull said that he was by profession an actor, but that he had had no engagements to act for more than four years.

"I have read plays for my wife," he said, "and I have helped her as one would naturally expect a husband to help his wife. I might say that I was her personal representative. For instance, if you wanted to see my wife, you would have to see me first unless you already knew her or one of her managers. But I received no salary for this work."

Miss Anglin was to have been examined the same day, but was taking a vacation with friends in a camp at North Creek, N.Y.

The advance guard of the camp left on Thursday night and made preparations for the main body. The main body arrived on Saturday afternoon about 4.30 and at once helped to put the finishing touches to the camp. The camp, as well as being instructive in many ways, was also a pleasure camp. On the whole the outing was very much enjoyed and another is very likely to be held in the fall.

Orders for the Week.

All boys wishing to go to Toronto for the Duke of Connaught farewell rally will parade at the Armouries in full uniform at 7.30 p.m. on Friday, July 10th.

The following is one of the humorous incidents of the Scout camp. One of the boys, while on his way back from the country store, some three miles from camp, found it necessary to cross a field where some cattle were grazing. The Scout in question did not, however, notice that the animals were of the male sex, and as he was crossing the last fence of the pasture he was politely offered assistance by one of the bulls, and found himself safely lodged on the opposite side of the fence. Will you interview the bulls again, Jimmy Hunt?

ST. JOHN'S SUNDAY SCHOOL HELD ENJOYABLE PICNIC IN JACKSON PARK YESTERDAY

Favoured by a glorious summer day some sixty or more scholars attending the Sunday School of St. John's Anglican Church, were treated to a half-day's picnic in Jackson Park yesterday afternoon.

At 2.30 the scholars assembled at the School House. The party then proceeded to George Street, where special cars had been engaged to take them for a ride, the "ultima thule" of which was that charming lung of this fair City, viz., Jackson Park. Here, races, games and amusements of various kinds were indulged in until the period for refreshments had arrived. Lemonade, sandwiches ice creams, and cakes were then distributed to the expectant crowd, and it is needless to say, were heartily partaken of, and a speedy disappearance ensued.

The Park was looking at its best, and appears to be an ideal place for an alfresco picnic. The naturalness of the surroundings and the pretty wild flowers lend a great charm to the scene.

At 6 o'clock the National Anthem was sung and the happy band of pilgrims dispersed, each and every one having expressed themselves as pleased with the outing.

Thanks are due to those members of the teaching staff who were present, together with some of the officers and friends who assisted in making the affair a pleasant success.

HISTORY REVIEWED

A 16-page Brochure is being distributed by Charles A. Stoneham and Company, brokers, under the title "Tonopah, Past, Present, and Future". In this publication, which is one of the most elaborate ever issued by a brokerage house, there is reviewed the history and present condition of the Tonopah district, and of the leading properties of that district, with a forecast of the future of both district and properties. The text which is especially rich in valuable statistics, is embellished by half-tone illustrations of the principal mining and milling equipments of the district, and by property maps, showing the details of claims, and all shaft, mill and equipment locations. The stocks treated of individually, range from Tonopah Mining, the oldest property in the district to Tonopah Victor, one of the newest, and appended to each individual stock treatise, is a condensed corporate history showing the place and date of incorporation, capital, property owned, with its equipment, officers, and offices, registrar and transfer agents, dividend record, and the high and low prices recorded on the shares by years since 1907. The maps, together with designed initials and headings, are underlaid by a coating of silver ink, and the entire production is of unusual value and typographical beauty. Copies of this brochure may be had gratis at the local offices of Messrs. Charles A. Stoneham and Company, 23 Melinda street, Toronto.

Dr. McCullough's Evidence.

Dr. T. P. McCullough was then called, and stated that he attended the injured man. He was a passenger on the train, and the first thing he knew about the accident was when the train stopped. When he got out of the train, he saw the man who was killed lying on the tracks, and the man who was injured was in the baggage car. The latter was not badly hurt. His knee was dislocated. His injuries are not likely to be serious.

Mr. Wearing—What would you say as to the man's condition?

Witness—I would say that he was intoxicated. I cannot say that I smelt any liquor, but from the language he used to me while I was attending to his injury, I would say that he was intoxicated. He was pale, but that was caused by his injury.

Mrs. Ed. Allan, who lives in the neighbourhood of the scene of the accident, deposed that she saw the men driving along the road in the buggy on the morning of the accident. She could not hear them speaking, and could not see whether they were drunk or sober. She thought, however, that they were intoicated, on account of the manner they acted. One man, she stated, could hardly get into the buggy. She heard the train coming, and also heard the whistle.

Joseph Rogers, who resides in Owntown, said he knew the man who was killed, and saw him last two or three minutes before he was killed at the C.P.R. crossing. He saw them standing there, and as the train was due, was frightened that they would get run over. He would not say they were drunk at that time, but they were certainly under the influence of liquor.

Crown Ottorney—Had they liquor with them?

Witness—I did not see any, sir.

Saw the Accident.

Mrs. MacGregor was the next witness called. She resides within 0 feet of where the accident happened, and got to the window just as the rain and buggy came into contact with each other. She stated that the ig was right square on the track. The horse, however, by some peculiarity had crossed the track, and was not injured at all. She positively heard the whistle blow for the crossing. The above evidence was corroborated by Miss Marguerite McGill.

Joseph Lamb, engineer on the train which ran over Cowie, was next called, and stated that he was the engineer on the regular train, No. 92.

They left Peterborough some 31 minutes late, at 12:11. The train consisted of two engines, mail and baggage car, and three coaches. They were travelling at a rate of about 15 miles per hour when the accident happened. They passed several crossings. The first one at which they whistled was the Lansdowne crossing, as was called for by law, and then they whistled again for the Monaghan crossing.

Mr. Wearing—You will swear that you whistled at this crossing?

Witness—Yes, I will positively swear that I whistled at the crossing.

Cross-Examined by Mr. Wearing.

How long did it take you to go from one crossing to another?

A.—Perhaps a couple of minutes. Which engine were you on?

A.—The leading one.

As we came close to the crossing, within 100 feet, I saw this rig coming from the right-hand side—not travelling very fast. As soon as I saw it, I raised for the whistle. At that moment I noticed that he had seen us, and was pulling on the horse. Seeing him take this action I said everything is O.K. and continued my course. At that moment the man raised his hand and gave the horse a cut, and it bounded over the track. I could then see that nothing would avert an accident, and I immediately applied the air and emergency brake. Everything was working all right. I, on the front engine had complete care of all brakes.

Witness then described the position in which the mutilated body of Cowie was found, and also the injured man Lidell. Asked whether he thought that was a dangerous crossing, he said that any man of intelligence should know that any crossing was dangerous.

Similar evidence was taken from the fireman and conductor, and that concluded the evidence. The jury retired and returned in ten minutes with the verdict as stated.

BOOKS AND AUTHORS

"The Prince of Graustark," a new story by George Barr McCutcheon in the Graustark series, will be published in September.

A new novel by Cosmgsby Dawson called "The Raft," will be published in September. His first novel, "The Garden Without Walls," published last fall, has reached its ninth printing.

A new novel by Marie Corelli is promised for October.

"You Never Know Your Luck," by Sir Gilbert Parker, is light summery fiction, with a glorious setting in the Canadian town of Saskatoon. The sacrifice of Kitty Tynan leaves the reader wondering somewhat on the depths and manifestations of a woman's love.

Rupert Hughes, author of "What Will People Say?" was for nearly fifteen years a member of the National Guard, New York, and during the Spanish War was an acting captain in the 114th Regiment.

Henry Sydnor Harrison, who wrote "Queed" and "V. V.'s Eyes," recently presented to his admirers a new book entitled, "Captivating Mary Carstairs."

In the July Munsey's appears in complete form a new novel by C. N. and A. M. Williamson under the title, "The Shop Girl." It rings with romance and incidentally emphasizes some of the evils of a great departmental store. The story has the Williamson raciness, a rare girl—with a vein of humour and a young man whose type you seldom meet.

Booth Larkington's "Penrod" has gone to press for a second large printing.

Anne Warner's "Sunshine Jane" has gone through six printings. She has a serial now running in the Post, "The Gay and Festive Claverhouse."

Three prominent writers have recently contributed autobiographical object lessons in favour of the temperance crusade. All three of these works are well worth reading—"John Barleycorn," by Jack London; "Midstream," by Will Levington Comfort; and last but not least, "The Old Game," by Sam. Blythe.

The survival of the fittest means finally the survival of the self-controlled because they alone can adapt themselves to the perpetual shifting of conditions produced by industrial progress.—George Bernard Shaw.

Big Tenement Collapsed To-day In New York

Special Wire to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, July 4.— Bulletin — With fatalities variously estimated at from eight to forty, a big tenement house on Lexington avenue, occupied by a large number of families, collapsed this morning as the result of blasting operations for a subway nearby. Rescuers are working at the ruins now, with the assistance of hundreds of policemen and firemen.

Bad Fire In Beatty, Sask.

Examiner Special:

The Examiner has received a letter from Albert Argent of Beatty, Sask., giving particulars of the bad fire in that village some weeks ago, when five buildings were burned to the ground. A general store belonging to Mr. Ferguson. J. Knight's machine shed ,the International office, George Wallace's machine shop and A. Ferguson's oil house, were the buildings destroyed. Ferguson's loss was $10,000, Knight's $4,000 and Wallace's 100. Mr. Ferguson has a new building nearly completed.

Small Market Outside To-day

The farmers' market this morning had the average summer limitations. There was an absence of new spring vegetables, apparently the producers selling entirely to the middleman and thence to consumers. Formerly the attendance of those selling new vegetables was quite large, but with the exception of a little celery there was nothing offering. Strawberries sold at $4.50 per crate of 32 boxes; butter at 25c. and eggs at 22c.

NO LOW DRESS ORDER IN TORONTO

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, July 4. — Archbishop Spratt's declaration that he would prefer that women who wore low-necked dresses should not present themselves for communion, will find no similar order in Toronto.

"Our women, in Toronto, do not go to these extremes, at least in Church," said Rev. Father Haud, to-day.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED

The committee on arrangements appointed for Fraternal Sunday met in Fire Chief Howard's office last evening and passed resolutions and votes of thanks to the different persons and bodies who were instrumental in making Fraternal Sunday the splendid success it was. Secretary Hendry was instructed to write a letter of thanks from the committee to the Ministerial Association, the 57th Band, the Maple Leaf Band, the Salvation Army Band, the Sons of England Lodge, for the use of their rooms, to the marshalls, and to Mr. E. J. Waterman, who assisted the marshalls. The portion of the collections allotted to the Health Association for use in the consumptive outing is as yet not determined.

Assiniboia Pulled Off Rocks After Being Unladen.

MONTREAL, July 4.—A telegram to C. P. R. headquarters announces that the Assiniboia was floated at ten minutes after eight last night, and was proceeding under her own steam to Port McNicoll. The captain does not believe that his vessel suffered much damage. The boat has been lying on the rock since midnight Wednesday.

The 100 passengers on the steamer were taken off yesterday. They were taken to the sister ship Alberta, which was standing by. The Alberta continued on the voyage that was to have been taken by the Assiniboia.

The steamer floated after most of her cargo had been removed to the lighters which were rushed to the scene Thursday.

Yesterday morning the Alberta and a tug pulled at the grounded steamer for several hours, but were unable to move the big ship. After that the cargo was removed and the steamer pulled off. It is not thought that the boat was very seriously damaged. She will be inspected.

Told To Don Belts.

TORONTO, July 4.—Tired and exhausted from the loss of two nights' rest, the passengers from the steamer Assiniboia, which ran aground near Cove Island shortly after one o'clock Thursday morning, arrived in Toronto last night on the 9.35 C. P. R. special from Port McNicoll.

The party easily comprised a hundred or more, the majority of whom were westerners. They spoke rather reluctantly of their anxious 28 hours on the shoals.

Mr. Griffis, a passenger, stated that the Assiniboia was only going at half-speed in the fog when she grounded, and was no more than a quarter of a mile out of her course. He says the head waiter, a German, told all the passengers to put on lifebelts, but the captain soon checked the panic and countermanded the order.

Bribery Case Adjourned.

GODERICH, Ont., July 4.—Owing to the absence of Crown Attorney Seager at Toronto, where the degree of doctor of divinity is being conferred upon his son, Rev. Allan Seager, by Trinity University, there was a further adjournment of the conspiracy case in which Dr. A. H. MacKay, Conservative candidate in the recent election for Centre Huron, and Rev. Joseph Elliott are charged with attempted bribery. The case was adjourned until Thursday, July 9.

London Papers Differ In Reviews of Chamberlain's Life.

LONDON, July 4. — Hon. Joseph Chamberlain's funeral, which, according to his own wish, will be a most simple one, will be held in Messiah Unitarian Church, Birmingham, next Monday. Interment will be in Hockley Cemetery. In his youth Mr. Chamberlain was a Sunday School teacher in the Messiah Church.

Mrs. Chamberlain throughout the day received numerous messages of condolence, including telegrams from King George, Queen Mary and the Queen Mother Alexandra and other members of the royal family and from prominent persons at home and abroad.

The Morning Post, reviewing Hon. Joseph Chamberlain's work at the Colonial Office, says that the people of Canada or Australia felt at last that they had to deal with a statesman who understood their needs and feelings and sympathised to the full with their aspirations.

Even if no positive achievement had marked his tenure of office, the new atmosphere has created a new spirit, which, if introduced into the relations between the Mother Country and her daughter states, would alone have done much to bring to reality the once shadowy dream of imperial union.

Last night's Star (Radical) says Chamberlain will be remembered as a statesman who shattered two great political parties and deluged South Africa in blood. Whatever judgment posterity may pass upon these three capital cataclysms, at least it must see in him one of those dynamic personalities which alter the course of history and mould the destinies of nations.

"Peace to his ashes," says The Star. "He has gone at a moment when peace trembles in the balance and when wisest men are prone to plunge into the falsehood of extremes. It may be that his passing may sober partisanship and dispose factions to listen to reason."

Police Expedition to Arctic.

HALIFAX, N.S., July 4—Inspector Beytes, R.N.W.M.P., is now in Halifax, fitting out an expedition that will spend at least two years in the frozen north and will traverse thousands of miles within the Arctic circle, in order to bring the Esquimaux murderers of Radford and Street, two missing explorers to trial. Beytes and three others will leave Halifax in a few days.

Quits Secretaryship of Alliance.

MONTREAL, July 4.—John R Roberts has placed his resignation as secretary of the Dominion Alliance in the hands of the president, S. J. Carter, as a protest against the failure of the organization to support him to the extent he desired in his protest against the present personnel of the Montreal License Commission.

ENGLISH SPELLING

Editor of The Examiner.

The movement in favour of the betterment of English spelling has made so much progress that its promoters believe that the time has arrived for the enlistment of official action. They have accordingly prepared a petition to the British Government, which is now in circulation, praying for the appointment of a Royal Commission in the following terms:

1. The irregularities and inconsistencies of English spelling involve a deplorable waste of time and mental energy in education without any compensating gain;

2. No philologist or student of language of any eminence is opposed to the more or less complete removal of these anomalies and many are strongly in favour of reform;

3. The adoption of a rational spelling, by removing a serious hindrance to the spread of English within the British Empire and as a world-language, would be productive of great intellectual and commercial advantage;

Your petitioners therefore earnestly pray that you will be pleased to advise His Majesty to appoint a Commission, which should include scholars, teachers, men of letters, and men of business, to consider the whole question, to report whether reform is practicable, and, if so, to indicate what ought to be its nature, and how it may best be introduced.

Some of the well-known Englishmen behind this action are Lord Bryce, Sir William Ramsay, Bishop Welldon, Prof. Gilbert Murray, Rt Hon. Sir Frederick Pollock, Sir James Donaldson, Sir James Murray, editor-in-chief of the great Oxford Dictionary; H. G. Wells, the novelist; William Archer, the dramatic critic; Dr. Michael Sadler, Chancellor of Leeds University.

Any reader who desires to support the petition is requested to communicate the fact to the undersigned. One way of doing so is to cut out the petition heading, and attach it to a paper over his signature and address. Signatories should add their status or vocation. All communications will be duly forwarded which are sent to

POULTRY POINTERS

Fresh air night and day is vital to poultry. But drafts are fatal.

One old hen may offset all two young ones can do in the way of bringing you success.

Never use wood ashes as a dust bath, as they are strongly alkali and will irritate the skin and bleach the shanks. Road dust is preferable for a dust bath, but sifted coal ashes answer the purpose very well.

Hens demand some mineral matter to form the shell of their eggs. Do not forget the oyster shell and the hard, sharp grit. These will furnish material for the formation of the eggs' shell and at the same time will keep the fowls in a healthy condition.

All Saints' S. S. Annual Excursion

The annual excursion of the All Saints' Anglican Sunday School was held yesterday to Jubilee Point, on the steamer Stoney Lake, and was not only largely attended but from the standpoint of the entertainment and pleasure of all who participated, was extremely successful. The Stoney Lake, whose capacity load is about three hundred, was crowded to the limit by members and friends of the Sunday School anxious to take in the annual outing.

The steamer dropped her moorings at the George Street Wharf shortly after eight o'clock yesterday morning, and arrived at Jubilee Point about eleven, after a very pleasant sail. At the point a splendid programme of sports was run off and the prizes which were offered for the different events were keenly competed for. Dinner and supper were had at the picnic grounds and about five o'clock the boat left for a sail around Rice Lake, returning to the city about eight-thirty last night. The affair was well managed throughout, and was voted a success by all. A refreshment booth was conducted considerably to the pleasure of the purchasers and the profit of the Sunday School.

ONE IS WILLING TO HELP THE CITY BEAUTIFUL

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—You have ably advocated "City Beautiful" for years. We are still at sea as citizens to know what to do to help matters.

If our engineers would map out a plan of drives, etc., and the press encourage residents to co-operate in carrying out the same, I would, for one, willingly replace sofe maples, and their position to suit.

Yours truly,

COURT-MARTIAL IS DELAYED

On Representations of Brother Official Constitutionalists Who Accuse Albert Douglas of Assisting Federals Will Postpone Trial—Anxiety is Felt at Washington Over the Case.

EL PASO, Texas, July 4.—Albert St. Clair Douglas, British vice-consul at Zacatecas, has been arrested by the Constitutionalists, held for court-martial, and may be shot. This information, which was immediately telegraphed to Washington, was received here yesterday by Vice-Consul H. C. Myles from James Coldwell, British vice-consular agent at Zacatecas. The telegram from Coldwell stated that Douglas had been arrested and imprisoned on the charge that he assisted the Federals prior to and during the siege of Zacatecas.

Douglas denied that he had acted in any other than his official capacity, and insisted that his actions were absolutely neutral throughout the Zacatecas campaign. The rebels, however, refused to release him, and are now preparing a summary court-martial. Myles, immediately upon receiving the telegram, after notifying the British embassy, got into communication with prominent rebel officials here. Just what demands he made upon them is not known, but a promise was exacted that the trial of the British consul would not be started until American Consul Theodore Hamm arrived at Zacatecas from Durango to see that the proceedings were legitimate.

No word was given out regarding the character of the communication sent to the British embassy at Washington.

Washington Is Worried.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—The Department of State and the British embassy are seriously worried over what threatens to be a repetition of the Benton case in the arrest by Constitutionalists of Albert St. Clair Douglas, British vice-consul at Zacatecas. Mr. Douglas appealed to the British embassy, after directing the British consular agent at Torreon to take the matter up direct with Gen. Villa, solicited the good offices of the State Department.

The specific charge against Mr. Douglas is that he instructed the Federal troops in military tactics prior to the capture of Zacatecas by the rebels. But, according to information here, though Mr. Douglas was pointedly requested by the Federals to instruct them, he consistently declined to aid them in any way. This information has been laid before the State Department and Gen. Villa.

CHOKES BURGLAR TO DEATH.

Farmer's Wife Defends Husband From Marauder's Attack.

CHICAGO, July 4. — Mrs. Joseph Grinwood, 55 years old, wife of a wealthy retired farmer, five years her senior, unarmed and clad only in her night clothes, choked to death a burglar in the darkened bedroom of a lonely farmhouse near Yorkville, Ill., early yesterday, after her husband, Joseph Grinwood, had fought a bitter battle in the dark. The burglar was armed with a heavy ice-pick, and with its sharp point took a heavy toll of the aged farmer's unprotected flesh. The farmer was clad only in his night clothes. He had no weapon, but his bare hands. The theory of the police is that the clothing was stolen and that papers in the robber's clothing are those of another man.

To Reorganize Battery.

LONDON, Ont., July 4.—Although all the officers of the Sixth Field Battery of this city have handed in their resignations following the dismissal of the commander, Major Wood Leonard, as the result of the finding of a quantity of liquor in their tents at Petawawa recently, the resignations have not yet been accepted, and it is reported that an attempt is being made to smooth over the difficulty. Although the battery is now pretty well disbanded, it may yet be reorganized.

$$$
Once Bitten—Twice Shy.
Advertising may make a poor article sell for a while, but the most persistent advertising would not induce you to make a second purchase of a thing that turned out to be fraudulent, and the profit on the first sale would never pay for the advertising.
Do you not think the advertisers know this? They fully realize that the very first essential of success is to have something worthy, something that people want and will keep on buying.
If you see a thing advertised regularly week after week, year after year, it is safe to conclude that it possesses actual merit and is well worth its cost.

CHAMBERLAIN PASSES AWAY

Imperialist and Tariff Reformer Passes Away.

BEGAN CAREER AS RADICAL

Great Statesman Will Be Known to Future Generations as the Apostle of the "All Red" Propaganda and Inventor of Imperial Preferential Tariff Policy — Had Been Ill for Seven Years.

LONDON, July 4.—Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain died suddenly at his London residence at 10.30 o'clock Thursday night, following an attack of heart failure.

The great statesman was 78 years of age. His death came as an entire surprise, as the condition of his health was not generally considered to be any worse than at any time in the past two or three years. It removes one of the most striking figures of the past generation from British politics.

Mrs. Chamberlain, who never left her husband's side since he was stricken with paralysis seven years ago, and his son, Austen Chamberlain, were with Mr. Chamberlain at the end.

The cause of Mr. Chamberlain's death was officially announced yesterday to have been heart failure. Although he had been gradually sinking since Tuesday, the members of the family had preferred that his desperate condition should not become publicly known.

Hon. Mr. Chamberlain had huge commercial interests throughout England and was very wealthy.

Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain was born at London on July 8, 1836. He received his education in London University school, and at the age of 16 entered into his father's business, that of a wholesale boot and shoe manufacturer, in London. Two years later he went to Birmingham to represent his father in certain mercantile interests, and from that date his rise was rapid.

In 1876, at the age of 40, he entered the House of Commons as an extreme Radical. Mr. Chamberlain was recognized from the first as a coming man. Denounced and praised, feared and admired by all parties in turn, he was also in a period of thirty years, simultaneously distrusted on both sides, and by way of compensation went through a great crisis in which he enjoyed the confidence of practically the whole nation.

In his early years in the Commons he sat among the Home Rule Liberals, with whose aspirations he was supposed to sympathize, but a few years later he emphatically disabused his associates in the House of any notion they may have had of his belief in separate Government for Ireland.

In less than four years he was a Cabinet Minister, entering Gladstone's Government in 1880 as president of the Board of Trade, and in less than a decade his hold on popular opinion was almost as great as Gladstone's.

After the general election of 1885 he became President of the Local Government Board, but by the spring of 1886 his and Gladstone's relations on the latter's Irish policy had become so strained that he broke with the great Premier, resigned his place in the Cabinet, and left the Liberal party never to return to it.

He, Lord Hartington (afterwards the Duke of Devonshire), G. J. Goschen, and others high in the Liberal party, who saw in their former leader's Home Rule proposals and propaganda a menace to the integrity of the Emipre, formed a new party to resist them. They called themselves Liberal Unionists, and anti-Home Rule was, in the beginning, their main tenet.

Lord Hartington was the first leader, but when he was elevated to the peerage through the death of his father, Mr. Chamberlain was chosen the party's chief.

In 1906 his career of stormy activities was ended by a stroke of paralysis. The blow fell when he was in the midst of a strenuous campaign for the establishment of a protective tariff with preference for the British colonies, and just after his constituents had celebrated the thirtieth anniversary of his first election. In each election he was returned to his old seat and appeared afterward in the House but once, where amid respectful silence he made his way to the Speaker's desk on the arm of his son and took the oath of office.

January 5, 1913, Mr. Chamberlain wrote to his constituents, resigning his seat.

SERVICE IN VIENNA

Funeral Ceremony Held Over Bodies of Royal Victims.

EMPEROR AND HEIR ATTEND

Francis Joseph and Members of the Imperial Family, Archduke Charles and Many Nobles and Dignitaries Are Present at Stately Service in Hofburg—Orphans Pray Beside Bodies of Parents.

VIENNA, July 4.—In the presence of Emperor Francis Joseph, the new heir to the throne — the Archduke Charles Francis Joseph—many archdukes, and archduchesses, cabinet ministers, diplomats and high military and civil officials, funeral services for the Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his wife, the Duchess of Hohenberg, who were assassinated last week, were held in the chapel of the Hofburg yesterday afternoon.

Emperor Francis Joseph and the members of the imperial family had assembled in the Gobelin Salon of the Hofburg and proceeded thence to the chapel. The aged emperor and the new heir apparent to the throne occupied seats on the oratorium above the right side of the high altar, while the ambassadors had places on the left. Twenty members of the corps of Gentlemen at Arms in gorgeous uniforms stood at attention at the sides of the catafalque.

The ecclesiastical procession, when the emperor and the imperial family had taken their seats, came slowly down the aisle, headed by the court master of ceremonies and twenty acolytes carrying lighted candles and took places at the sides of the coffins. The Cardinal Prince Piffl, Archbishop of Vienna, assisted by two bishops, officiated at the service, which was very brief. The only music was an anthem, which was beautifully sung by the court choir, composed entirely of boys.

Later in the evening the children of the archduke and duchess, accompanied by the Countess Chotek, proceeded to the chapel and prayed by the side of the coffins of their parents. Their grief was heartrending.

RED TRAIL INCRIMINATES.

Woman Fails To Account For Blood Leading To Room.

STAMFORD, Conn., July 4.—Because expert testimony showed that a trail of human blood ran from the lower hall of the building up two flights of stairs and into her apartments, and because she would make no statement, Mrs. Helen M. Angle was locked up without bail late yesterday, in the course of the enquiry yet incomplete, by Coroner Phelan, into the mysterious death of Waldo R. Ballou, on the night of June 23. Mrs. Angle had been at liberty under a $5,000 bond.

Ballou was found dying on the sidewalk in front of the building where Mrs. Angle lived. A few hours before he visited her in her apartments. He had aparently been dragged from the building into the street. Mrs. Angle early told the police that Ballou had fallen down a flight of stairs while under the influence of liquor.

LOW NECKS MUST GO.

Bishop Refuses Communion To Decolete Women.

KINGSTON, July 4.—In St. Mary's Cathedral yesterday morning Archbishop Spratt announced from the pulpit that no lady who wore a low-neck dress need come to the altar for communion after Mass. He would not tolerate it.

His Grace declared that it was most disrespectable for women in the garb of to-day to approach the holy altar.

Many women in the cathedral, who had come for communion, left without taking it, as they feared they would be sent away by the archbishop, who looked carefully at every women who afterwards came up.

Surgeon Can Mend Heart.

ATLANTIC CITY, July 4.—"No injury to the heart, no matter how violent, should be considered hopeless," says Dr. Axel Vertus of Chicago. Results of experiments showed, he declared, that under anesthesia injuries and seemingly incurable diseases of the heart and lungs can be repaired with the knife. Certain abnormalities of the heart, such as small openings in the chambers, can now be mended by surgical means, he said.

It was the residence of the late Sir Daniel Dixon, who was Lord Mayor of Belfast for many years, and who sat in Parliament for a short time as member for the City of Belfast.

WEALTH OF HAIR

Parisian Sage Makes Thin, Lifeless Hair Soft and Abundant.

Beautiful hair, fluffy, lustrous, abundant and free from dandruff, is one of woman's greatest charms—it's her main delight—yet so many of the fair sex who would be most attractive but for their streaked, thin and lifeless hair, go on thinking there is no remedy. Quickly put aside such thoughts. Beautiful hair is largely a matter of a little care and attention. Parisian Sage rubbed into the scalp and applied to the hair with a sponge or cloth will work wonders. Do it daily for a week, then occasionally, and you will be surprised and delighted with the result—not only will the hair become abundant, soft, fluffy, radiant with life, but really doubly beautiful.

Parisian Sage supplies hair and scalp needs. It surely removes dandruff with one application and cleanses the hair of all dirt and excessive oil. It is not sticky or greasy, is delicately perfumed, and contains nothing to injure the hair or scalp. All drug and toilet counters sell it in fifty cent bottles. Look for the trade mark—"The Girl with the Auburn Hair."

Delighted users pronounce Parisian Sage the best, most pleasant and invigorating hair tonic made. Try at least one bottle. Warne Drug Co. will refund the money if you are not satisfied.

PETES EASILY BEAT THE ERIE YANKS IN SECOND GAME OF THE SERIES

Louie Schettler Back in the Game and Won Soft Victory Over His Old Town—Petes Made Sixteen Hits.

FITZPATRICK CHASED

ERIE, Penna., July 3. — Louie Schettler was too much for Erie today, and on the other hand, Fitzpatrick was easy for Peterborough. The third circumstance contributing to Eries' defeat was the poor fielding of the locals. Six errors were chalked to their credit, some of the misplays doing considerable damage. Erie had several opportunities to cut down Peterborough's lead, but Schettler always was invincible in the pinches. The score:

BASEBALL

(The Erie Despatch says)

In a game crammed with excitement as the advantage swung first to one team and then the other, Erie yesterday defeated Peterborough 7 to 4. Th Yanks were able to stand the gaff better than Bount's men, and when it came time to crack it was the visitors who blew. Until the seventh inning Sterling held the Yanks to five measly, well scattered bingles, netting three runs, while his team had touched up Morse for an even dozen hits and four runs.

But there the tide turned. Morse tightened up and his mates unleashed their clubs on Sterling. In the seventh they got to the clever twirler for two hits and a force, two runs resulting. In the eighth they got to the Peterborough heaver for two doubles and a triple, crossing another brace of tallies.

Went After Morse.

It looked early in the game as if Morse was due for a sound trouncing. Peterborough put two runs across in the very first inning and the two looked good for a long time. With one gone, Colligan muffed Welsh's fly. Welsh wound up at second. Dolan rammed a long single to left and Welsh scored. Dolan scored on Stewart's hit to centre.

In the second inning the visitors got two more hits off Morse, but no runs; in the third they got another and in the fifth they got three. Here they tallied another run. One down. Welsh singled to left and went to second on a wild pitch. Dolan again delivered the necessary hit, Welsh scoring. Stewart doubled to right, and Dolan was held at third. King flew out to Harris. Dolan tried to beat the ball to the plate, but a pretty throw from Harris nipped the Peterborough first sacker by feet.

In the sixth the visitors got to Morse for three more hits and it began to look as if the little fellow might be tiring. Fox singled, took second on Fox's sacrifice and went to third when McNeil's throw to catch him off the middle bag rolled to centre field. Morse fanned Miller, but Sterling came through with the hit that sent Fox over. Blount doubled, but Sterling was held at third. A pretty catch by Behan of Welsh's fly retired the side.

PETERBOROUGH LACROSSE CLUB IS NOW OUT OF RUNNING IN O.A.L.A.

Norwood Beat the Homesters 6 to 3 at Riverside Park Yesterday--A Clean Cut Victory For the Boys From the Capital of East Peterborough.

The Norwood Lacrosse team eliminated Peterborough from the A.O.L.A. intermediate series yesterday when they beat the local ten by 6 goals to 3, at Riverside Park. The boys from the East Peterborough Capital bumped the locals in Norwood a week ago, and to demonstrate that the first victory was not a fluky one they repeated the dose even more decisively yesterday.

Their win was earned. They had the better of the play throughout, had more speed and the ability to get in on the nets, while their defence showed remarkably good form. The villagers are light, but they are fleet-footed, and if they do not blow up when they meet Hastings, should give the district leaders a battle royal for the honours.

The Petes suffered from their usual inability to get their strongest line-up out. They have not used the same team in two games during the district race, and the constant changing and shifting has made systematic team-play a difficult matter. Individually the players showed up well yesterday, but in combination and system the blue shirts from the East were superior. The visitors passed neatly and handled the ball cleanly, and in this department had a wide margin on the homesters who lost many chances by a muff or wild pass when close in.

Both goal keepers gave a good account of themselves. Dr. Sutton, the Norwood net guardian, showing especially brilliant form. He weeded out a host of hard shots and cleared nicely. Alex. Kemp, the veteran lacrosse and hockey player, was the most useful as well as the most spectacular player on the field. He showed all kinds of speed and never let up, scoring three of Norwood's goals on dodging runs and clean shots. Hirmie Nicholl starred on the defence breaking up many dangerous attacks. Waters, a diminutive juvenile, was another effective defence man.

For the Petes McFadden and Dillon did some very useful defence work that helped to keep the score down. Crough kept the home well fed, and McCoy was conspicuous on the attack, getting two out of the three goals, credited to the home team.

Frank Larone refereed the game to the satisfaction of both teams.

The attendance was discouragingly small. There were more Norwood than Peterborough people present, and there were not very many Norwood fans, there either.

THE BATTING AVERAGES OF THE PETES

Dad Stewart is still leading the Petes in stick work, maintaining his average of .330 throughout the week. Kelly dropped a few points by reason of getting only one hit in the three games in which he participated. Welsh was the big gainer for the week, getting nine hits in four games. Mully Miller added two points to his average and Curly Blount gained twelve in the week. He has been climbing steadily for some time, while he has scored 34 runs, well ahead of any of the rest of the Petes. Welsh is next, with 27. Here are the figures complete up to Thursday night:

Petes At Riverside Park On Monday

No doubt a big crowd will welcome the Petes on Monday, when they crash with the Erie Yankees at Riverside Park. The Blount gang are playing good ball right now and they make every game a battle. In Dolan, the new first sacker secured from the Indianapolis Feds, they seem to have the slugger they have been looking for. Blount has found his batting eye and Welsh, Stewart, Miller and Kelly are all hitting consistently. With Joe Byrne back on the look-in corner, the Petes will take a lot of beating. Monday's game will start at 4.15 o'clock sharp.

NEWS FROM THE FRONT

Hams Want to Trade Infielder Gilhooley for One of the Petes' Pitchers

A wire from Travelling Secretary Dobson of the Peterborough Ball Club, this morning, states that Louie Schettler was in grand form yesterday, striking out no less than fourteen men. 'Dobbie" says that Blount, Welsh and Dolan are hitting hard, and should break up many games. The Hamilton Club has approached the Petes with an offer to trade Infielder Jimmy Gilhooley for one of the Petes pitching staff. Manager Blount is after Pitcher Harder and if he is successful in landing this twirler may put through the iGilhooley deal. Joe Byrne has rejoined the team and Thrailkill, who has been subbing for him, on the difficult corner, has been released. The attendance at Erie so far has been very poor but better things are expected today.

Erie Took Early Lead This Morning

ERIE, July 4.— Peterborough and Erie met this morning in the holiday game before a fair-sized crowd. Manager Blount decided to use Tracey, who has been his most consistent winner, while the Yanks pinned their faith on Lefty Dorebek.

Armed Skelton Unearthed.

Valuable discoveries of Roman and Saxon relics have been made at the excavations on the Roman site at Lowbury, on the Berkshire Downs, four miles west of Gordon-on-Thames. Under the guidance of the archaeological department of the University Reading a rectangular inclosure containing several barrows has been unearthed and seventy-two Roman coins, some as early as the second century, have been found.

The coins belong to the reigns of Trajan, Antonius and Marcus Aurelius. Other discoveries included a bronze signet ring, daggers and spear heads. The skeleton of a Saxon warder, fully armed, was found buried close at hand.

"Bob" Dibble — the Canadian oarsman who was defeated by Guiseppe Sinigaglia, the Italian competitor in the semi-finals for the Diamond Sculls. Dibble was beaten by five lengths, which is thought to be due to the rough condition of the water.

Struggles of an Inventor.

Sir Henry Bessemer, who was born 101 years ago, was one of those inventors that ill luck pursued, and from whose clutches he finally escaped by indomitable perseverance. In 1833 the British Government was losing $500,000 a year by the fraudulent misuse of embossed deed stamps. Bessemer rendered this impossible by the use of perforated dies which dated the stamps. He presented the invention to the Government, which forgot its promise of a permanent appointment, but thanked him. His great invention in the manufacture of steel so impressed the ironmakers that they paid him $125,000 for licenses, and "wanted their money back." He had forgotten the proportion of fools to wise men. It took him two years to render the process "fool proof," and he pressed his point home by the setting up of his factory in Sheffield.

Uncertain Crowns.

"You love me, darling?" he asked
"A little," she replied.
"Ah, but do you not think your love will grow?"
"Yes, but I'm not sure which way."

SOME CLEVER FAMILIES

ANNALS FULL OF INSTANCES OF BRILLIANT BROTHERS.

The Butlers Have Produced Some Remarkably Clever Men and the Asquiths Are Notable In England's Academic Circles — The Lyttletons and Cecils and the Bensons Are Also Notables.

When the scholastic history of the British people comes to be written the name of Butler will figure largely in the records, for no family has displayed such classical genius as the Butlers, the eldest member of which, Mr. Spencer Butler, celebrated his golden wedding a few weeks ago.

Mr. Spencer Butler, who is a second son of the Very Rev. George Butler, Senior Wrangler of 1794 and head master of Harrow from 1805 to 1829, won high academic distinction in his early days, taking a first-class in classics at Trinity College, Cambridge. He is the elder brother of Cambridge's G.O.M., Dr. Butler, Master of Trinity, whose three sons have already proved themselves classical scholars of the highest distinction. The eldest, Mr. J. R. M. Butler, swept the board of prizes at Cambridge, and his list of triumphs is unprecedented. Mr. Spencer Butler has nine sons, five of whom have won honors at Cambridge.

It is an interesting fact that Mr. Butler's grandfather was the Rev. Weeden Butler, with whom the intellectual distinction of the family began. He was born in 1742, and was a classical master at Chelsea. Thus for a century and a half the Butlers have maintained their reputation as being the most remarkable classical family in the country.

The achievements of the Butlers naturally recall those of the Prime Minister, his brother, Mr. W. W. Asquith, the late head master of Clifton College, and the Premier's sons, Mr. Raymond and Mr. Cyril Asquith. All four have appeared in the "Greats" list at Oxford. Indeed, the scholastic abilities of the Asquiths lend some justification to a "gag" which has long been current among undergraduates at Oxford. When working for a university prize or a scholarship, the question is often asked, "Is there an Asquith in for it?" If so, every other aspirant is advised to give up hope and close his books.

The Premier won a classical scholarship at Balliol in 1870, his son Raymond achieved a similar distinction in 1897, and Cyril in 1909. A first-class in Classical Moderations, a Craven Scholarship, and first-class in "Greats," are among other classical honors which the father and his two sons have won.

The Lyttletons and the Cecils are interesting examples of clever families. The Cecil family has produced an almost unbroken sequence of clever men for more than a century, not the least notable of whom have flourished in our time—the late Marquess of Salisbury, Mr. A. J. Balfour, Lords Hugh and Robert Cecil, and others of great ability if of less fame.

The recent death of the Right Hon. Alfred Lyttelton caused a gap in a circle of clever brothers. The best known, perhaps, are the Rev. Edward, the well-known head master of Eton, and Sir Neville Lyttelton, who is one of Britain's cleverest generals. Altogether there were eight brothers, all more or less famous in the intellectual and athletic world.

Then there is the Benson family —sons of the late Archbishop Benson—whose mother was a Miss Sidgwick, sister of the brilliant family of brothers, Prof. Henry Sidgwick, and Mr. Arthur and Mr. Alfred Sidgwick. Mr. A. C. Benson, Mr. E. F Benson, and Father Benson carry on the intellectual reputation of the family, and are shining lights in their respective spheres

Sir George Laurence Gomme, formerly clerk of the London County Council, has good reason to be proud of the achievements of his sons. One of them, Mr. Allan Gomme, some time ago gained the Siemens gold medal for electricity at South Kensington and secured one of the scientific appointments in H. M. Patent Office, coming out sixth in the examination, while his younger brother, Mr. E. E. C. Gomme, gained an historical scholarship at Trinity Hall, Cambridge In the meantime, at the Merchant Taylors School two younger brothers had gained distinctions — A. W. Gomme, a scholarship at Trinity College, Cambridge, and R. E. Gomme, the Senior School Scholarship.

In the distinguished Irish family of Plunket brains are hereditary. The first Lord Plunket was a barrister. Mr. Gladstone declared him to be the most eloquent orator he ever listened to. Lord Plunket's son became Bishop of Tuam one grandson Archbishop of Dublin, and another Lord Rathmore. The Hon. Dunbar Plunket Barton, who became Solicitor-General for Ireland in 1898, and has since been raised to the Irish Bench, is a nephew of Lord Rathmore. He had a brilliant career at Oxford, and is one of the very few men who have been twice president of the Oxford Union.

The brilliancy of the famous Dr. Arnold, at one time head master of Rugby ,descended to his son, Matthew Arnold, the famous poet and essayist, and in turn passed to grandchildren—to Mrs. Humphry Ward, daughter of Dr. Arnold's second son, Thomas, and to the late Mr. H. O. Arnold-Forster, son of William Arnold, another son of the great head master.

WEDDING BELLS

McINTOSH—PRATT.

A quiet wedding was celebrated on Wednesday afternoon, July 1st, in Toronto, the Rev. S. Harper Gray officiating, when Miss Pauline Isabella (Pearl) Pratt, B.A., youngest daughter of Mrs. Helen A. Pratt of Toronto, formerly of Peterborough, became the wife of Mr. William Gurlay McIntosh, B.A., Sc., youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. James McIntosh of Seaforth, Ont., only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties being present. The bride, wearing ivory satin with veil and orange blossoms, entered the drawing room on the arm of her brother, Mr. R. A. Pratt, to the strains of the wedding march played by little Miss Helen Robert of Windsor, niece of the bride. After August 1st Mr. and Mrs. McIntosh will be at home at 280 Dupont Street, Toronto.

SHERWOOD—HASKILL.

The marriage of Miss Pearl Leoline Haskill, daughter of the late Fred B. Haskill, and Mrs. Haskill, to Mr. Claude Henry Sherwood, son of Mr. Joseph H. Sherwood, 551 Bethune st., Peterboro, was solemnized by the Rev. W. L. Armitage at three o'clock yesterday in St. Mark's Church. The bride, who was given away by her brother, Mr. Fred Haskil, wore a suit of tan ratine and white Panama hat, and corsage bouquet of swet peas and lilies of the valley. There were no attendants.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood left after the city last evening and will spend a few days with Mr. Sherwood's parents.

PARSONS—LEARY.

A pretty wedding was solemnized this afternoon at St. Luke's Church when Miss Katie Irene Leary, only daughter of Mrs. Robert H. Leary, of Peterborough, became the wife of Charles C. Parsons, of Dundas, son of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Parsons, of Port Hope.

The ceremony was performed under an arch of evergreens, from which hung a floral marriage bell. The Rev. R. B. Grobb, of All Saints' Church officiated in the absence of the Rev. F. J. Sawers.

The bride was attended by Miss Bessie Read, of Peterborough, and the groom was ably supported by Mr. Rae Leary, of San Antonio, Texas. The bride was attired in a gown of ivory charmeuse and veil, and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid wore a gown of crepe de Chine, with picture hat, and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The bride was given away by her mother, who wore a handsome dress of black satin.

During the signing of the register, Mr. Maurice Park sang very effectively, "Loves Coronation."

The beauty of the ceremony was greatly enhanced by the kindness of Mr. Gliddon and his orchestra, in playing the wedding march, as a tribute to the bride, who is a popular pianiste in the city, and who has been associated with the Conservatory of Music for a number of years. A reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, 182 McDonnel street immediately after the ceremony. The newly married couple left for a trip to Detroit and Western points, before taking up residence in Dundas, Ont. The bride's going away suit was of golden brown silk with hat to match.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful presents.

ONLY ONE ACCLAMATION.

Contest Occurs In Every Other Manitoba Riding.

WINNIPEG, July 4.—The last lap of the Manitoba election fight was entered upon yesterday when candidates were nominated in forty-five constituencies, the election taking place July 10. Three constituencies —Le Pas, Churchill-Nelson and Grand Rapids—which are in the far north of the province, the elections have been deferred and no date for them is yet fixed. Iberville returned Aime eBrnard, Conservative, and the member for that riding in the last Legislature by acclamation, this being the only uncontested seat, Liberal and Conservative candidates have been nominated in all other constituencies except "E" seat in Centre Winnipeg, where the Liberals are supporting F. J. Dixon, an Independent.

The leaders of the parties are running in their old seats—Premier Roblin in Dufferin and T. C. Norris in Lansdowne. The seats in Centre and North Winnipeg, in addition to the straight party candidates, are being contested by Socialist candidates.

NO HOPE FOR KRAFCHENKO.

Slayer of Bank Manager Is Refused a Commutation.

OTTAWA, July 4. — The Cabinet Council yesterday considered the case of John Krafchenko of Winnipeg, sentenced to be hanged on Thursday next for the murder of Bank Manager Arnold at Plum Coulee, and recommended to the Governor-General that the law be allowed to take its course and the execution be carried out as arranged for. It is expected that the order-in-council containing this recommendation will be signed by His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught to-day on on Monday and forwarded to the sheriff in Winnipeg.

The petition for clemency, signed by 10,000 names, is not of unusual size, as many as a million names having been affixed to a former petition for clemency in the case of an Italian woman at the Soo. That for the commutation of Charles Gibson's sentence at Toronto was backed by over 100,000 names.

Verdict of Murder.

MONTREAL, July 4.—A verdict of murder was returned yesterday by the coroner's jury against Pickard, who was caretaker at the Chateau Tait, which was mysteriously razed to the ground by fire early in January.

The recent finding of the body of an unknown man in the ruins of the destroyed chateau renewed interest in the sudden disappearance of Pickard and a companion, who is said to have been with him in the Tait residence at the time of its destruction.

A warrant will be issued for the arrest of Pickard, who, so far, has eluded the police and detectives.

TO MEET IN HAMILTON.

Knights of Pythias Conclude Session in St. Catharines.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., July 4.—The Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias for Ontario before completing the business of the 43rd annual session yesterday afternoon decided to retain the age of 21 years as the minimum for candidates. The proposal to lower it to 18 years was voted down. Hamilton was chosen as the next place of meeting over Toronto and $150 was voted as a prize for a uniformed rank competition drill prize in connection with that convention and celebration. The following officers were elected: Grand chancellor, C. Farquharson, Stratford; grand vice-chancellor, Thomas Towers, Hamilton; grand prelate, James D. Wilson, Toronto; grand master at arms, A. D. Wilson, Hamilton; grand master of exchequer, John Burns, Niagara Falls; grand inner guard, Capt. Corrie, St. Thomas; grand outer guard, A. G. Marshall, Ottawa.

Cochrane Is In Doubt.

COBALT, July 4. — Latest advices from the Cochrane district are to the effect that the election is still in doubt. Three Frenchmen at Cochrane have pleaded guilty to voting twice, and the last poll gave Douglas (Con.) a majority of ten. This would leave the candidates even in votes. There will certainly be a recount, and almost certainly an appeal for another election.

A Little Mistake.

It is said of Archbishop Trench that he was "a man of singularly vague and dreamy habits," who "resigned the see of Dublin on account of advancing years and settled in London. He once went back to pay a visit to his successor, Lord Plunket. Finding himself back again in his old place, sitting at his old dinner table, and gazing across it at his old wife, he lapsed in memory to the days when he was master of the house, and gently remarked to Mrs. Trench, 'I am afraid, my love, that we must put this cook down among our failures'!"

A dozen English epicures, active members of the Gourmands' League, have decided to organize a series of pilgrimages to all the towns and villages of France renowned for their cookery or whose names are enrolled on the scroll of fame by reason of some famous delicacy that is theirs exclusively. BRIGHT AND GLADSTONE.

Big Men Who Only Saw One Side of the Question.

It is not always an easy matter for a man of strong convictions and native force of character to see and respect another's point of view. W. E. Gladstone and John Bright were two of the strongest men that the last century produced, yet an anecdote from "The Life and Work of Frank Holl," by Mr. A. M. Reynolds, shows that these great men were quite unable—on one occasion, at least—to see more than one side of a question.

Soon after the break between Bright and Gladstone that followed difference of opinion concerning the Government's foreign policy, the artist Holl was engaged to paint the portrait of Mr. Bright. He incidentally mentioned that he was about to paint a portrait of Mr. Gladstone also.

"It must be a very painful thing for you, Mr. Bright," he hazarded "that after all these years you should have found cause to sever your friendly relations with Mr. Gladstone."

"Indeed it is," replied Bright, with a sigh. "To think that after we have trodden the same path together shoulder to shoulder and hand in hand, we should be forced apart in the evening of our lives! And by what? By a bogey that is beckoning him away from duty and sense. Do you know, Mr. Holl, I seriously fear that my dear old friend's mind has become radically undermined!"

Later, when Holl was painting Gladstone, the subject of Bright's portrait came up.

"Ah!" said Gladstone, with much interest. "And how did you find him? It was a cruel blow that, after a lifetime of mutual esteem and of good work undertaken and carried through together, we should be divided on so clear a question! Tell me, Mr. Holl"—and here his mouth twitched, for he was evidently struggling with strong emotion — "tell me, did you notice anything in the manner of my old friend that would lead you to believe that his reason was becoming in any way unhinged?"

THE REAL CRIME.

The class at kirk had been reading the story of Joseph and his brethren, and it came to the turn of the visiting clergyman to examine the lads. The replies to all his questions had been quick, intelligent, and correct. Such as: "What great crime did these sons of Jacob commit?" "They sold their brother Joseph." "Quite correct. And for how much?" "Twenty pieces of silver." "And what added to the cruelty and wickedness of these bad brothers?" (No answer.) "What made their treachery even more detestable and heinous?" Then a bright little fellow stretched out an eager hand. "Well, my little man?" "Please, sir, they selt him ower cheap!"

Decision This Week.

QUEBEC, July 6.—Lord Mersey and his colleagues have had a busy week here sifting the mass of evidence submitted in the Empress of Ireland enquiry. The four assessors and Chief Justice McLeod returned from Montreal on Tuesday after spending a day looking over the injuries to the Storstad.

Since then the commission has sat twice a day at the court-house. The decision will probably be announced some time towards the last of this week. Captain and Mrs. Kendall are in Montreal awaiting the result of the enquiry. They hope to sail for their home in Liverpool on the Bulgarian next week.

Bomb Kills Three Anarchists and Woman Neighbour

MEANT FOR ROCKEFELLER?

NEW YORK, July 6.—A dynamite bomb of terrific strength, supposed to have been completed early Saturday morning for use at Tarrytown today, when the dozen or more International Workers of the World agitators recently arrested near the summer home of John D. Rockefeller will be arraigned, exploded a few minutes after nine o'clock Saturday morning in the top-floor rooms of the flat-house at 1,636 Lexington avenue, between 102nd and 103rd streets, on the west side of the avenue.

Three young anarchists, all identified with the recent disturbances of the unemployed and all implicated in the fights near Mr. Rockefeller's Tarrytown home, and a woman living in the rooms next to theirs were killed. The body of one anarchist was shattered so that the pieces were gathered up in newspapers.

The dead are: Arthur Caron, 24 years old, unmarried; lived in apartment 35, sixth floor front; Charles Berg, lived with Caron; Carl Hanson, about 30 years old; also lived with Caron; Mrs. Marie Chaves, 35 years old; lived in adjoining apartment.

All three of the men who were killed and a woman who lived in the flat with them had attended a meeting the night before at the Francisco Ferrer Association's school at 63 East 107th street, where, with Leonard Abbot, president of the Free Speech League; Alex. Berkman, the anarchist who served time for shooting Henry C. Frick, and others who have been making demonstrations against the Rockefellers in Broadway and at Tarrytown, they talked over the visit to Tarrytown to-morrow.

Imbedded in the thumb and fingers of part of a hand found by Assistant District Attorney Deuel and the police late Saturday evening in a room adjoining the one in which the explosion occurred were bits of copper wire such as might be used to set off a bomb.

The bomb literally blew off the southern part of the three upper floors of the six-storey building, and hurled the right shoulder and part of the scalp of one man over the roof of the German Evangelical Church next door and into the pavement of 103rd street, half a block north.

Amid the wreckage of the room, where portions of bodies were found Inspector Cahalane and detectives dug out of the debris a printing press, piles of books and pamphlets in various languages on anarchist subjects, a loaded magazine pistol, a blackjack, a quantity of large calibre cartridges and the tops of two storage batteries.

One leaflet, evidently printed on the hand press in the anarchists' rooms, was headed "Bulletin No. 2," and read: "Why wait longer for those money tyrants to come to our terms? We must employ force. Force is our remedy."

Carson Says Ulster Will Not Submit to Home Rule

ARMED MEN IN BELFAST

LONDON, July 6. — Sir Edward Carson declared at Herne Hill Saturday his determination to "go on to a finish" in the Ulster matter. "The people did not sufficiently realise," said he, "that Home Rule had been passed, and could be passed into law on presentation to the King."

He presumed that the Ministers, as straightforward, honest men, would tell the King the position, that if he signed the bill there would be serious commotion in the north of Ireland, and, if he did not sign it there would be civil commotion in the south and west.

"Ulstermen," said Sir Edward, "have been making ready for two years, and they are now ready. They want no make-shift government, no six years' limit, no county limit. The sands are running out. I am being pressed forward and I am prepared to go forward. I go to Ulster next week and I hope still to have tokens of peace. If not, we must rely only on ourselves, and we will. I will not shrink from it."

Following Sir George Richardson's order permitting volunteers to carry arms, 800 men of the 2nd Battalion, South Belfast Regiment, marched through the main street Saturday in full uniform, carrying their rifles with the band playing and colors flying. It was the first time armed volunteers have been seen in Belfast streets, and great crowds cheered the men.

At the same time, nearly 1,000 men of the West Belfast Regiment were manoeuvering on Black Mountains. Arms were stored in haylofts, rifles with bayonets fixed, being handed down two at a time to the waiting troops while police officers stood by and counted the number of rifles issued.

Plans have been made for a striking demonstration during the week.

Sir Edward Carson, addressing a gathering of Unionists in South London last night declared that Ulster would reject any proposals made by the Government placing a time limit of any sort on her exclusion from Home Rule.

"If ever we go into the Irish Parliament," he said, "we shall go in not at the point of the bayonet, but of our own free will."

The Probable Amendment.

BRISTOL, July 6. — Frederick E. Smith, M.P., one of the Ulster Unionist leaders, speaking at an anti-home rule meeting last night said that the House of Lords would so amend the amending bill as to make the exclusion of Ulster terminable only when Ulster said "We want to come in."

Redmond Checks Recruiting.

MONTREAL, July 6.—A London cable to The Gazette says: "It transpires that, besides being unarmed, the Nationalist volunteers are practically without trained officers, twelve battalions in County Dublin having only one with previous military experience of any kind. Recruiting has been checked, owing to Redmond having gained control.

WOOLWICH MEN OUT.

Ten Thousand Government Workmen Strike at Arsenal.

LONDON, July 6. — Ten thousand men are now on strike at the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich. The trouble may spread to other army and navy factories. The origin of the [illegible] the case of one man, a fitter named Entwhistle, who was asked to [illegible] a machine on a concrete bed [illegible] by non-unionists during the [illegible] disputes. The fitter answered that he would do this only if a guarantee were given that never again would union men be asked to follow non-union men. On this Sir Frederick Donaldson dismissed Entwhistle, and by Saturday afternoon 7,000 men had thrown down their tools. They were to-day joined by 3,000 more, leaving only a few hundred non-union men in the Arsenal.

The strike committee last evening issued instructions that all men engaged under the direct supervision of Donaldson must stand down to-day. These men include all the employés in the royal laboratory, the royal carriage department, the royal gun factory, the mechanical engineering department, and the building works department. If this has no effect, the men in the army ordnance department, the naval ordnance department in the Government factories at Enfield, Pimlico and Waltham Abbey, and other departments will be asked to cease work.

CONFIDENT OF SUCCESS.

Aviators Satisfied That Porte Can Make Flight.

HAMMONDSPORT, N.Y., July 6.—Aviators here are confident to-day that Lieut. Porte will be successful in his transatlantic flight in the aeroplane built for Mr. Rodman Wanamaker.

Porte is confident he will make the flight from Newfoundland to the Azores easily. It has been demonstrated that the America can easily lift two thousand pounds, the required lifting capacity. The airship showed perfect control when the lifting test was made. Several more changes will have to be made on the machine. These may cause some delay. The July pilot chart of the North Atlantic, issued Friday by the Hydrographic office, United States navy, shows plainly the advantages of flight this month, sought by Lieut. Porte.

All the experts agree, however, that he will have to traverse a considerable fog area.

Bennett's Victim Dying.

QUEBEC, July 6.—E. F. Charland, who was shot in the abdomen by the desperate bandit Morand, is dying in the Hotel Dieu Hospital here. He had a very bad night and his life is despaired of.

Morand is still at large, and a posse of eight provincial detectives is scouring the woods, in the vicinity of Villeroy, where the shooting occurred. Little hope is held, however, for his capture, as he is determined not to surrender.

PUTS NATION FIRST

Wilson Answers Critics of Anti-Trust Legislation

REPEAL OF CANAL TOLLS

PHILADELPHIA, July 6.—Advocating the modernizing of the Declaration of Independence by applying its principles to the business, the politics and the foreign policies of America, President Wilson Saturday thrilled a huge crowd assembled in Independence Square within a few feet of where the original declaration was signed. The President touched on Mexico, the Panama tolls repeal controversy, his anti-trust program, business conditions and his ideas of modern patriotism.

Pounding his fist on the table on which the Declaration of Independence was signed, he declared Americans to-day must manage their affairs in a way to do honor to the founders of the nation. There are men in Washington to-day, he declared, whose patriotism is not showy, but who accomplish great patriotic things. They are staying in hot Washington, doing their duty, keeping a quorum in each House of Congress to do business.

"And I am mighty glad to stay there and stick by them," he added.

Touching on business conditions of the country, President Wilson said a great many allegations of facts were being made, but that a great many of these facts do not tally with each other. "Are these men trying to serve their country or something smaller than their country?" the President asked. "If they love America and there is anything wrong, it is their business to put their hands to the task and set it right."

Speaking on Panama tolls, the President said the treaty with Britain might be a mistake, but its meaning cannot be mistaken, and he believed in keeping the nation's obligations. He believed in keeping the name of the United States unquestioned and unsullied.

Leaves For Englishman's Trial.

EL PASO, Texas, July 6.—American Consul Theodore Hamm left yesterday for Zacatecas to represent the United States at the court martial trial of George St. Clair Douglas, an attache of the British Consulate, charged with aiding and abetting the Huerta army during the Constitutionalist attack on Zacatecas. Gen. Manuel De La Vega, military governor of the State of Zacatecas will preside at the trial. Douglas is accused of having acted as spy for Gen. Barron and of having operated a searchlight on La Bufa Hill during the rebel attack.

Britain Did Not Coerce Wilson Into Repealing Panama Tolls.

LONDON, July 6.—A flat denial that Great Britain had brought pressure on the United States in connection with Panama tolls was made on Saturday night at the banquet of the American Society by Viscount Bryce of Dechmont, the former British Ambassador at Washington. Lord Bryce said that he had simply advised his Government that "if the President thinks it right to repeal or go to arbitration he will do it."

Lord Bryce added: "No country in the world has a stronger desire than the United States to do what is right and honorable."

The American ambassador, Walter H. Page, said that the last letter to the Washington Government relating to Panama was written by Ambassador Bryce before the end of the Taft administration.

PREPARING FOR TRIAL.

Mme. Caillaux Hears Judge Read Formal Indictment.

PARIS, July 6. — Mme. Henriette Caillaux, who on March 16 last shot and killed Gaston Calmette, editor of The Figaro, was visited Saturday in St. Lazare Prison by Judge Louis Albanet, president of the criminal court which is to try her. Following the legal usage of France, the judge formally read the indictment to the prisoner. When asked if she persisted in the statements she had previously made to the investigating magistrate Mme. Caillaux replied in the affirmative. The meeting between the judge and prisoner took place in the office of the prison warden. Mme. Caillaux's hand shook as she signed a copy of the questions and replies. She said: "That is the effect of hypodermic serum which the doctor gave me this morning."

WILL LIVE IN CANADA.

Joseph Martin, M.P., Decides to Quit British Politics.

LONDON, July 6.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Joe Martin announced yesterday that he sails on the Aquitania on Saturday next to reside permanently in Canada. He will remain member for East St. Pancras, however, until the general election.

A certain amount of friction has existed for some time between Mr. Martin and his political chiefs, and a section of his supporters in his constituency over the independent attitude he adopted over certain questions, notably when he voted against the Government on the Marconi revelations. Lately he offered to resign his seat and fight on his own account, but he received intimation from the chief Government whip that in such case another official Liberal candidate would no be brought out against him.

To Celebrate Shakespeare's Death.

LONDON, July 6.—A meeting presided over by Viscount Bryce Friday discussed a world-wide scheme to celebrate in 1916 the three-hundredth anniversary of Shakespeare's death. Those present included Arthur J. Balfour, the Earl of Plymouth, Sir Squire Bancroft, Sir Herbert Tree and Ambassador Page of the United States.

Acceptance of membership on the general committee was received from diplomatic representatives of Germany, France, Italy, Spain, Austria-Hungary, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Switzerland, Holland, Greece, Persia, China, Argentina, Chili, and from the high commissioners of the British dominions.

Chamberlain's Body Reaches Home.

BIRMINGHAM, Eng., July 6.—The body of the late Joseph Chamberlain, accompanied by Mrs. Chamberlain and her mother, and the Misses Chamberlain, arrived at Birmingham from London yesterday. A floral offering from Mrs. Chamberlain in the form of a cross was placed on the coffin.

A tremendous crowd awaited the cortege at Highbury, and deep emotion was displayed as the coffin containing the body of the great statesman passed.

"PEBLO"
The Glass of Quality

We have at any doubt but that most people value their eyesight sufficiently to want to take the best care of it. That is why we went to the expense of securing for our Optical Trade the highest Grade of Lenses than can be made and which we handle exclusively under the trade mark "PEBLO." We believed our patrons would appreciate having their eyeglasses fitted with this superior quality lens, and after two years exclusive use of "PEBLO" Lenses, we are well satisfied with the result, judging by the hundreds of satisfied customers whom we have fitted with these beautiful lenses. It is interesting to know that in spite of the expense of procuring "PEBLO" Lenses the prices to our patrons are no more than when we used other makes of lenses, this being due to the large quantity we buy at a time. We manufacture these "PEBLO" Lenses from the uncut "PEBLO" glass, in our own lens grinding department.

Any kind of lens duplicated while you wait, and all work guaranteed.

"THE TERMS OF SURRENDER"

By LOUIS TRACY

The husband whom she loathed and had deserted, who was so detestable in her sight that she died rather than remain his wife, did not attempt to deny the truth of that overwhelming indictment. Indeed, its opening passages, laying bare his own scheming, must have convinced him of the accuracy of the remainder. With the painstaking care of one to whom the written word was all-important, he read and reread each letter, particularly Nancy's pathetic farewell. Then, darting one wolfish glance at Power, he thrust his right hand suddenly toward a drawer. Power was prepared for some such movement, and leaped with a lightning spring born of many a critical adventure in wild lands, when a fraction of a second of delay meant all the difference between life and death. Marten was not a weakling; but he was no match for the younger man's well-trained muscles. After a brief struggle the automatic pistol he had taken from its hiding-place was wrested from his grasp.

"You may shoot, if you like, when I have finished with you, but not before," said Power, when his breathless adversary seemed to be in a fit condition to follow what he was saying. "I am prepared to die, and by your hand if you think fit to be my executioner; but first you must know the penalty. If I do not return to my friend's house before a fixed hour, an exact copy of all that you have read will be sent to the father and uncle of that detestable blackguard you have chosen to marry my daughter. It seems that Italians are blessed with fine-drawn scruples in such matters, and the revelation of a blot in Nancy's parentage will be fatal to your precious project. Copies will also be given to Nancy herself, and to Philip Lindsay. If I know anything of men, I fancy that he, at any rate, will not flout her because of her mother's sin. In the event of my death, she becomes my heiress; so she will be quite independent of your bounty, and, after the first shock and horror of comprehension has passed, I think she has enough of her mother's spirit, and of my fairly strong will, to defy any legal rights you may try to enforce as her reputed father. I am talking with brutal plainness, Marten, because you've got to understand that you are beaten to your knees. Now I'll repeat my terms. Dismiss an unspeakable cad from your house—not forcibly, of course, but with sufficient conviction that he cannot refuse to go—agree to Nancy's marriage with the man of her choice—and she should wait another year, at least, whether or not Lindsay be the man—and I burn everything, copies and originals, on her wedding day. Refuse, and you know the sure outcome. There is your pistol. It should do its work well at this short range. Shot, if you must! I'm ready!"

CHAPTER XX.

THE PASSING OF THE STORM.

Marten's hand closed round the butt of the pistol, and, during a few seconds, Power thought that he was a doomed man. Even in England, a land where deeds of violence are not condoned by lawless unwritten law, he knew he was in deadly peril. If Marten shot him, there was reasonable probability that punishment might not follow the crime. His own actions would bear out the contention that Marten had killed him in self-defence. He had palpably forced his way in; the warning letter from the New York lawyers would count against him; legal ingenuity could twist in Marten's favour the very means he was using to safeguard Nancy's child. But he did not fear death. Rather did he look on it as the supreme atonement. "Greater love hath no man than this, that he lay down his life for his friend," and, in giving his life for an innocent girl, he was surely obeying her mother's last request.

But Marten, still clutching the pistol—a modern weapon of fearsome effect when fired in conditions which made faulty aim impossible—seemed to be marshalling his disrupted thoughts. His eyes were veiled, his body was bent as though old age had suddenly beset him; but the ivory-white of cheeks and forehead was yielding slowly to the quickening of the arteries caused by the recent struggle.

At last he looked at Power, and may have been surprised by the discovery that his adversary, though standing within a yard of him, obviously disregarded his presence, and was, in fact, staring through a window at the far horizon of the blue Atlantic.

For the first time he was aware of an expression in Power's face that was baffling, almost unnerving. Suffering, pity, sympathy, well-doing — these essentials had never found lodgment in his own nature, and their legible imprint on another's features was foreign to his eyes. He was wholly self-centred, self-contained. To his material mind men and women were mere elements in the alchemy of gold-making; yet there stood one who had never sought the gross treasures which earth seemed to delight in showering on him. And he could win what Marten had never won — love. That thought rankled. Already Nancy was yielding to his influence. Unless——

He replaced the pistol in the drawer where it was kept, ever within reach—he had ruined opponents by the score, and some were vengeful. The movement awoke Power from a species of trance, and their eyes met.

"You win," said Marten laconically.

Power sat down again. The simplicity of his self-effacement almost bewildered the other, on whom the knowledge was forced that, had he raised and pointed the death-dealing weapon, his enemy would have disregarded him.

"I want to ask you a few questions," he continued bruskly. "I suppose you and I can afford now to tell each other the naked truth. Why are you raising all this commotion after twenty years?"

"I am only fulfilling the mandate given in—in your wife's last letter."

"My wife. You admit, then, that she was my wife?"

Power did not answer, and Marten tingled with the quick suspicion that he was opening up the very line of inquiry in which he was most vulnerable.

"Anyhow, let us endeavour to forget what happened twenty years ago," he went on, affecting a generosity of sentiment he was far from feeling. "What I wish to understand is this—how do you reconcile your regret, or repentance, or whatever you choose to call it, for bygone deeds, with your attempt now to come between me and my daughter. Yes, d—n you, whatever you may say or do, you cannot rob me of the nineteen years of affection which at least one person in the world has given me!"

Power passed unheeded that sudden flame of passionate resentment.

"It is natural, in a sense, that you should misread the actual course of events," he said. "You may not be aware that I have been a constant visitor to this part of Devonshire during many years, and that, in hiring Valescure, you were really seeking me, instead of me, as you imagine, seeking you. I met Nancy by accident. We became friends. It was the impulse of a girl deprived of the one adviser in whom she should have complete trust that led her to confide in me."

"What do you mean by that?"

"You, her loved and honoured father, were using your authority to force her into a hated marriage."

"I didn't treat matters so seriously. I never heard of this young Lindsay as a candidate before last week."

"Had you taken a tenth part of the trouble it has cost me, you would have ascertained that the Principe del Montecastello was about as suitable a mate for Nancy as a carrion crow for a linnet."

"He was a bit wild in his youth, but would become a model husband. I know that type of man well. At fifty he would be taking the chair at rescue meetings."

Again Power remained silent, and Marten was obliged to reopen the discussion.

"I'll get rid of Montecastello," he said, and his voice had the metallic rasp of a file in it. "I'll undertake, too, that my daughter shall be free to marry Philip Lindsay, or any other man of her choice. I suppose it will be Lindsay. I'll invite him here, and make up for my rather emphatic dismissal the other day. But if you impose terms, so do I. To avoid a scandal, to keep my daughter's love during the remaining years of my life, I yield to you on the major point. On my side, I stipulate that not one penny of your money goes to either Lindsay or Nancy. They must owe everything to me, not to you. Further, you must undertake to go out of my daughter's life completely. You have contrived to do that in the past; you must manage it in the future as well."

"You mean that I am never voluntarily to see or speak to her again?"

"Yes."

"I promise that."

Power spoke in a low tone, but a note of unutterable sadness crept into the words. Even his bitter and resentful hearer caught some hint of anguish, of final abandonment, of a dream that was dispelled.

"Now, about these papers," he said, striving to assume a business-like air. "I shall write to Mowlem & Son telling them that the Willard trust has attained its object. Sometime I shall endeavour personally to get them to hand over any document in their possession. They are only agents. They can be bought. As to these," and he tapped the sheets in Power's handwriting, "I shall keep them until you have carried out your share of the deal."

"Better not. You may die suddenly. Then they would be found."

"Die, may I? And what about you?"

"I shall not die until the future of Nancy's child is assured. In any event, I have taken steps to safeguard her secret."

Marten hesitated. Ultimately he applied a lighted match to the papers, threw them into a grate, and watched them burn and curl up in black spirals. When they were still ablaze he gathered the bits of crackling heather, and burnt them, too.

"That, then, is the end," he said.

"The beginning of the end," said Power, turning to leave the room. It was a very large apartment, and there were windows at each end. Through those on the landward side he saw Nancy riding toward the gates, in company with a young married couple who had joined the house party recently.

"With your permission, I will wait a few minutes," he said. "Your daughter is just crossing the park; but she will soon be out of sight. I'll dismiss my carriage, and walk home by the cliff path."

"Your" daughter. So he really meant to keep his word in letter and spirit! Marten thought him a strange man, a visionary. He had never met such another — undoubtedly, he was half mad!

In a little while Power walked out. Then Marten noticed, for the first time, that he moved with a slight limp; the result of some accident, no doubt. Curse him, why wasn't he killed? Then Nancy Marten would have become a princess, with no small likelihood of occupying a throne. For that was Marten's carefully planned scheme. A certain principality was practically in the market. It could be had for money. Money would do anything — almost anything. To-day money had failed!

WHAT THIN FOLKS SHOULD DO TO GAIN WEIGHT

Physician's Advice for Thin, Undeveloped Men and Women

Thousands of people suffer from excessive thinness, weak nerves and feeble stomachs who, having tried advertised flesh-makers, food-fads, physical culture stunts and rub-on creams, resign themselves to life-long skinniness and think nothing will make them fat. Yet their case is not hopeless. A recently discovered regenerative force makes fat grow after years of thinness, and is also unequalled for repairing the waste of sickness or faulty digestion and for strengthening the nerves. This remarkable discovery is called Sargol. Six strength-giving, fat-producing elements of acknowledged merit have been combined in this peerless preparation, which is endorsed by eminent physicians and used by prominent people everywhere. It is absolutely harmless, inexpensive and efficient.

A month's systematic use of Sargol should produce flesh and strength by correcting faults of digestion and by supplying highly concentrated fats to the blood. Increased nourishment is obtained from the food eaten, and the additional fats that thin people need are provided. Leading druggists supply Sargol and say there is a large demand for it.

While this new preparation has given splendid results as a nerve-tonic and vitaliser, it should not be used by nervous people unless they wish to gain at least ten pounds of flesh.

England's Maximum Wage.

England knew the maximum wage long before the minimum was thought of. It came about after the plague of 1348 had swept away half the population. Work was at a standstill for want of workers and wages went up so enormously that the state thought it necessary to fix a limit. The state ordered that the laborer should not merely accept gratefully what was offered him, but that he must not leave his parish in search of another master on pain of having the letter "F" (for fugitive) branded on his forehead. Statutes of this kind were popular up to Queen Elizabeth's time, when the last of the series was passed, "in the hope that it should banish idleness, advance husbandry and yield unto the hired person, both in the time of scarcity and in the time of plenty, a convenient proportion of wages."

Be Clean! Inside and Outside
If you would be healthy, strong and happy, Baths keep the skin clean and in good condition. But what about the inside of the body? You can no more afford to neglect it than the outside. It is just as important that the system be cleansed of the poisonous impurities caused by weakness of the digestive organs, or by inactivity of the liver.

Cleanses the system—and more. It puts the liver in such a condition of health that it purifies the blood—as it should. It helps the stomach digest food so that it makes good blood—rich, red blood to nourish and strengthen all the organs.

To Save Rob Roy Birthplace.

The birthplace of Rob Roy, the celebrated Highland freebooter, the place where he died, and his grave, have been saved by a decision of the House of Lords denying the city of Glasgow a right to draw a water supply from Loch Voil and Loch Doine. If Glasgow's request had been granted it would have been necessary, since these lakes are a part of the eastern watershed, to raise the level of the lakes some 50 feet, which would have submerged the Rob Roy landmarks.

These sentimental considerations were laid before the House of Lords in petition after petition, but the decision of that body, sitting in its judicial capacity, was not based upon any of these points. The ancient riparian regulations read that water from an eastern watershed shall not be diverted to western uses, and it was decided that Glasgow must forego its water supply for the prosaic reason that the city is on the wrong side of the watershed.

Under the Norwegian laws women are not allowed to preach. Evidently the movement for fifteen minute sermons is viewed seriously in those parts.

Then, again, the men might tackle the high cost of living by agreeing to smoke only one pound of tobacco for every pound of candy eaten by their women folk.

"When it comes to a question of marriage," says one clergyman, "most women are fools"—a fact they themselves usually admit to their husbands after marriage.

A Savannah gentleman claims to be in possession of President Madison's razor. Interesting enough, but the more pressing question is, "Who's got James Bowie's knife?"

SKIN SOFT AS A CHILD'S
"I was a great sufferer from eczema and salt rheum for years," writes Mr John W. Naas, Lunenburg, N.S. "Five years ago three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me and the old trouble never returned. My skin is soft as a child's now, and I shall always say a good word for this Ointment."

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its insertion.]

Clinton, Iowa, July 5. — One of three big conventions of the I. B. S. A. closed its sessions of eight days here to-day in the Coliseum with an address by Pastor Russell in the afternoon and the exhibition in the evening of Part IV. of the famous Photo-drama of Creation. The other Conventions have been in session throughout the week at Asbury Park, N.J., and Columbus, Ohio, Pastor Russell, President of the Association, being in attendance at each. Delegates to the number of about 9,000 have participated in the proceedings of the Conventions, and the results of the week are regarded as being among the most favorable in the history of the Association.

The Photo-Drama of Creation, which has already been exhibited in over one-hundred cities at home and is now running abroad also, was an interesting feature of the evening sessions of the three Conventions. Creation's Drama depicts Solomon's Temple in its various stages of preparation, showing the stone quarries under Jerusalem, the cedar forests in Lebanon, and details incident to its erection and dedication. This wonderful Temple furnished the basis for several New Testament descriptions of the antitypical Temple of God—the Church of Christ. The Temple, both type and antitype, was Pastor Russell's theme to-day. His text was, "The Temple of God is holy, which Temple ye are."—1 Corinthians 3:17.

The Pastor declared that both St. Paul and St. Peter are our authority for saying that the Church which is the Body of Christ is the Temple of God, and that His Temple is holy. God, who condemned the whole world in Adam, and who has declared that He will have no fellowship with sinners, has provided a way by which these sinners can come back into harmony with Him. Only through the arrangement which He has made in respect to this great Temple can mankind come back into harmony with their Creator. St. Paul points out the foundation of this great antitypical Temple, saying, "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." St. Peter declares, to the Church, "Ye also, as living stones, are built up a spiritual House, an holy Priesthood, to offer up sacrifices, acceptable to God through Jesus Christ."

Then the speaker showed that Solomon's Temple was a type, or figure, of this greater Temple which God is erecting. Solomon's Temple had several peculiarities connected with its construction. One very special peculiarity was that the great stones were taken out from underneath the site of the Temple. Another peculiarity was that each stone was made to fit exactly the place in which it was to be located, and then numbered and marked with signs which the builders understood. This method is followed by modern builders also; and when a building is constructed, every part is put in place quietly and orderly—no confusion whatever. So it was in Solomon's Temple! The stones were made ready before they were brought thither, so that there was neither hammer nor axe nor any tool of iron heard in the house while it was being built.

After having described the Temple of Solomon as a type, the Pastor proceeded to discuss the antitype—the Church of the living God. The Builder and Maker is God, he declared. The quarry is the world in general. The living stones are taken out of the world, separated from the world, but are chiseled and polished in this antitypical quarry, made ready for their positions, and then taken to their proper place. For more than eighteen hundred years this work of preparation has been going on. Jesus was the Foundation Stone. Before He came there were no stones prepared; none could be accepted until He had come and died, "the Just for the unjust."

Then the process of cutting, chiseling and polishing the "living stones" of the Temple was explained. Each consecrated Christian has had experiences of such a nature as to separate him from the world. It was a difficult matter to block out character and to bring each to the place where he would be separated from his surroundings. Still more difficult in some respects have been the chiselings, blow after blow, experience after experience, trial after trial, in order that each living stone might be shaped, fitted and prepared for a place in that glorious Temple which is yet to be constructed. The polishing process has also been going on. As the Scriptures express it, the Bride makes herself ready. Each living stone polishes others.

The Pastor here drew a lesson for those who are following in the steps of Jesus. He pointed out that while various severe experiences, trials and tests may come from the world, yet the very finest polishing is produced by contact with the brethren. Therefore whoever learns to love the brethren and to endure all their various weaknesses and imperfections, and is rightly exercised by those experiences, will receive a fine polish—that which our Lord through His Word describes as the fruitage of the Holy Spirit. "The fruits of the Spirit are manifest, which are these: meekness, gentleness, patience, long-suffering, brotherly kindness, love." If these things be in us in abundance, we shall be neither barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of the Lord. And so it is that an entrance shall be ministered unto us abundantly into the everlasting Kingdom of our Lord and Saviour.

Next the construction of the antitypical Temple was discussed. Eighteen hundred years ago the foundation was laid—in Heaven—the Top Stone, as the Apostle says. All the other stones must be fitted up into Him, according to St. Paul. In describing the antitypical Temple the Apostle here uses the figure of the pyramid, the top stone of which is a miniature pyramid, all remaining stones being fitted to come into line with it. So the Scriptures declare that Jesus is the Chief Corner Stone, the Top Stone, into whom the Church, as living stones, are being built up, instead of being shaped to a foundation below them. The speaker showed that this will be accomplished in the First Resurrection, when the Church, changed into spirit beings like the Lord, will be built up and completed with Him on the Heavenly plane, far above angels, principalities and powers, and every name that is named.

To the Pastor's understanding of the Scriptures, the building of the antitypical Temple will be done at the close of this Gospel Age. Just as in the construction of Solomon's Temple, all the materials were first prepared, and then the building began, so it will be with the antitypical Temple. Our great Master Workman has been getting ready the "living stones," supervising their preparation under strict rules as to shape, size, quality, etc. This work has been going on throughout this Gospel Age, and not until the full number of stones shall have been made ready will the construction of that glorious Temple begin. This construction will be the Resurrection change—"Changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye"; for "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God."

Pastor Russell then showed that since we are now living in the close of this Age, the stones for the antitypical Temple must practically all be finished. Therefore he inclines to the thought that the work of construction of the Temple has already begun. This does not imply, however, that the final polish has been given to all of the stones. Those long since prepared could be put in place while the last stones were receiving the finishing touches. He declared that the Scriptures so intimate when they say that "the dead in Christ shall rise first"—beforehand — and that "then we who are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord." The fact that some are not yet "caught up to meet the Lord," but are still in the place of polishing and preparation, indicates that the Temple is not yet completed.

After every living stone has been placed in the great antitypical Temple, the glorification of the Temple will follow. In the type, King Solomon, type of our Lord Jesus, offered the sacrifice, and God accepted it; then the glory of the Lord filled the Temple. So in the antitype, the Church in glory will not be the Temple of God until the Heavenly Father Himself shall have recognized it. It is the work of our Lord Jesus Christ, the great Master Workman, to shape and polish these living stones, to remove them to glorious conditions by the resurrection change, and to build the Temple. Then, when all is finished, not a stone lacking, He will await the Father's acceptance. The glory of the Lord God will fill this living Temple.

The Pastor then showed the purpose for which this glorious Temple of God is being constructed. Back in the Law Dispensation the required information was pictorially set forth in types and shadows. The Prophet Isaiah had foretold that God's House was to be called a House of Prayer for all nations. This was what the Temple at Jerusalem was in particular. It was arranged in different sections, representing various classes, as it were. First in importance was the Most Holy, then came the Holy, then the Court into which Jews might come, next the Women's Court, last the Court of the Gentiles. Thus was depicted the Millennial Age —after the glorification of the antitypical Temple.

God will be in that Temple — the entire Church of Christ glorified. The Divine Power will operate through it, and all nations will begin to draw near to God. But in order to do so, they must draw near to this Temple for the glory of God will be therein displayed. All nations, both Jew and Gentile, will come to the Heavenly Father through this Temple.

Another Old Testament picture which the Pastor explained was that of the typical priesthood. The Priests of this new Temple of the future will be Jesus, the great High Priest, and His Church, the under-priests. Jesus will be both King and Priest — "a Priest upon His Throne" — after the Order of Melchisedek. Our Lord is not yet upon His Throne, but remains waiting at the right hand of the Majesty on High, until the antitypical Temple is completed. The Father's right hand signifies the place of chief favor, next to the Father Himself. As it is written, "Sit at My right hand, until I make Thine enemies Thy footstool."

During this period of waiting, the "living stones" of the Temple have been prepared; those who will constitute the Royal Priests have been in training for the duties of their office. As yet there is no Royal Priesthood; for only those who shall be declared worthy to sit with our Lord in His Throne will constitute with Him that Priesthood. Again, it is written, "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the First Resurrection; on such the Second Death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God, and shall reign with Christ a thousand years."

The Pastor then declared that these future Priests are also Knights of the Temple. While at present they do not wear white plumes, yet by and by they shall wear, not only white plumes, but white raiment. Our Lord has said, "They shall walk with Me in white; for they are worthy."

Various New Testament references to the Church of Christ as a Temple were then explained. One of these was St. Paul's question addressed to the Corinthian Church: "What? Know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Spirit which is in you?" It was shown that this question does not apply to the world; for by nature the world knows not God. They are still under condemnation—"children of wrath" — according to Scripture. God has not yet begun to deal with them, nor to give them the blessings which He has purposed for them. During this Gospel Age He is dispensing blessings only to the Church class, to those who have received of the Holy Spirit.

Pastor Russell then pointed out that beyond the veil the Church class will receive the Holy Spirit without measure, when all the "living stones" constituting the Temple of God will have been glorified. But on this side of the veil, those who give up their will to the Lord and who are accepted and begotten of the Holy Spirit as New Creatures in Christ, receive that Spirit in measure; and so the bodies of these may be said to be the temples of the Holy Spirit. Wherever God's Spirit is, there is a temple, as St. Paul's question sets forth. Again, the Apostle declares that we have this treasure in earthen vessel, that the glory may be of God. God's Holy Spirit constitutes its recipient a Temple of God.

Elsewhere the Apostle calls the bodies of those begotten of the Holy Spirit tabernacles. The difference between a tabernacle and a temple is that the former is a temporary structure, while the latter is permanent. So St. Paul calls the present condition of the Church, in which the Holy Spirit dwells merely in our hearts, a tabernacle condition. It is not to last forever; it is only for the present trial-time. If we are rightly exercised by this power of God within us, then we shall be made ready for the Temple condition. These are blended pictures of the Apostle's thought, which is this: If the Holy Spirit dwells in us, we should regard our bodies very sacredly.

In that same connection the Apostle goes on to say, "What communion hath light with darkness?" and again, "What harmony is there between the Temple of God and the temple of idols?"—between the purity that belongs to the Temple of God and the impurities that belong to the world, the flesh and the Devil? Those who have been made the recipients of the Holy Spirit of God should be clean and pure, as befitting a temple of God. They should see to it that this sanctifying power of God extends to all their faculties and operates through them—in their minds, their tongues, their hands, their feet —their words, thoughts and doings.

The Pastor concluded his address with an exhortation to those who realize themselves to be living stones in process of preparation for a place in the antitypical Temple of God. He urged these to appreciate the privilege of present discipline. Much chiseling and polishing are necessary to prepare these stones for their future position. Therefore each should thankfully welcome whatever experience of this kind the Master Workman shall see fit to permit him to have. The present discipline of the Church is for the purpose of developing the character necessary to the great service for which God is building His Temple.

While each faithful follower of the Lord looks forward longingly to the glories of the future, when the glory of the Lord shall fill the Temple, yet each should remember that unless he is submissive to the chiselings and polishings of the present he will be set aside as a living stone, and his place given to another. The cultivation of pride along any line, the development of an unsanctified ambition, are amongst the greatest dangers to these living stones, now in preparation. Such flaws developed would render any unfit for a position in the Temple.

The Scriptures declare that the great Master Workman will present each of His faithful ones blameless and irreprovable before the Father with exceeding joy. After having received the Redeemer's "Well done," the Church will then receive the Father's approval and be honored in the presence of all the holy angels. Surely this experience will fill the Church with glory. Then will follow the blessed privilege of taking hold upon the world's affairs, rescuing mankind from bondage to Sin and Death, and blessing all mankind with the knowledge of the glory of God, whom to know aright is life everlasting.

COMPLETELY BROKEN DOWN

Another Lady Thinks "Fruit-a-tives" Greatest Tonic in The World.

HAGERSVILLE, Ont., Aug. 26th, 1913.

I can highly recommend "Fruit-a-tives" because they did me an awful lot of good. About four years ago, I commenced taking "Fruit-a-tives" for a general break-down and they did me a world of good. We bought a good many dollars' worth, but they did all that your advertising claims for them, and as I said before, I cannot speak too highly for them. Their action is so pleasant, compared with other medicines, that I am glad to say so and I trust that some other woman may start taking "Fruit-a-tives" for I know the results will be all that you claim".

Renewed Vigor In Old Age

This Letter Brings a Message of Cheer to the Aged—Results of Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

New, rich blood is what is most needed in the declining years to keep up energy and vitality. That Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a wonderful help in maintaining good health and prolonging life is attested by the writer of this letter.

Mr. Stephen J. Leard, North Tryon, P.E.I., writes: — "At seventy-five years of age my heart gave out and became very irregular and weak in action and would palpitate. My nerves also became weak, and I could do nothing but lie in bed in a languishing condition, losing strength and weight. In that condition I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and am cured. Had I not obtained this treatment I would now be in the box with the roof over my nose. At eighty-one I have an energy which means go, and I am writing this letter so that old people like myself may prolong their hearth and strength by using this great medicine." 50c a box, 6 for $2.50. Where Wives Work.

Willesden, one of the suburbs of London, is a perfect paradise for a certain type of husband. There is no need for him to go out to work; his wife will see to that. All he needs do is stay at home and mind the baby. He has a job for life, and practically nothing to do.

This Gilbertian arrangement is due to the peculiar industrial conditions of Willesden, where there are many laundries and factories and female labor is much cheaper than male labor would be at the same class of work, the wages are good, considering that only five days a week are worked in the laundries, the women not being required on Mondays.

Consequently the women rule the industrial world of Willesden. The positions of man and wife are reversed. There is no need for the man to go to work. Not only would he be unsuitable for the job, but the labor and the wages would not suit him.

It was mentioned at the local police court a short time ago that a mother and her daughters who were at work allowed the father 5s. a week pocket money. In the end he tired of his job and revolted.

African Doctors.

Mr. Hylton-Simpson, whose anthropological investigations on the Congo are well known, has just returned from the Algerian hinterland, where he has for some years been studying the Bedouin and other tribes of the desert.

During his previous travels Mr. Hylton-Simpson had heard much of the wonderful skill of the tribal doctors, particularly in surgery. On this expedition he came into touch with a friendly Arab doctor, who helped him to a meeting with eight village surgeons. He has brought back for the learned societies a mass of valuable information and a large collection of native surgical instruments. These, consisting of fifty saws, lancets, and probes, are of the crudest description, but prove highly effective.

Strathcona Died a Scot.

An interesting point of discussion has been settled by the will of Lord Strathcona, just filed in Montreal, as to whether Canada, England or Scotland could claim the late magnate, philanthropist and statesman as a son.

"And I declare that I am and I intend to remain a domiciled Scotsman," is one short clause in the will.

The Canadian succession duties offices will be only able to claim death duties on real estate held in this country, the shares held in the various Canadian companies coming under the English law.

SEA LINGO.

Marine Phrases Drawn From All Over the World.

Practically every recognized language has been called upon at some time to help in building up the vocabulary of the sea.

"Davy Jones," for instance, might be taken to refer to some dead and gone Welshman, but the name is derived from quite another source. One should speak of "Duffy Jonah's locker," for that was the original, "Duffy" being the West Indian name for a spirit or ghost, and "Jonah" referring to the prophet.

Another expression gradually corrupted out of its original form is the "dog watch." It was originally the "dodge watch" because it lasts only two hours, and was intended to ensure that the same men shall not be on duty ever day during the same hours.

The "jury mast" has nothing in common with the "twelve good men and true" except its derivation from the same French word "jour," meaning "one day." The jury-mast is erected temporarily "for a day," just as the jury, in its legal sense, meant a tribunal summoned for a short time.

The "sheet anchor," the largest anchor carried by a ship, should really be the "shote anchor," and is so called because of its great weight, which allows it to shoot out in cases of emergency.

"Port" is a comparatively new expression. In the old days they used to refer to "larboard" and "starboard." "Starboard" has nothing in common with the twinkling stars of the heavens, it is derived from the Anglo-Saxon "steer-board" or "steer-side." In Viking times the galleys were steered by an oar, which the helmsman held with his right hand. "Larboard" was probably a corruption of "lower-board," the larboard side being inferior to the other.

The word "admiral" is Arabic springing from "emil el bagh," or "lord of the sea." "Captain" comes from the Latin "caput," but "mate" is Icelandic, and means "companion" or "equal." "Coxswain" had a curious origin. The "coxswain" was a man who pulled the last oar in the captain's boat, which was described as the "cock-boat." This, in turn, was a corruption of a small, round boat found on the rivers Usk and Wye, and known as a "coracle." Coxswain is therefore a Welsh name.

The Prisoner Escaped.

Great excitement was caused in the city magistrate's court at Poona the other day. The court was crowded, while a theft case against a young Pathan was being heard, when the prisoner, whose police guards were paying more attention to the case than guarding him, escaped from the dock. His escape was not discovered until more than half an hour later, when a search was made. Up to the present he has not been recaptured.

THE COMMON LAW.

It is our own common law which teaches us that oppressive or unequal taxation is tyranny and that false economic legislation is in the end a deadly foe to labor and to that uplift of the workingman which all good citizens now so earnestly desire. In a country where the suffrage is universal the material and moral uplift of the voters is an imperative necessity, for no state can long endure the strain of an uninstructed and impoverished political majority. No statesman of this country is either wise or great if he has not the fear and respect of the common law in his heart. Show me a demagogue and I shall see a foe of the common law. That there are now economic wrongs to be adjusted in this as in every other land no thinking man denies. But these wrongs are not the product of the common law, but have come about through new agencies and in defiance of the common law.—Surrogate R. L. Fowler of New York.

WORK for the WOMANLY BRAIN and HAND

The Orient in Your Home

An Exotic Top on a Western Tray

A Silk Pagoda Shade

For the Sewing Table

Painted Blossoms on Crepe

Make One for a Pillow

Jade Rings and a Square Make This

THE note of the east in dress was also beautiful to be ignored by home decorators. All the glory of the eastern embroideries with their exquisite workmanship and all the expressions of the decorative idea in artistic furnishings are now seen in homes that reflect thought and beauty in their fittings. The orient in your home is not an impossible thing to bring by way of your practical handicraft. These suggestions are offered to help you to bring the best from the land of cherry blossoms and the kingdom of Cathay into your home.

If you browse around in the Japanese and Chinese departments of any large store or in special oriental shops you will be able to pick up strips and squares of embroidery done in the exquisite style that is characteristic of oriental handicraft. And while you are about it, pick up some ideas as well. Color schemes, combinations of materials and clever ideas for working up little pieces of silk into articles that are decorative as well as useful will be all there for the taking.

If you have ever priced a Japanese or Chinese lampshade, you will greet with joy the idea of making one at home. High prices ought to be no excuse for keeping the orient on the other side of the ocean. The lampshade here shown can be made by you, so get out your needle and thread and follow directions. The wire frame can be bought in the art needlework department of any store or at the counter where lighting supplies are sold. A large frame makes an effective note in the library or living room of a home. The size of the base of the lamp will determine the size of the frame. When you have purchased this, buy figured chiffon in bright yellow, green or blue, [illegible] to insure better wearing quality. In this shade there has been allowed one and one-half the length around the outer rim of the frame. Halve the length of the silk and gather each edge with strong thread. Divide the length so that the fullness is evenly distributed around the circle and whip the material over the wire. Attach it in the same way on the other edge and hem down the raw edges at the junction.

Around the edge sew a band of braid that can be bought by the piece in all lengths and widths. This gives a neat finish. The top of this shade is suggestive of a pagoda or teahouse, and is wire-covered with silk that is a circle that is stretched around it and fitted in at the line quite as you fit a hat lining. Around the top place a band of braid and finish the shade with a fringe of beads that can suggest jade or any of the queer wooden beads that are purchasable at the counter of the needlework department. Shades of that beautiful blue chrysanthemum embroidery can be made in a similar manner without difficulty. Handwork makes a quick adjustment within the grasp of every woman who has a bowing acquaintance with her needle.

The handy bag made of oriental embroidery is a thing of beauty and a practical joy as long as it lasts. A strip of silk in any color and design can be transformed into a bag for the theater or sewing circle. In spite of the exquisite work on oriental embroidery, it has wearing qualities that will surprise you. This bag is slightly longer than it is wide, but any proportion will be right. It is seamed at each side after having been lined with a plain silk that repeats the main color of the flowers in the design. Allow for side openings by stopping the seams and hemming the edges up each side. Gather the top edge into a band of gilt braid, which should be doubled to form a casing. This casing must be made first around the jade rings, which are the handles of the bag. Two pieces of braid can be whipped on the upper edge to form it. These rings, by the way, are to be bought at any Japanese store and are not expensive if in imitation. With a little stick of sandalwood in the bottom of the bag this will be a valuable hint of the east that you will never forget when out calling.

The basket with the silk top is quickly made, for the work is the adjustment of a straight piece of silk crepe to the top of the basket. Measure the perimeter of the top and allow for a narrow hem at the joining of the edges. Whip the fabric to the top of the basket. The bands of galloon or oriental braid are in parallel rows, as shown. The three bands need not match, and here is an excellent way to use short strips of ribbon. Of course, the strips should be applied to the crepe. Through the casing a cord is run that serves as a drawing string. In this basket all the accessories for a sewing bag can be placed, and when not in use it can be kept on a table, contributing to the decoration of a room.

If you have had an invitation to a wedding and have had a chance to view the gifts, it will be impressed on your mind that there is a decided favoritism being accorded to trays of wood with decorative centers. This is a sign of the times that popular taste is improving. Why not have a tray that suggests the orient in your home? The mahogany rim is purchasable in the housefurnishing department of stores or in the art furniture sections. The medallion is to be had in the oriental department. You will have to keep in mind the size of the frame when purchasing the embroidered circle or square. There is a great variety in these goods, the gold embroidery coming at high prices, and the blue-and-white ranging in price from $1 to anything that you wish to pay. The back of the tray should be removed and the medallion fitted exactly in with the top of it coming between the handles. A round piece of pasteboard cut to fit in at the back will hold the fabric in place. Adjust this as you do the back of pictures. Cover the back of the tray with its wooden disk, nailing or gluing the piece into place, and over the whole paste a circular piece of green felt. Glass is on the top of the tray to protect the embroidery.

The Chinese dragon is a favorite in the embroidery field and very expensive if you would purchase the real thing. Why not make one? A dragon is here shown, giving the general contour of its decorative motif. If you are the least bit clever with your pencil, you can draw one for yourself on Chinese-blue satin. Embroider it with gold thread or a golden-yellow silk floss that will give the same effect at smaller cost. The body is done in clusters of solid stitches arranged to suggest the scales of the dragon. At the side there is a band of straight stitches held in place by horizontal lines of double threads. The head is made of a series of zigzag lines, while the teeth are points of thread. Outline work is used for the feet. Really it is very easy and a decided relief from the embroidered flowers, and will carry out an oriental scheme to a successful finish.

A pillow top can be made of this square of satin, and the edges of the cushion are most effective when finished with a blue or gold silk cord.

The hand painting of the Japanese is an art in itself, but not difficult to master. Opaque paints in delicate colors are used in the floral decorations of silk, crepe, or any of the fabrics that have a slightly rough surface. That little basket of reed has a top of Japanese crepe. Perhaps you have purchased it plain and wish to add the touch that will make it indisputably a hint of the orient. Well, take a fine camel's-hair brush, some paint, to which a little powdered alum has been added after the mixing, and after drawing the flower design, paint the petals of the flowers with pink or white, allowing it to dry before attaching it to the top of the basket.

The centers of the flowers should be yellow and the leaves should be a faint yellow. Of course, there can be any scheme followed.

The far east is not so far away, after all, is it?

The Entertainer

A Party for Grandmother

IN THESE days of social activity the young members of the family are apt to forget that grandmother might enjoy a party once in a while. They prepare for card parties and luncheons, to which their young friends are invited, and frequently grandmother withdraws to her room and remains quietly until the guests have departed. She enjoys watching the young folks dance and play games, but she cannot enter into this form of entertainment. The thoughtful daughter or granddaughter will have a party for the elderly friends of grandmother several times each year.

Surprise parties are always delightful, so make all the necessary preparations secretly. Invite a dozen or more elderly ladies to spend the afternoon. Request each guest to bring an heirloom, which will promote much reminiscent conversation.

Arrange a musical program, having a talented friend play all the old songs; that is, if you cannot do it yourself. Supply each one of your elderly guests with a small booklet and pencil, with which she can write the names of the songs as they are played. Award a suitable prize to the one who guesses the greatest number correctly.

If you can draw, decorate the booklets with watercolor sketches of girls dressed in the quaint costumes of other days. These will be a great source of pleasure to the guests.

Serve tea at 5.30 and have the guests seated at the large dining room table. Decorate this in an artistic manner by having a centerpiece of the old-fashioned flowers that grew in grandmother's garden, such as tea roses, mignonette, clovepinks and heliotrope.

Use only old-fashioned china and glassware on the table, and the candlesticks should be brass, silver or crystal of colonial design.

At each place have an old-fashioned nosegay in a holder of lace paper. These can be purchased from the florist and come in all sizes. Another pretty favor would be to provide clusters of pansies, with the stems wrapped with tinfoil and tied with lavender ribbon.

When selecting the menu, choose dishes that are easily digested. From this list you can make a choice:

Chicken, Tomato or Celery Bouillon
Sandwiches
Chicken or Oyster Croquettes with Peas
Endive Chickory or Watercress Salad
Baking Powder Biscuit Preserves
Cup Custard, Rice Pudding or Blanc Mange
Sponge Cake
Coffee or Tea

Several varieties of sandwiches should be served and you will find no difficulty in finding those which are digestible.

Chicken sandwiches are always enjoyed, and these made of chopped raisins and figs are especially palatable. To make the filling for these, chop the fruit, adding several stalks of celery, and mix with the mayonnaise to the proper consistency. Slice the bread extremely thin and spread the filling generously between the layers.

Cut the sponge cake in cubes and serve with whipped cream or cornstarch dressing.

If there is a young girl in the house, have her wait on the table, attired in the costume of 1840 or 1850.

After tea have an opera bus call for your elderly guests and take them to their homes.

Grandmother will be delighted with her surprise party, and all the elderly guests will talk for many days about the pleasant afternoon spent at your home.

If ever you entertain the dear old ladies who are numbered among your grandmother's friends, you will repeat the pleasure whenever the opportunity presents itself.

Modernizing the Antiquated Bathroom

THAT hideous bathroom isn't hopeless. On a second inspection you'll find that there is much that can be done to make it something quite different from the eyesore it now is.

It is more than likely that the woodwork needs repainting. Nothing seems really appropriate for a bathroom but white, and the effect is worthy the very little extra trouble involved in keeping it clean. The mirror and medicine chest should also be painted white.

Rip up that old insanitary carpet and replace it with dull-finished blue and gray linoleum (these colors go well with white woodwork) of a heavy quality.

Ever so many attractive fixtures easily installed by a woman who can use hammer, nails and a screwdriver can be bought a piece at a time. There are the attractive nickel or glass towel racks. They are simply curved bars, fastened at each end to the woodwork by screws. One can be placed on each side of the stationary washstand and a longer one over the bathtub for the heavier towels. One or two nickel clothes hooks for bathrobes can be placed upon the back of the bathroom door. Place a nickel soap cup and a nickel tumbler holder over the stand; also a rack for toothbrushes. A bathtub seat and a rubber mat for the tub, to avoid slipping on its smooth surface, are convenient additions. Be sure to have a washable rug on the floor. The old-time rag ones are about the most suitable for the purpose. They make it of blue and white washable materials, so that it may be actually laundered. Last of all, hang a plain swiss half curtain at the window, and your bathroom cannot fail to be attractive.

To Soften Paint Brushes

WHEN my paint brushes become dry and hard, I soften them by immersing in boiling vinegar, allowing them to simmer in the vinegar for ten minutes, afterward washing the brushes in strong soapsuds.

To Curl a Feather

AN ostrich feather that has become uncurled from the dampness may be curled again by sprinkling it thickly with common salt and shaking it before a bright fire until it is dry.
Mrs. F. M.

To Polish Japanned Trays

JAPANNED trays that have become marked from hot water may be made to look new again by rubbing the marks with sweet oil and polishing with a little dry flour on a soft duster.

For a Damp Cupboard

TO absorb the moisture in a damp cupboard leave a quantity of quicklime in the cupboard for a few days.

An Oilcloth Hint

TO give a soft tread to oilcloth, also to increase its length of serviceableness, I find it excellent to put a layer of sawdust on the floor before laying the oilcloth.
Mrs. D. L.

To Renovate Leather

TO renovate leather and to remove the greasy looking marks on the arms and head of leather chairs the following is excellent: Boil half a pint of linseed oil and let it stand until nearly cold, then pour in half a pint of vinegar. Stir until well mixed, bottle and it is ready for use. To use, put a few drops on a flannel duster and polish with a soft cloth.
Mrs. L. G.

Indian Matting

HAVING discovered an excellent way to clean matting, I pass it on to others. Beat the matting first to remove all dust, then take it out of doors and scrub it well with brine water or with water to which a small quantity of salt has been added. Soap has a tendency to turn matting yellow, and should not be used. After the matting has been put through this process it should be rinsed with cold water, rubbed as dry as possible with a clean cloth and hung on a line to complete the drying.

SEEING OURSELVES AS OTHERS SEE US

By Ethel Davis Seal

HOW any woman creature is able to do without a full-sized mirror is more than I can tell! This sliding up and down of a small mirror to get a whole effect has ever been a mystery to me. And yet I know they do it! I know one woman who sets her mirror on the floor to view the hem of her skirt; on a chair to arrange her girdle, and completes her head dressing through the aid of a nail on the wall. She really could afford two or three large mirrors, if she made up her mind to it, but she just doesn't take the trouble.

On the part of some, this hesitancy to acquire a large mirror is sometimes due to a dislike for the usual mirrored furniture to be seen in the shops—and the prices. Of course, all mirrors are expensive, every one knows that, and so, when laying out the money for one, it should be of a design which appeals to the owner.

Mirrors have two other very important uses. They make a small room look larger and they make a dark room lighter. Either one of these uses provides a sufficient reason for having one or more mirrors about, without considering their transcendent quality for the reflecting of feminine beauty. (It is a well-established fact that the men never use them. Clearly proved by the number of men we see gazing raptly into those terrible chewing-gum mirror arrangements to be found in every subway station.)

Now one of the easiest mirror "plans" is to have one installed in the closet door of the bedroom. It is not necessary for the glass to be beveled, though this is a matter of taste and price. A sufficiently large piece of glass would cost about $10 or $15.

The cheval glass shown in connection with the vase and the footstool could easily form the keynote of a very charming room. This is to be found in the shops, and is priced at $50. It comes in mahogany, gray or white enamel. If it and the rest of the furniture were in gray enamel, the walls and woodwork might be in cream, the wall tone being a few shades darker than that used on the woodwork. The rug, of course, would be very important, and it would be worth while to hunt until one finds exactly the right thing, which should be a rug in which grays and buffs and creams blend, with touches of old blue and old rose; a rug which is so soft and delightful in coloring that one would be tempted to hang it on the wall. The floor should be painted gray, a few tones darker than the furniture. And in this way have we fitted the framework of our room to hold our furniture.

One or two little French beds in the gray enamel, and with natural wicker insets, suit charmingly in style. A dressing table in the French design with three sectional mirrors, and a little low-backed chair; a chest of drawers, like a bureau without a glass; a little desk table with a straight chair, two bed stools, about the height and size of chairs without backs, upholstered in old-rose brocade, and one placed at the foot of each bed, and one wicker and one upholstered armchair, the former to be of gray with a dull-blue cushion seat, and the latter to be of chintz, rich in color, well covered, and reflecting and combining all the colors used in the room. Add to this room built-in bookcases, painted cream, and holding books the bindings of which are all soft in tone and without a note of red; fine muslin curtains at the windows with side drapes of gray silk, embroidered at the border in rose and blue; and we can be sure there will not be a more charming bedroom in existence. If one has the money to spend, it is so much better to refurnish out something unusual like this than to buy the obvious, everyday thing which is doubtlessly correct, but somewhat monotonous because it is seen on every side.

For a bedroom furnished in mahogany, the oval cheval glass presents pleasing possibilities. The small carved ones were removed and candles substituted, thus giving it an original note. The price of this cheval glass is about $45. This bedroom was very stunning. The cream-colored wall and woodwork set off splendidly the mahogany furniture, and for brilliant notes of color, one relied entirely on the Bulgarian chintz hangings and the rugs of dull oriental tones. The night stand shown in this drawing is $35.

Now the last two examples, showing the use of large mirrors, are home-made, in that they cannot be bought in a shop. But a first-rate cabinetmaker should be able to easily manage them.

The first one is made of chestnut or poplar wood, and enameled white or gray. First is made the stand upon which the whole upper part rests. This is made of straight wood and the scroll work and feet are jigsawed. The two bog arrangements, each of which contains a shoe closet and three drawers, are then made and set in position. Also the mirror. And the result is a very expensive-looking piece of furniture which has cost not more than $20 or $25. This particular piece is gray with lime chintz window hangings, buff walls and lime candleshades.

The last one is even more easily made. It relies for its beginning on an old chest of drawers. The top of the chest was carefully removed and the top drawer, with its shell, was cut away, leaving only the two drawers below, and upon which the top piece was reset. A set of little drawer boxes was made for each end and in the middle was placed the large mirror, fastened securely.

Of course, there are many small separate mirrors of which any one might consider herself lucky to be possessed. For these separate mirrors have been in vogue since the sixteenth century, and we see many of the beautiful old ones, as well as some good copies of the same. To tell the truth, in those days they were not called mirrors, but looking glasses. A mirror was a girandole — one of those circular convex affairs, in an ornate frame and usually surmounted by an eagle. If you have never seen one, you might still be able to imagine what it would be like to hook into "a circular convex mirror." It makes you either enormously fat or amazingly thin, with a squint or a leer or a double chin—so they were never very popular except for wall decorations.

Of the looking glasses which have survived, we have the pier glass, the mantel glass and the smaller glasses in mahogany, walnut, gilt and gilt frames, most of them beautiful and most of them old.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

GETTING HOLD OF HER HEART

There was a deep, sure note in her voice and a fearless, self-reliant look in her eyes the day she joined the Star reportorial force. And she proved to be a pessimist. Life was an awful problem, according to her lights. If there was a glimmer of the tragic to be found in a story, she magnified it. If there was a chance for damning man in general, Olive Cripps left not a shred of him undefiled.

As time wore on, that fearless, self-reliant look became deeper ingrained. It was current talk in the office that Olive Cripps was "absolutely unsexed." The word came to the girl's ears, but she only shrugged her shoulders, gave a bitter little twist to her mouth, and went on emphasizing the greyness of life.

She was a hard worker and was to be found at her post early and late.

"If she only had a heart," said the city editor, "she'd make a great newspaper woman."

Out of office hours the girl was little seen. Haunts frequented by other folk of her guild she shunned. Anything verging on the personal she avoided.

Her acquaintances were limited, her confidence enjoyed by none. She regarded life as a strictly business proposition.

That was one reason why the city editor smiled knowingly when the representative of a big eastern house informed him that he "would not do business with a woman."

"You'll either have to see our Miss Cripps or we can't do anything for you," replied the grinning enigma.

"Women belong at home. I don't like them in offices. It annoys me," flamed the easterner.

"Sorry, but our Miss Cripps is — different."

Calvin Brett turned on his heel and left the office. He had gone only a half block when he realized that he needed space in the Star. It was his business to get that space—lots of it.

"Oh, well," he snarled, "I'll have to see her."

There was a quick look between them. A danger signal flashed from the girl's eyes, and the sentence on the man's lips remained unspoken. He arranged for notices — arranged for them in exactly the same way that he was accustomed to arrange for them with a man. Then he walked slowly from the desk of Olive Cripps to the hall. Three minutes later the girl started for the elevator. In a deep brown study, Calvin Brett was pacing up and down as if he had not noticed that the elevator was receiving passengers that day.

The girl passed him without a glance of recognition. The man followed her into the elevator and from the elevator to the street. Once he hastened his steps as if to speak to her, but—didn't.

However, the next day it seemed a matter of the greatest importance that he should take up other business matter with the dark-haired, self-reliant girl at the desk in the corner of the local room. It was awkward that the big room was full of curious eyes and open ears. There was no opportunity to touch on things other than business.

Finally, he hesitatingly suggested, "If you will dine with me to-night, I think, perhaps, I can interest you in some really big stories about our work. And," he added in a whisper, "I want to talk to you, Olive. I must talk to you—alone!"

The girl's eyes met his fearlessly, a little contemptuously, it seemed to the man.

"I never talk business out of the office, Mr. Brett, and I never mix social matters with business."

Abruptly and confusedly, Calvin Brett took his leave. When the door had closed behind him Olive Cripps surreptitiously dug a small pocket mirror somewhere from her desk and gazed anxiously into its depths. Then she sat perfectly still, looking at—nothing. Biff, the office boy, who laid the evening paper on her desk, swore there were tears in her eyes.

It was the following morning that the city editor called her: "Get over to the Warren Hotel — quick — Miss Cripps. Attempted suicide—actress—dying—will talk. Fly— and for heaven's sake — get hold of your heart."

It was just the ordinary everyday story. A little old greyhaired woman, stranded, alone — a woman who had left her home and those who loved her to follow a precarious career. She had reached the point where she hadn't the courage to go on.

But the story that Olive Cripps wrote that day had never been done before in the Star office. It was more than a story. It was life, written by a woman who had suddenly come close to its real issues and understood.

The city editor passed the story to the desk man. "And I said she didn't have a heart!"

When Biff laid the evennig paper on Miss Cripps' desk, she did an unheard of thing. She smiled at him and whispered, "Say, youngster, how's the mother making it?"

The exact state of the mother's health had been a matter of deepest solicitude in the office for weeks, but Olive Cripps had never before given sign of interest.

Calvin Brett, sitting in a hotel room, disconsolate, pessimistic, read the Star. A great lump came into his throat. He didn't stop to see if his hair was rumpled or his necktie straight. He took a taxi to the Star office.

It didn't matter to him then that there were curious eyes in the local room. He took the girl's hands in his. "I've found the real you, Olive Brett," he said. "We were both wrong. I see now that a girl needs interests outside the home as well as inside. Shall we go home, dear, and try—your way?"

The self-reliant look in her eyes gave place to a happy film of love, softness and understanding, as Mrs. Olive Cripps Brett replied:

"When we stare at Death, Calvin, we see—things—as—they—are. I'm tired, dear, and I want—just home!"

WEIRD FIGHTING.

African Tribes Entrench Themselves In Bowels of the Earth.

English soldiers tell stories of weird underground fighting against the Baggara, or cattle-owning tribes of the Soudan, the remnants of those fierce warriors who formed the main fighting strength of the Dervishes. These savage tribesmen hide themselves when pursued, with their cattle and other belongings, in great burrowings that are described as "vast rabbit warrens."

At southern Kordofan is the country of the Nubas, remnants of the original negro inhabitants of the country, who have been driven into the isolated rocky hills, rising 2,000 or 3,000 feet above the swamps and forests.

In these mountain fastnesses, honeycombed with caves, this strange race builds its villages, grows its corn and tends its herds of sheep, cattle and goats. Generally speaking, they are peaceable enough, but some of the clans have an evil reputation of raiding the neighboring Arabs, murdering isolated parties that may happen to stray too near, or carrying off their women. The tribesmen invariably retire, with the greater part of their personal property and live stock, to the bowels of the earth, whence they maintain a hot fire on any troops who may happen to come within range of their Sniders or Remingtons.

The unsatisfactory nature of this fighting may be understood if the reader can imagine himself walking over a vast rabbit warren composed of enormous bowlders piled to a height of some 1,000 feet or 2,000 feet and covering several square miles in area, with an invisible enemy beneath him whose whereabouts it is impossible to ascertain.

Officers naturally hesitated to engage in underground warfare in labyrinths where whole battalions might be swallowed up, and where all the advantage lay with the enemy. Latterly, however, the problem has been tackled in a systematic manner by the camel corps and in recent expeditions extensive cave-clearing operations have been carried out.

Parties preceded by torch-bearers have explored these recesses with great success, and though some loss has been sustained, the Nubas now know that their immunity is gone, and that the arm of the government is able to reach them.

The Most Famous Song.

What's the world's most famous song?

A London paper recently asked this question and then proceeded to make an unexpected answer—namely, that it is not Auld Lang Syne, Annie Laurie, Home, Sweet Home, God Save the King, The Watch on the Rhine, The Marseillaise or The Last Rose of Summer, all of which would seem to be probable candidates for the honor. What is it, then? The answer is Malbrook, whose refrains, We won't go home till morning, and For he's a jolly good fellow, are equally familiar in Europe and in America.

The air of the song has been sung in Europe since the time of the crusades, when it was carried to the east and so became familiar to Turks and Arabs. The modernisation of the song dates from some time after the battle of Malplaquet, when it was first sung by a French muse at Versailles, whence it spread to Paris and throughout France, and, as has been said, gave the great Duke of Marlborough more celebrity than all his victories. The words were printed on fans and screens, and were sung in palaces and on the streets. The still further modernisation for the exigencies of roistering melody was the last touch which insured the song universal popularity. Incorporated in opera bouffe by Bizet, sung by Marie Antoinette in the Tuileries, introduced by Beaumarchais in The Marriage of Figaro and by Beethoven in his symphony, and hummed by the great Napoleon whenever he entered a battle, the air of Malbrook has literally sung itself into the heart of the world.

And Du Maurier understood its infinite possibilities when he had Trilby transform it into a great lyric tragedy.

The Odor of London.

Max Nordau, the eminent author, asserts that the characteristic smell of London is beer. "I have," he said, "approached London from every point of the compass, by land and sea, and on every occasion my nostrils have been assailed by the same unmistakable smell of beer."

Hotel 400 Years Old.

Very shortly the George Hotel, Reading, Eng., more than 400 years old, will be sold by auction. The George was doing business in the days when the Abbot of Reading was one of the great men in the land, and it stands in dignified repose in a busy street, not far from the gaunt ruins of the great abbey. High over its arched entrance, on a little shield, is the date of its foundation, 1506. Reading was then a village of 2,000 inhabitants.

Skin Trouble On The Scalp

Skin Dried and Cracked and Hair Fell Out—Cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Eczema is annoying and distressing at any time, but doubly so when it gets into the scalp and causes the hair to fall out. Here is a grateful letter from a lady who was cured by using Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mrs. Hector Currie, Tobermory, Ont., writes:—"I was cured of a disagreeable skin disease of the scalp by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. The trouble started with itching and pain in the scalp, the skin would get dry and crack, and at times would bleed, and the hair would fall out. I tried three doctors without benefit, and suffered for three years. Reading in the almanac about Dr. Chase's Ointment, I began its use, and am now completely cured. The hair has grown again, and I am as well as I ever was. You are at liberty to use this letter, for I am glad to recommend so excellent a treatment.

Dr. Chase's Ointment has no rival as a cure for itching skin disease.

Cannot Sit in Commons.

A peer of the realm cannot sit in the British House of Commons; his place is in the Upper House, and there he must sit, no matter how anxious he may be to occupy a seat in the Commons. Being a peer, Lord Rosebery, when Premier, had no voice in the doings of the Lower House, but was compelled to sit in the House of Lords. He could, of course, attend the Commons and watch the proceedings from the Peers' Gallery, but he could not address the House or take part in the debates or votes.

Argyll Leaves Papers.

The late Duke of Argyll left a great mass of papers of various descriptions and, it is believed, ample material will be found therein to compile the story of his life when the time comes for this work to be taken in hand.

He also left several unpublished essays, and these ultimately may be published in volume form.

An authorised biography, however, is not likely to make its appearance for two or three years.

THE ROAD TO FAME.

The road to fame is long and steep.
No coward feet can stand it.
None but the brave the way can keep;
None but the brave command it.
No weakling ever gains the height.
However much he yearns to;
For he, when obstacles affright,
The paths of ease returns to.

The road to fame is long and rough,
And only brave men make it.
Men who can stand to each rebuff
And undiscouraged take it.
No coward feet can tread the way
Where fame is brightly shining.
Its glories are for men today
Who suffer without whining.

Curious Nesting Place.

A thrush has built its nest, laid three eggs, and in the natural course of events will, if undisturbed, rear its young on a scaffold pole at the secondary school for girls which is being erected in St. George's avenue, Northampton, Eng. The nest has been built at the junction of two poles. There are between fifty and sixty men working on the building, but the bird takes not the slightest notice of them. The men have taken a great interest in the bird, and will not have it disturbed.

Accomplished Miner.

At Tylorstown, in South Wales, lives a most versatile miner. For the last seven years, so the story goes, he has lived entirely on milk, fruit, and eggs, with a little fish occasionally, and he has the finest muscular development imaginable. He makes his own clothes, plays the 'cello and four other musical instruments, and is an extremely clever black and white artist. Each day he goes down the pit, taking with him only a pint bottle of cold water, which while he works is all that passes his lips. The ambition of his life is to become an actor.

A Great Painter's Love Story.

Turner's love story is tragic. Somewhere about the year 1797, while the great painter was still at school at Margate, Eng., he fell deeply in love with the sister of one of his school fellows. The intimacy grew and continued, and a few days later Turner proposed and was accepted. Then he went away for a couple of years to pursue his art studies, and during all that time not a message or a letter came from him. The young lady was hurt and offended at such cruel treatment, and under the smart of neglect and pressure from an unkind stepmother she accepted another suitor. Within a week of the day fixed for the wedding Turner returned. He obtained an interview and pleaded his cause passionately, but the girl refused to listen to any explanation.

BAD COLD IN THE CHEST.

"I am happy to tell you that I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and was promptly cured of a very bad cold in the chest," writes Miss Josephine Gauthier, Dover South, Ont. You can depend on Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine to relieve and cure all inflammations and irritations of the throat and bronchial tubes.

Buying out of Season

MANY buyers of every class of merchandise come to decisions with respect to their plans and purchases during the summer months.

Aware of their needs they are responsive to influences, appeals and opportunities, months in advance of the season of their necessities.

An advertiser who withdraws his messages to the buyers of his wares during the summer months chills buying ardor and postpones and endangers the gathering of the fruit of his manufacturing labor.

The buyer's resistance strengthens, and the buying impulse subsides, by the withdrawal or weakening of the pressure of advertising. The restoration of adequate pressure later on is accomplished at a cost which represents no saving in advertising bills, and the chances are that many sales have been hopelessly lost in the meantime.

The buying impulse which expresses itself in pre-season buying is capable of stimulation, and it is good business on the part of advertisers to maintain during the summer months their customary newspaper announcements.

You can obtain helpful advice on advertising free of cost and without obligation by consulting the Business Department of The EVENING EXAMINER.

The Attractive Programme for The Western Fair, London, September 11th to 19th.

Arrangements have all been completed for the free attractions at the Exhibition in September. They will be of a very high class this year and should certainly be very satisfactory.

The Canadian Royal Dragoons will give their famous "Musical Ride" on the track before the Grand Stand every afternoon and evening. This act of itself will be well worth the price of admission. A few others will be Patrick and Fransico, the New York Hippodrome Haywagon Act, the funniest act on the road; the four Dordens, the sensation of the day; De Carno, a new feature, the most daring act ever seen; The Pichisnni Troupe, seven people, the most graceful and sensational act ever seen at the Exhibition; The Melvin Bros., America's greatest gymnasts; Apdale's Zoo, the most wonderful animal act in existence to-day. Every child within reach of London should see this act.

The fireworks will be furnished by the International Fireworks Co. of New York and will be entirely new and novel. The entire programme will be changed each evening. There will be plenty of music by the best available bands. The programme throughout will be one of the best which money can furnish and will be put on each afternoon and evening in a manner that will be pleasing to the visitors of the great Exhibition.

Linking Up Vancouver With Main Line of G.T.P.

Splendid progress is being made on the construction of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway, which will link up the City of Vancouver.

The Pacific Great Eastern is at the present time operating a suburban train service between North Vancouver Ferry Landing at Lonsdale Ave., and Dundarave, West Vancouver, a distance of five miles. Early next month they expect to extend this service to Horseshoe Bay, about thirteen miles from the ferry landing. They are also at the present time carrying traffic between Squamish, at the head of Howe Sound, and Cheakamus, a distance of about eleven miles.

The track on this latter section is now being extended northerly. Grading between the end of track and Lillooet, where the line crosses the Fraser River, one hundred miles north of Vancouver, is practically finished, but on account of unfinished bridging it is not expected that track will be into Lillooet before late in the fall of this year.

The entire balance of the line between Lillooet and Prince George is under contract, and it is expected that a force of 6,000 men will be employed to insure the earliest possible completion of the work. It is impossible to say yet when the line will be finished, although the engineers hope to have the line to Prince George graded by the end of this year.

GOOD FISHING AT STONEY LAKE; MANY CATCHES MADE

STONEY LAKE, July 4—The following fish tale hails from Baschink, and the Messrs. McKinney will vouch for its correctness.

Two ardent disciples of the rod dropped their anchor in front of a summer home, occupied by a lady and her daughter, on one of the many narrow channels that abound in Boschink.

Their minnows had scarcely touched the water when a hungry monster bass swallowed one of the tiny treasures with fatal results. One of the young ladies had witnessed the remarkable performance and loudly applauded from the shore. Seeing that the fish had been caught in her "front yard," so to speak, the two heroes very gallantly handed their prize over to the maiden, who was more profuse in her thanks. In her excitement she was careful to explain that her mother (who was absent) was a most enthusiastic fisherman, and she would certainly be out the next morning for "she had brought up a worm in a bottle."

Mr. and Mrs. J. Carlisle spent a few days in Peterborough.

Mr. Jones of Toronto has built a cottage in the first bay north of Boschink.

Mr. Rathbone's new cottage presents a splendid appearance on the points next to Mr. Chas. Crawford.

Mr. R. S. Henderson has had a new boathouse, wharf and float built to the left of his bungalow towards Mt. Julian.

Mrs. J. S. Knapman, Misses Alma, Irene and Ruth, Master Jack, Harold and H. P. Smith are settled for the season at "Forest Home."

Mr. Henry Sutherland of Toronto spent a few days at his cottage "Inglestane."

Dr. Zimmerman and Mr. Frank Edmand caught a ten-pound lunge while trolling.

Police Magistrate Dumble and Mrs. Johnston, returned to Peterborough on Dominion Day after spending a few days at their cottage, Boschink.

Mrs. J. E. Donell has opened "Kilkenny Resort" for the summer.

Judge Rogers' cottage, on Juniper, has been opened for the summer.

Mr. J. W. McKinney of Sewickley, Pa., and his brother, W. J. of Orange, N. J., are most persistent fishermen. Regularly every morning, at eight, a launch takes them out, and brings them back at noon. Once more they try their luck after lunch and ply their hobby till supper time. Splendid results has attended their efforts. They are residing at the Victoria House, McCracken's Landing.

Mr. Fred Dwyer of Toronto has taken the Fitzgerald cottage, Sandy Point, for the entire season.

Mr. George Blackmore and family of Toronto, have arrived at their new cottage, Kawartha Park.

Mr. Noble of Toronto, a friend of Mr. Edmand, has pitched his tent near the new Government Wharf, Kawartha Park Folly.

GETTING A START

By NATHANIEL C. FOWLER JR.

(Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

KEEPING STRAIGHT.

The apparent, not real, worldly success of dissipated men, and of those who voluntarily injure their bodies and minds by one or several forms of dissipation, should not be considered as an excuse for leading other than a normal and moral life.

Not one of these dissipated successes owes any part of his achievements to loose living, and all of them would have done better financially, as well as in other ways, if their personal habits had been exemplary.

Every form of dissipation and every small and large vice, are maintained at a definite and positive cost, dwarfing the activity of the brain and interfering with the normal action of every physical function.

It is true that some men seem to be able to go to almost any excess and maintain their equilibrium. Mark the word "seem," for no one can practice any vice with impunity. Sooner or later he will pay the penalty.

Any excess, whether it be a vice or too strenuous exercise, is maintained at the cost of body and brain. One of the greatest of the world's physical directors told me recently that comparatively few athletes do not suffer from over-training, although many of them do not realize that they have injured themselves until after they have passed middle life. Dissipation, of course, is far more disastrous than undue training.

The drunken employer has no respect for his kind. He despises them and himself in his sober moments. Further, he will not keep an employe who is dissipated. He may go farther and demand personal purity on the part of those who work for him.

The dishonest merchant will not retain an employe who is not as honest as he, the employer, is dishonest.

Extravagance, although legal, is morally criminal, and there is nothing which prejudices an employer more against his employes than extravagance on their part, even though it may be confined to little things.

Stripping the moral side from the question, it pays, and pays financially, to live straight and to refuse to allow either the body or the mind to be affected, dwarfed, or injured by any form of dissipation.

Good personal habits are assets in business, encourage promotion, and stand for ultimate success.

Late dinners, several dances a week, and everything else which keeps one up at night and overstrains the body or the mind, contribute toward probable downfall.

While doing right for the sake of being right should be the principal motive governing one's conduct, nothing is more foolish or wrong than deliberately and voluntarily to injure the body, and consequently the mind, by any excess, by any form of dissipation, or by anything for which nature has an abhorrence.

Improper food, lack of sleep, and ventilation, and insufficient exercise, will wreck the body almost as rapidly as will excessive drinking.

If you don't take care of yourself, if you don't live straight, you will pay the penalty in business and out of it.

Nature never forgives or forgets, and never pardons any one who breaks her laws.

Aviator Crashes Into Canyon.

ANGELES CAMP, Cal., July 6.—Arthur Rybitsky of San Francisco, an aviator, was killed Saturday when his aeroplane was caught in an aerial eddy above the canyon.

The machine was swept into a pine forest ... the mountains and spectators could hear Rybitsky crying out. He fell to the ground through trees and was frightfully mangled.

U. S. Minister Must Resign.

PHILADELPHIA, July 6. — President Wilson has requested the resignation of George F. Williams, U. S. Minister to Greece and Montenegro, as a result of Mr. Williams' public statements regarding the situation in Albania.

Fire at Bolton.

BOLTON, July 6.—Fire destroyed the Wm. Dick Industry Saturday. Loss $25,000, with about $5,000 insurance. It is supposed fire began in the engine, as casting had been under way Friday night. Ten hands are affected.

NOBLEMEN SLIGHTED.

But They Went to the Funeral With Out Invitations.

VIENNA, July 6. — The restricted number invited to the funeral service over the late Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his wife, in the imperial court chapel Saturday, although attributed solely to the limited accommodation, gave great umbrage to many titled friends of the couple, who were not invited.

As a protest against their seclusion about 120 members of the noblest families in Austria and Hungary, some of them being privy councillors and court chamberlains, and nearly all holding court offices, decided to march in the funeral procession from the Hofburg to the railroad station. This coming to the ears of Prince Montenuovo, chamberlain of the emperor and court, he hastily summoned a Ministerial Council to decide upon what action should be taken to prevent a demonstration, but the council, when informed that the nobles concerned would resign their office if interfered with, decided to do nothing. Consequently, when the nobles appeared, many of them wearing their official uniforms, the police made way, and allowed them to fall in immediately behind the hearse.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

It is stated in Vancouver that there is no foundation for the report from Ottawa that British Columbia provincial elections may be called this summer.

John P. Pearson, a Kildera man, was drowned while in bathing near Cameron Island, some 40 miles out on Lake of the Woods. The body was recovered.

Some time Friday night burglars effected an entrance into the rear into James P. Richardson's grocery and food store at Hiora and rifled the till. Later an auto was stolen.

Mr. Rudyard Kipling has declined an invitation by the Hereford Liberal Unionist Association to contest the constituency at the next election on the retirement of Mr. Percy Collings.

Official returns show that R. McCormick (Lib.) is elected member of the Ontario Legislature for East Lambton by two majority, instead of Dr. J. B. Marten (Con.), as first reported.

A flood in the Ohio Valley, more disastrous than even the one last year, is predicted by the officials of the Federal Geological Survey, unless a general effort is made to control the surplus water in that region.

Six Grand Trunk train crews with headquarters at Brockville have been notified to report for duty at Ottawa. The reason is the rush of grain from Depot Harbor east, and the men are required to handle the extra traffic.

NOT WANTED ON SHIP.

Gurdit Singh Refuses To Receive the Hindus Who "Squealed."

VANCOUVER, July 6.—When five Hindus who were permitted to go in a Government immigration launch Friday from the Komagata Maru to parley with three local Hindus in regard to better food conditions turned to board their own boat again they found the gang plank drawn up, and Gurdit Singh, the leader, refused to permit them to go aboard, claiming that they were playing traitors in complaining to the local Hindus of the food on the boat. The immigration officers had to bring the five to the detention shed here. Three attempts have been made to put them back on the Komagata Maru, but the Hindus on the vessel refuse to allow them to get on, threatening to kill them. The trouble arose when the five complained to their friends here that Gurdit Singh, head of the band of 375 trying to land in Canada from the Japanese boat, was not giving them decent food.

VERY FEW VOTED.

Another Election in Mexico Proves a Fiasco.

MEXICO CITY, July 6. — Yesterday's elections passed almost unnoticed. Your correspondent, between the hours of 10 and noon, made a round of several polling booths. At none was a single voter seen and at some not one vote had been cast up to the time of your correspondent's visit. The maximum number of votes cast at any of the booths visited was seven. The votes cast for the President were distributed among Huerta, who seems to have polled the most votes in Mexico City; Blanquet, Federico Gamboa, De la Barra, Augustin Rodriguez and Emilio Rabasa (the Mexican delegates), Nicolas Zuniga, Y. Miranda, and some persons like Licentiado Gabriel Ormaechea, who are not even known to the general public.

The general indifference of the public was greater than in the case of the elections held on Oct. 26 last, when a fair number of votes were polled here.

MADE HIS ESCAPE FROM COUNTY JAIL

John Clarke, Sentenced to Six Months in Central, Leaves Through Bar of Window and Escapes By Aid of Sheet.

SECOND IN 45 YEARS

John Clarke, who was sentenced to six months in Central Prison for theft by Magistrate Dumble, last week, made good his escape from the jail on Saturday night, about 8.30. The prisoner was being kept here until an official was sent down from the Central Prison to take him to Toronto, and had been doing carpenter work around the jail. Being short of men Jailer Nesbitt had taken the cook out to do some work and put Clarke in his place as cook in the kitchen. In some manner the prisoner obtained a saw or some other equally good instrument for cutting steel and in the only window in the kitchen he sawed off one of the small upright bars and through a very small opening he managed to get out of the window. Then he had a sheet tied to one of the top bars of the same window and by the aid of this he was able in some unaccountable way to get it fixed to the window above or to the high wall which runs around the jail yard, for the purpose of preventing prisoners from escaping if they do break jail. Clarke must have climbed up the sheet and then got on the wall from which he dropped to freedom for the time being.

The prisoner picked a most opportune time for escaping as Jailer Nesbitt and Turnkey Ray were at their tea, after having seen to the feeding of the prisoners.

How he obtained the sheet may be explained by the fact that every Saturday the bedding of the prisoners is taken out to the Jail yard for an airing and Clarke must have smuggled one of the sheets into the kitchen for his escape; but where he obtained the tool to saw off the iron bar is still a mystery.

Before he escaped the prisoner sprung the lock on the room where their clothes are put, where they put on their prison garb, and thus he is at large in ordinary clothes.

This is the second escape of a man from the local jail in the forty-five years' service of Jailer Nesbitt, which speaks well for him. The other man who escaped, ten years ago, was only at large for a week, when he was captured in Lindsay.

All the Chiefs of Police in the surrounding country are being given particulars, with a description and picture of the escaped man and no doubt he will be taken into custody soon.

Army Worm Is Causing Havoc

LONDON, Ont., July 6—The dreaded army worm has made its appearance in several districts and has already caused a loss of many thousands of dollars to onions, oats, and other products. The onion growers are fighting the pest successfully with Paris green and molasses.

FUNERAL OF CHAMBERLAIN

Memorial Service Was Held in Westminster Simultaneously With the Funeral

HIS LAST MESSAGE

Examiner Special:

BIRMINGHAM, Eng., July 6—After impressive services to-day the body of the late Joseph Chamberlain was interred here at Key Hill cemetery. All Birmingham stood in respectful silence as the body of the dead statesman was borne to the Unitarian Church, at which the services were held.

At the same time memorial services were being held in Westminster, London, attended by the King's representatives and statesmen.

The Unionists and tariff reformers have seized the opportunity of Chamberlain's death to make a vigorous campaign for their cause. Millions of leaflets were distributed Sunday bearing his last message to the followers regarding an Empire policy. He said: "Yield nothing; fight it out to the end. Your cause cannot fail, because it is based on imperishable principles of British unity. Do not bother much about tactics, but whether you win sooner or later, depends on your tenacity."

LONDON, ENG., July 6. — The Commons adjourned this afternoon out of respect to the memory of the late Joseph Chamberlain. In a brief eulogy Premier Asquith lauded his dead lifelong political opponent as the "pioneer commoner of a new generation." Other leaders in the Commons paid tributes.

ANNIE LOUISE CARY

And Her Favourite "Robin Adair"

The indisputable queen of song in her day was Annie Louise Cary. She was one of the world's famous contraltos when she retired from the operatic stage at the very height of her career in opera. She retained the sweet, wholesome characteristics of the American girl all during her musical triumphs. She made her debut in Copenhagen, although she studied in Milan. For three years she delighted European audiences before making her appearance in America. For over twelve years, with the exception of a brief European tour, she delighted American audiences with the charms of her voice and personality. But to hear her sing "Robin Adair," that simple old song, and that masterpiece of Arthur Sullivan's "The Lost Chord," and Longfellow's "The Day is Done," with the rich tones of the happy, good-natured personality that always charmed, she always left the audience breathless and spellbound.

"Robin Adair," "The Lost Chord," and many other favourites of Cary, are to be found in "Heart Songs," now being distributed to the readers of this paper. See Coupon elsewhere in this issue for terms.

There was such a demand for the Heart Songs that we had to discontinue inserting the coupon. We have now on hand a further supply, and the coupon will run for two weeks. If you desire a copy, save the coupons and together with 98c. you will get a $3.00 book.

AN APPEAL FOR ST. GEORGE'S

To the Editor of The Examiner,—

Dear Sir,—I noticed in your paper of Saturday last the announcement of a garden party and sale of work to be held at St. George's Church grounds, Braidwood Avenue, on Thursday next. May I appeal to my fellow English Church people in the City to help the South-enders in this effort. Certainly no church deserves greater support than St. George's. Although the congregation is made up entirely of genuine working men (there is not even a storekeeper among its members) yet they have raised for church extensions over two thousand dollars in the past 15 months and have had the pluck to start another mission in the West End. If this sort of work does not appeal to the hearts and pockets of the well-to-do English Church people in the City it is difficult to know what will do it.

The case of the Barr Register Company of Trenton vs. Mrs. Neill of Havelock, was heard in the County Court this afternoon. In this action the Barr Register Company, who claim to have sold Mrs. Neill an account register, are suing for $80, the price of the register. Mrs. Neill has refused to pay and in defence submits that there was misrepresentation on the part of the Company when they sold her the register in question. She claims that she ordered and wanted a Caskey Register, and that it was on the understanding that the one she was buying was of this particular make that she accepted it. Later she claims to have discovered that it was a Barr Register and on that grounds refused to pay for it.

Messrs. Peck, Barr and McElderry are acting for the plaintiffs, and Mr. D. O'Connel for the defendant, and the case was argued before His Honour Judge Huycke this morning.

CALLING ON THE POOR.

"Did you call on those poor people?"

"Oh, yes," answered the amateur welfare worker.

"And what do they need?"

"Well, I didn't go inside. The house looked so fearfully squalid that I just left cards."

HAS RETURNED FROM CHIEFS' CONVENTION

Chief Thompson is Back From the Annual Gathering Held This Year at Winnipeg

VALUABLE POINTS

Chief Thompson, head of the local Police Force, returned yesterday from the Annual Convention of Canadian Chief Constables held at Winnipeg recently. Chief Thompson left on the 20th of June, and reports that the convention was an exceedingly interesting and valuable one. The membership showed an increase of seventeen, and a number of excellent papers given. Several discussions on the points brought out in the papers were treated fully by those present, and resulted in considerable light being thrown on subjects that have been heretofore more or less a problem to the Canadian and other Chiefs of Police.

The officers for the ensuing year were elected, and it was decided to hold the next convention in Vancouver. The election of officers were elected as follows:

President—Col. Sherwood, Ottawa.
Vice-Pres.—Chief Cuddy, Calgary.
Sec.-Treas.—Dep. Chief Stark, Toronto.

Executive Committee—Chief Redmond, Nova Scotia; Chief Trudell, Quebec; Chief Bruce, Ottawa; Chief Thompson, Peterborough, and Chief McPherson, Winnipeg.

Besides being elected to the executive committee, Chief Thompson fathered a motion that may result in considerable change in the prosecution of criminals in Canada. He moved that the convention aply to have the law changed so that ugerprints of criminals could be used to prove their previous conviction. This passed unanimously, and as a result the matter was left with the executive, who were instructed to push the matter to the limit. Should the law be changed as requested, it will make a considerable difference in the punishment of criminals. Ontario was not largely represented at the convention.

Chief Thompson said to the Examiner this morning that the City of Winnipeg has an exceptionally well-conducted police force. The city is very busy, and has a large foreign population, a large number of whom at present are out of work. The signalling system that is used by the police department in Winnipeg is the finest in the world and cost in the neighborhood of $675,000. A demonstration was given during the convention and in 14 minutes the policemen on the various beats of the city were all spoken to from the central station.

The central station had a short term detention room for drunks and "disorderlies," where men who are sentenced to a week or more are kept. They do the kitchen work for the station, and are consequently self-supporting. The Winnipeg police force is one of the finest in the Dominion. At the time the murderer Krefchenko escaped from the toils six policemen were notified of his departure in the space of four minutes.

The Chief also said a few words for the city and citizens, who accorded the Chief Constables a splendid reception. They were shown round the city in autos, were entertained at the Country Club and given a splendid farewell banquet. The convention for this year, according to the Chief's opinion, was successful, not only from the standpoint of the number who attended, but also for the excellent papers and discussions on live topics that were introduced.

Conservative Executive In Session

Matters in Connection With Recent Election Straightened Out

The Executive Committee of the West Peterborough Conservative Association met on Saturday evening in Messrs. Ruddy & Burnham's office, nearly all the members being present.

Reports and complaints having reached this Executive Committee to the effect that there were dissentions in the party due to allegations of irregularities of procedure in selecting a candidate for the late provincial election, your Executive Committee wishes to report that it has gone into the whole question from the beginning and its findings are:

1. That a meeting held on May 18th, filling vacancies on the Executive at Mr. Peck's office, for the purpose of and for selecting a date and place for holding the convention. After the business of the meeting was over, Mr. Peck then informed the Executive Committee that he would not be a candidate at the coming election. Much surprise and regret was expressed by all present, and Mr. Peck was then urged by those present to reconsider his decision, which he agreed to do, and was to inform the secretary on the following day.

2. As agreed Mr. Peck informed the secretary, on the following day, that after further consideration he had decided he would not be the candidate.

3. On the following Friday, May 22nd, Mr. Peck informed the Secretary that he had decided to become a candidate, and would offer himself at the convention, and further made the announcement in the Review on the following Saturday, May 23rd.

4. That the Committee find that the submission of names, the selection of delegates, the voting and all other matters concerning the convention were conducted regularly. The candidate chosen by the delegates was duly announced and became the candidate of the party for election, and was approved of by the Executive at Toronto.

5. That no objection was made at the time of the convention by any candidates or anybody on their behalf, nor has any charge of irregularity been made by any candidate since.

6. That your Committee therefore issues the statement for the information of the Conservatives of West Peterborough and for the purpose of setting at rest any reports that may be circulated of a contrary character, through mistake or otherwise. If the majority is entitled to rule, it did so in this case, and no complaint of discourtesy or lack of due consideration or impropriety is well founded.

7. We further recommend that Mr. Peck and Mr. Soden be requested to sign this statement if satisfactory, also the President and Secretary of the Association, and that copies of this report be sent to the press for publication.

JAMES KENDRY,
President, W.P.L.C.A.
FRANK ADAMS,
Secretary W.P.L.C.A.
R. J. SODEN, Candidate.

I approve of above statement of facts.

E. A. PECK.

12,000 Workmen Are On Strike

Special to The Examiner:

WOOLWICH, ENG., July 6.—Some 12,000 workmen at the arsenal here are on strike to-day as a protest against the dismissal of one of their number said to be active in union organization.

JUDGMENT IN HINDU CASE

Courts of British Columbia Will Give Decision To-day in Matter of Great Interest

RELY ON DOHERTY

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, July 6. — This is judgment day in British Columbia. The courts of that province will this afternoon give a decision in the case of the Hindus who have been exercising their British citizenship for the past two months aboard a Japanese ship in Vancouver harbour. If the judges at Vancouver to-day decide that the habeas corpus shall issue in the case of the Hindus, officials here feel that there is only one hope left. Judge Doherty, Minister of Justice, is acting Minister of the Interior too. He spent many years on the bench himself and the immigration officials believe that he will be able to walk around the decision in Vancouver to-day if it does not suit him.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

MONDAY, JULY 6, 1914

HE OUGHT TO KNOW.

(Saskatoon Phoenix.)

The attitude of the Conservative party seems to be that if they cannot get the Senate packed with men pledged to protection, bounties and subsidies they will do what they can to spoil equitable representation in the House of Commons. Didn't a Conservative once say that the Conservative party was an organized hypocrisy?

ARGENTINA'S PLEDGE WITH CHILI.

(Regina Leader.)

Some years ago war threatened between Argentina and Chili as the result of a boundary dispute. Their differences were composed by arbitration and the event was celebrated in a fashion peculiarly striking. Cannon cast for use in the war were melted down and shaped into a gigantic figure of Christ. This monument was placed conspicuously on a natural elevation on the frontier lately in dispute and upon its base in letters of enduring brass, this solemn pledge was emblazoned:

"Sooner shall these mountains crumble into dust than that Chileans and Argentinans break the peace which, at the feet of Christ the Redeemer, they have sworn to maintain."

A GREAT PITCHING FORCE.

(Montreal Herald-Telegraph).

Meanwhile there will be nothing but appreciation of the work which Mr. Rowell is doing in the reconstruction of the Liberal party. His splendid energies and great gifts of mind and heart have been placed unreservedly at the disposal of the party. If he has least made them to victory on this occasion, he has at least made them once more a great fighting force in the Province, and has sown the seeds which will lead to a great harvest later on. The Whitney Government formerly posed as the advocates of temperance. Their insincerity has been exposed on this occasion by their alliance with the liquor interests — an alliance that doubtless will weigh like a millstone around their necks as long as they remain in power.

FLYING THE ATLANTIC.

(Montreal Herald.)

When we had an aviation meet in Montreal four years ago it was generally agreed that aeroplanes, while extremely entertaining, would not have a very wide sphere of practical usefulness. To-day plans are being made for crossing the Atlantic by means of the aeroplane, or rather hydro-aeroplane, and none au fait with the progress of aviation now doubt for a moment that the time is within measurable distance when, by means of the aeroplane, the Atlantic will be crossed in the daylight of one day.

Whether Lieut. Porte succeeds in crossing the Atlantic in Rodman Wanamaker's transatlantic flier or not, that feat will now soon be accomplished, for already aeroplanes in Europe, if not on this continent, have met successfully all the trials of speed and endurance necessary to that daring enterprise. It is 1,900 miles from land to land, and machines are already flying at the rate of 135 miles an hour, so that the whole journey could be accomplished in something like twelve hours. Machines have already kept in the air for over eighteen hours. As the hydro-aeroplanes increase in size they will increase in speed, for greater speed means greater safety in the air, as it makes the machine more easily manageable.

The only real obstacle confronting the Atlantic fliers to-day is the problem of carrying enough gasoline. This is the problem with which Curtiss has been wrestling in the America. He has to make it carry a load of 1,900 pounds. He says he has accomplished this and if he has not, it is certain others will. Possibly for some years, however, this difficulty will hold back the progress of Atlantic flight. But sooner or later Atlantic flight will become common, and nothing would aid so much in doing this as the success of experiments which scientists are even now engaged in, namely the application of wireless power as the driving force of aeroplanes. Let the Atlantic be but crossed once with a flying machine, and it will not be many years before a regular daily service will be established—a service that will not be interrupted by fogs or storms at sea, since the machine will be able to fly around or over the fog or storm areas. It may not be, in the title of Kipling's prophetic story, "With the night mail to Quebec," but it will be "With the morning mail to London."

THE MONEY BEHIND.

The exposures which have been made in New York of the part taken in the Mexican revolution by Wall Street financiers are having a profound effect upon the American public, says the Montreal Telegraph. Sordid stories are being told, with documentary evidence to support them, of how greed has capitalized the marauding instincts of the peons and made them pawns in a bloody struggle. More and more is the conviction being expressed that the United States Government blundered when it assumed the direction of internal affairs in Mexico, and even a sober journal like the Philadelphia Public Ledger now says that the mediation proceedings at Niagara Falls "will be a success so far as we are concerned if they no more than give us an excuse for withdrawing from the situation." There are many things of strange purport in this fight. President Wilson watchfully waited for months for Huerta's power to crumble away, but the expected financial embarassment did not materialize. On this point the Public Ledger says:

If Huerta's tenacity were not an evidence of vigorous financial support from private sources, the magnificent equipment of Villa's Army, his efficient hospital corps, his parks of artillery, his well-filled arsenals arouse strong suspicion. The Constitutionalists did not lack money even when they controlled but a small and poverty-stricken section of the country. Not until they took Tampico did they tap a financial reservoir, yet their coffers were always filled. Never did a revolutionary movement in such short time accumulate so vast a fortune. Confiscation will not explain it, for guns cannot be purchased with confiscated lands. The movement has been financed and very generously financed by some group outside of Mexico—and there is no record of bond or any other flotations.

It will be a sad blow for President Wilson's humane principles if all the anxious course he has steered in regard to Mexico should result in nothing but withdrawal and the effort to assure some sort of real self-government in Mexico. But his best advisers seem to be coming round to the view that there is no other alternative.

ERIE, Pa., July 4.—Erie took both ends of the holiday double bill from Peterborough to-day, winning the first game 4 to 0, and the second 5 to 2. Umpire McPartlin came in for a good deal of criticism from the Peterborough team and both contests were marred by constant wrangling. In the end the second game was played under protest by Manager Blount and King and Kelly were fined for back talk. The scores:

BRITISH MAILS

Mail for transmission to Europe, is despatched from this city every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, and matter is received until midnight. Four mails a day are closed out at the Post Office, for transhipment to Great Britain. 6-tf.

Lacrosse Meeting Wednesday Night

A meeting of the executive and friends of the Lacrosse Club is called for Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock in the Oriental Hotel. All those interested are requested to be present.

PRACTICE OF LACROSSE TEAM TUESDAY NIGHT

All the members of the Lacrosse team are requested to report for practice at the Riverside Park on Tuesday evening. Although the team has not met with encouragement except from one or two sources in the city, yet it has no desire to drop out. It has a chance but it is a very small one, of still winning out. The Hastings team would have to show a decided reversal of form and just now it looks to be the class of the league. The locals have not had one good gate, while Hastings has several hundred dollars to the good, and Norwood is also on easy street. Many of thel ocal players have returned to the game with the sole idea of putting it before the people again. The executive desires to finish the season, especially in a district where all the towns are smaller than this.

GOLF

The draws for the Men's Championship have resulted as follows:

D. Mulholland vs. F. M. Dela Fosse.
B. Hamilton vs. G. Bennett.
W. C. Ackerman vs. Dr. Gowan.
D. Laurie vs. P. Ritchie.
Byes—C. Pennyfather, R. M. Hamilton; T. F. Matthews, R. Cameron.

The first games to be played by Saturday, July 11th.

The Millbrook Golfers are going to play the Peterborough team at the local links to-morrow.

THE PETES PLAY ERIE HERE TO-DAY

The Petes returned from Erie today at noon and play the first game of the week's home stand at Riverside Park this afternoon. On the road trip of nine games they failed to get an even break, losing and winning two at Brantford and losing three and winning two at Erie. The Sailors will be here for the first three days of the week, followed by the Toronto Beavers. To-morrow will be ladies' day and the fair sex will be admitted free. The games the first three days of the week will commence at 4.15 o'clock.

BASEBALL.

The C.G.E. Red Caps will practice at Riverside Park to-night and to-morrow night.

The Red Caps and De Laval will meet in a Mercantile League game at Riverside Park at 6:45 p.m. on Wednesday.

VALUE OF AN IDEA

When Gutenberg, the inventor of the printing-press, told Faust, the capitalist, of the long years of toil and labour through which he had passed to perfect his machine, Faust, amazed at his exercise of will-power, exclaimd, "You must have had a world of perseverance!" To which Gutenberg replied, "When one gets on the track of an idea it is hard to give is up."

It is a splendid thing to get on the track of an idea. An idea is a great instrument for the man who knows how to handle it skilfully. It is well for a man to test his own mental power and force. It is a fine thing for a man to know the power of his own will.

McGraw's Young Recruit Fielder Makes Great Start

(By Robert L. Ripley.)

A luck "Strike" in this "Star"—A lucky strike for McGraw. Davis Robertson of Portsmouth, Virginia, sah, is the greatest sensation since Ty Cobb broke into the big league. A few weeks ago the Wake Forest College of Medicine, N.C., closed its doors for the summer and Davis Robertson didn't have a thing to do but come up to New York and play right field for the Giants. In three days he had so established himself in the line-up and in the hearts of the fans that he may never be removed from either.

You have probably heard such talk before, particularly during the early part of the season, when so many young bears bounce from the Bushes into Big Time only to sizzle down to silence after a cyclonic start. But even if you have heard such language it will be worthy that you suspend judgment on what looks to be the most promising young player that ever looked in.

Dave is a big, loose, and easy sort of a fellow, with as finely set up body as ever graced a ball field. He is a Southerner — "yes suh, right much a rebel" as he says himself with that delightful soft accent of the sunny South. His home is now in Norfolk, but he was born just across the river in Portsmouth.

Robertson is just 23 years old and probably always will be about that age as old Father Time will find it mighty difficult to curb his boyish spirits. Robertson reminds me of Stanley Ketchel. He has "Steve's" disposition (but not necessarily his faults.) He is careless, reckless, fearless and "happy-go-lucky." As Ketchel was a natural fighter, so is Dave a natural ballplayer. He always could play ball. It is as natural for him to make a play as it is for him to eat his dinner. Worry? He doesn't know what that means. He is best termed "a regular guy." He does about as he pleases. If he feels like staying up after 10 o'clock he does so.

"Ah jus guess Ah always could play ball," drawled Dave. "Ah remembers when Ah first began to play. One time Ah went down to Elizabeth City, No'th Ca'lina fo' a visit with some friends, an' Ah got to playing ball an' Ah didn't get back fo a month. Ah was signed up with 'Lizabeth team befo' Ah knew Ah could play ball. After that Ah used to go down there to play when Ah wasn't going to school. Yo' see Ah was studying to be a Veterinary Doctor at th' No'th Ca'lina Agriculture & Mechanical College. Mah father didn't want no ball players in the family who played ball all the year 'round. So Ah went to school. Why, Ah have been signed up with the Giants fo' nearly four years! After going to the N. C. A. & M. C. Ah went to the Wake Forrest College of Medicine and studied human medicine. You see Ah was studying horse medicine befo'," and big Dave laughed. It was quite apparent that he was deeply interested in his studies.

"Yes, suh," he continued, "Ah does sure like medicine. Ah only has about 10 months more o' study and Ah can practice. Ah am going to live with Doctor Lloyd heah in New York and study in my spare time. He has kindly offered to allow me to witness his—"

"But tell us how you bat or something — not about operations and clinics," we interposed.

"Oh, Ah can't tell yo' how Ah bat. Ah don't know ma'self. Ah 'pes' hit 'em. That's all. But Ah does like big league pitching. Not that Ah thinks it is easier, because it isn't, but because a fellow doesn't have to worry about being beaned or cracked in the ribs like he does in the bushes, where the pitchers are wild. Ah don't want to get hit on na' shoulder again."

We might explain here that "Demon Dave" would have been a pitcher today if he had obeyed orders. When McGraw first signed the big fellow, he made him promise that he wouldn't play any more football. But the school spirit was too strong for Dave and he played in spits of his promise. He got through the season all right—all but the last game, and he got through the first half of that. But during the last half of the last game big Dave's shoulder was broken and he was completely ruined as a pitcher. He nearly gave up the game in despair, but McGraw sent him to Mike Finn in Mobile and made an outfielder out of him last year. He hit for .347 and was the league's sensation. He came to the Giants a few weeks ago.

"Demon Dave" he is now called (after his illustrious contemporary Demon Dug). Down in Mobile he was called "Old 37"; 37 was the name of a famous train that used to pass the ball grounds every day at 3:37 o'clock. By a strange coincident, it so happened that several times as the train was running past, Robertson was running around the bags on the ball grounds after hoisting the ball over the fence. It happened so often that the bleacherites dubbed him "Old 37."

COBB LEADING THE AMERICAN LEAGUE HITTERS

CHICAGO, Ill., July 4.—Ty Cobb, with a broken thumb, while his rivals slumped, put himself in first place among the batters of the American League, according to averages published here to-day. His percentage is .349. The next six batters in the American League are C. Walker, St. Louis, .343; Bawer, Philadelphia, .329; Crawford, Detroit, .324; Jackson, Cleveland, .323; E. Collins, Philadelphia, .314; Speaker, Boston, .301. The Athletic' lead includes batting with .261, and Detroit is second with .246.

E. Burns, of Philadelphia, is leading batter in the National league. His average for 24 games is .395. Next come Hummel, Brooklyn, .352; Dalton, Brooklyn, .339; Grant, New York, .337; Byrne, Philadelphia, .327; Becker, Philadelphia, .320; G. Burns, New York, .312. Philadelphia leads in team hitting with .267, and New York is second with .266.

In the Federal League, Charlie Carr, Indianapolis, continues the leader with .419; Indianapolis with .296, and Baltimore with .278 lead in club batting.

International League batters are following the pace set by Kritchell, Buffalo, who is hitting at a rate of .370. Next to him are Walsh, Rochester, .358; Cree, Baltimore, .345; Reynolds, Jersey City, .338; Derrick, Baltimore, .322; Gilhooley, Buffalo, .310; Schultz, Rochester, .318; P. Lame, Providence, .318; McIntyre, Providence, .317; Whitman, Montreal, .313.

Baltimore with .276, and Providence, with .260, are leaders in club batting. With twenty stolen bases, Gilhooley leads the base runners. Wagner, Toronto, and Britton, Newark, are pitchers credited with three wins and no defeats, and Bentley, Providence, has won four and lost one.

THE WAY THEY FELT ABOUT IT

"If that is the way you feel about it," she said, "we might as well consider our engagement at an end."

"I had no wish to give you pain," he replied, but there was nothing in his manner to indicate that he intended to fall upon his knees and beg her to forgive him.

"You have not given me pain," she coldly declared. "On the contrary, I am glad you are ready to have our affair terminated. I was afraid you might think me heartless when it became necessary for me to tell you that I had been mistaken in supposing that I ever cared for you."

"Why should I think you heartless for telling me that? We are all liable to make mistakes in such matters. The trouble is that too many people fail until it is too late to find out that they have been mistaken."

"I know, I'm so thankful that it has not been so in our case. I shall always have a friendly interest in your career."

"Thank you. I hope my career may not be absolutely uninteresting."

"Then you think you will have a career just the same?"

"O, I shall do my best."

"I'm so glad of that. I should hate to think that I had in any way interfered with your hopes or ambitions."

"Only a weakling would let any girl spoil his future."

"Yes, I feel sure of that. And only a silly girl would let any man deprive her of happiness."

"It is fortunate that our engagement was not announced. As it is, there will be no embarrassment for either of us."

"Will you take me home now, please?"

"Why be in a hurry? It is early. We may as well enjoy this evening together."

"Are you enjoying it?"

"I always enjoy myself when I am with you."

"You don't look as if you were very happy."

"Well, I consider it no more than polite to keep from looking jubilant. You are looking particularly radiant yourself."

"Thank you so much."

"Shall I call for your wraps?"

"If you are anxious to be rid of me."

"You asked me a moment ago to take you home. I told you I was in no hurry.

"Then let us wait awhile. It is so nice to sit here listening to the music."

"I wish they'd play something a little more cheerful. That piece makes me feel as if I were at a funeral."

"Well. Why couldn't you have acknowledged before that you were in the wrong? Let's go home now. I want to be alone with you."

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

INSPIRATIONAL SUCCESS

George B. Gifford, Standard Oil Chief: "Don't Be Afraid To Get Dirty"

It is entirely commonplace to tell a young man who hopes to succeed that he must work hard and save his money and keep himself filled with mercy and loving kindness. But G. B. Gifford, who is one of the managers of the Standard Oil Company in the State of New Jersey, adds another element to the formula.

"Don't," says Gifford, "be afraid to get dirty."

Gifford began on the capital of a 40-cent suit of overalls and a willingness to abide the peculiarly clinging variety of grease the S.O. Company manufactures. Because he has been rather extraordinarily successful he was asked the other day to talk to a class of young men who are engaged in gaining a business education. He didn't want to do it. Generally speaking, Standard Oil men have been encouraged to abjure the graces of conversation. But he consented.

"If you don't like your job," said Gifford, "work harder. Then you'll get another job all the quicker."

He had some portion of a high school education when he began work. That is, he entered high school when he was 12 years old, and managed to get back to school for parts of three more years. Then economic conditions began to pinch the Gifford neck. It wasn't that he merely needed a job—he had to have one. Having an eye to the future, he succeeded in getting into one of the machine shops of the S.O. Company, because he thought the chances for promotion were better with a larger corporation. But he didn't give that phase of his individual business situation much attention at the time. It was the immediate salary envelope at the end of the week that he was chiefly interested in. That was in '78.

Grease on College Cap.

Sweeping the floor of a machine shop is unpleasant for a youngster of 16 with a 16-year-old hankering for turned-up trousers and college caps. Gifford just swept all the harder. By and by he was promoted to another position which held a surplusage of muckiness. This time he was set to oiling shafting. After 10 months he became an apprentice in the machine shop. Perhaps—away inside of him—he had been ambitious, but he had never translated that ambition into action, except as he took pride in becoming a good machinist. But in the general he found the impetus he needed.

"The foreman of the general machine shop," "was an old man. He took an interest in me.

"'Be a good machinist first,' said he, 'but be something else second. The man who gets ahead knows.'"

It isn't particularly easy for the man who has put in an honest day's work in a machine shop to go to school at night. There are lager beer saloons, billiard academies, dances, and other methods by which time may be killed after the 6 o'clock whistle blows. Also, such a man is afraid to open his mouth after 8 o'clock at night for fear he betray himself by a yawn. Just the same Gifford went to night school, and caught up with that education he had been compelled to miss as a boy. There was a period of discouragement, for he stayed in that machine shop for nine years. It began to seem to him that he would never get out of it, but he kept hammering away. Then promotion began. One day he was made assistant superintendent.

"I'm through," the superintendent said one day. "I'm not going to spend my life in a greasy oil yard."

So Gifford took his place. The other steps followed in regular order. Gifford suggests that luck had a good deal to do with his climb—which modest reflection will hardly be concurred in—but that hard work had more to do with it. He holds that the way to get along is to beat your job to a frazzle. He hadn't been with the S. O. Company a year before he learned what real work is. The rule in that organization is that when one enters upon a job he does not leave until the job is through.

Believes in Education.

"Once," said he, "we were sent into the shaft tunnel of a steamship to make repairs. There are few places that are dirtier than a shaft tunnel. Also, it is very hot and noisy. We were somewhat cramped, for the tunnel was four feet by four feet by fourteen feet. We were there for four days, with only a few hours of sleep. No man ever crawled out of the tunnel until he couldn't hold his eyes open—and the moment that they opened again he crawled back."

He believes in education, which is quite natural for a man who fought for an education in the way he did. But he finds that the trouble with the average college-bred boy of to-day is that he has been too kindly treated all his life. He is afraid of hard knocks and black grease. He has a clothes-bred hankering for an office job, where he can keep his sleeves clean by wearing gingham arm aprons. The other day a graduate of Brown University came to him for work.

"Sorry," said Gifford briefly. "But I haven't a thing that is suitable for an educated man."

"Who," asked the Brown graduate, "said anything about a job for an educated man? I want a job for a man"

Gifford didn't take much stock in that talk. He had seen prettily tailored young men try grimy jobs before. But he was willing to take a chance. So she put that young man at work in the railroad yards, where cinders and calluses and raw inflections abound. Then he forgot about the young man. Next time he heard of him the Brown graduate was assistant yard foreman. Gifford is convinced that he is on his way up. He has accomplished a feat that Gifford is convinced is the hardest of all for the college man—he has forgotten to keep his clothes clean.

"But I havn't any particular advice to give young men starting in business," said the modest and reticient Gifford. "If they just keep batting away at their jobs—and bat all the harder if they don't like the jobs—they'll get along."

NEW MILLINERY IDEAS MAKE DEMAND ON LEGHORN HENS

(By Margaret Mason.)

Mary had a Leghorn hen
With feathers white as snow
She made a hat of it one day
A Leghorn hat you know.

NEW YORK, July 6.—The latest hat to be abreast of the millinery fashions is the breast of a bird. It is a close fitting little cap of white feather stuck up in front to wave in the breezes. It is supposed to be some highfalutin sort of a white pheasant, or other, but looks suspiciously like a common barnyard fowl. It is enough so to elicit the query from Mr. Johnsing, "Mr. Bones, when is a Leghorn hat not a Leghorn hat? When it's a Leghorn hen."

Anyway it is delightfully apropriate worn alike by both old hens or sprightly chickens. Though it is of feathers it is worn down on the head at a cocky angle. To be strictly up to date you've simply got to get one by fair means or fowl for it's truly a bird of a bonnet.

Another new hat effect in the wider brim models is the all over lace brim with crowns of either straw or velvet. There are charming topoffs to the filmy lingerie frock. One lovely combination is of sheerest white shadow lace for the wide brim of a crown of deep coloured straw garlanded with dull white satin foliage.

Another with a black lace brim has a soft full crown of black velvet with a delicate pink rose, a blue fringed gentian, a gardenia, a yellow daisy and a brown pansy set about the crown at artistic intervals.

A winsome hat of pink chiffon wreathed in white clover is ideal, wreathing a winsome face wreathed in smiles. That's the unspeakable tragedy of most hats; they are always found on the wrong faces.

There really are hats to fit every face; but where a lace brimmed hat will turn an ingenue face into a study by Greuze and one of the new feathered chapeaux make a piquant young person resemble a leader of the bird ballet, one's hatchet faced great aunt or a portly podge weighing 300 pounds on the hoof cannot affect either one of these models with anything the least bit like impunity.

Those cunning little half mast veils that reach with scant courtesy to the top of your nose are decidedly in favour especially when worn with the small sailor shapes and feather bonnets.

ALL READY FOR ANNUAL SOCIAL

All arrangements have been made for the annual lawn social at the Church of the Sacred Heart grounds on Tuesday, July 14. The ladies are preparing to furnish a grand supper, and other departments will be opened on as elaborate a scale. The stands and lights will be erected and installed on Friday night, and everything should be ready for Monday. The only doubtful element is the weather and it is expected that the favourable conditions of former years will be enjoyed.

Judgment Given For Plaintiff

In County Court, this afternoon, judgment was handed down by His Honour Judge Huycke in the case of Daniel Munro vs. Chas. Dewey, both of Havelock, which was heard some days ago. Judgment was given in favour of the plaintiff for $200 and costs.

Messrs. Gordon and Widdifield acted for the plaintiffs, and Messrs. Bennett and Goodwill for the defendant. The action was one in which the plaintiff was suing for rent of his farm and stock. The defendant entered a counter claim for damages, and failure to deliver stock. As noted above the judgment was given for the plaintiff.

MAN'S TRUE INHERITANCE

Written for the Christian Science Monitor

There seems to be a singular propensity on the part of the world at large to blame somebody else for its own mistakes. It seems to prefer to look without, rather than within, for the cause of all its troubles. Adam began this by shouldering the responsibility of his own shortcomings upon some one else, and the Adamic race or what Christian Science terms, "mortals," have been following his example in one form or another ever since. Children are condoned for certain unpleasant traits of character on the ground that these tendencies are inherited and that the child in consequence, should not be held responsible. These children, grown older, excuse themselves for errors in temperament or disposition by reiterating their educated belief that they cannot help doing so-and-so, because they were "born that way." But mortals sooner or later always pay the penalty for believing in their own humanly constructed laws and it sometimes happens that certain types of disease appear, which are also said to be inherited, and then one is brought up standing to see whereto his false conclusions have led him. For although one may secretly rather enjoy indulging a bad temper, for instance, on the ground that he inherited it, nobody enjoys being sick, and when this new aspect of affairs presents itself the individual is quite likely to stop and think as he has never thought before.

Materia medica tells the sick person, "You have this trouble because your father had it. You inherited it along with your disposition." But Christian Science says that no one needs to have a trouble because ones' father had it, any more than one needs to keep a bad disposition because one's father was ill-natured. There is but one law, and this is the law of God, and this law never compels the innocent to suffer for the guilty. Because a man once believed that two and two were five and never worked his problem correctly on account of that false belief, need his child at school, better instructed, make the same mistake? And when the teacher gently corrects the child by showing him the truth about two and two, would the child be excused for making the same mistake on the ground that his father did it If father did it and father paid the penalty for doing it is fathers' example a good one to follow? Let us be wiser than our fathers. We have more light to-day than they had and more is expected of us. We live in an age when it will no longer suffice to do anything—even to the contracting of a so-called fatal disease—simply and solely because one's ancestor had the same trouble.

Christ Jesus, upon whose teachings Christian Science is founded, once said, "Call no man your father upon the earth: for one is your Father, which is in heaven." "All things are created spiritually. Mind, not matter, is the creator. Love the divine Principle, is the Father and Mother of the universe, including man" (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, by Mary Eddy, p. 256). From this divine source is it not unthinkable that man should inherit any taint of sickness or sin? Divine Mind expresses nothing unlike itself consequently man, this Mind's complete expression, has only the consciousness of good, of harmony, immortality, holiness, wholeness. This consciousness, the Christ-conscience, is the only consciousness and it contains no element of discord of error.

Surely a more monstrous and pernicious doctrine was never foisted upon helpless humanity than the conclusion that somebody, somewhere, generations ago, forged the iron shackles that bind men to-day to the belief in inherited disease. That it is only a doctrine and not the truth is proved by the incontrovertible fact that such so-called diseases, said to be in many cases incurable, have yielded completely to the application of Christian Science treatment. This Science accepts in its work the spiritual statement that as a man "thinketh in his heart, so is he." From this point it fearlessly proceeds until the disturbed mortal thought of the individual is corrected with the right thinking which heals. It tells him that he has a right to well because God gave him that right; and if he appears to be otherwise let him look within (not back one hundred years) and see what he is thinking (not what somebody else used to think). Let him see what he finds in his own mental house; and if he finds there something that is unlike God such as fear, hate, malice, worry, self-righteousness, self-pitay, spite, greed, avarice, resentment, pride, sensuality, envy, hypocrisy, ingratitude, let him cast it out, that his mental home, his consciousness, may be worthy of the pure thoughts of the Most High.

We used to believe that a sick body made sickly thoughts, but we know now that the reverse is true. Mortals "think sickly thoughts, and so become sick" (Science and Health, p. 370.) And it is our own sickly thoughts alone for which we are responsible, not those of a past-and-gone generation. The sickly thoughts which made your father sick are not your thoughts to-day and you cannot suffer for what he did. It would be a cruel, unjust and inhuman law which would make one person pay for another's mistake and there is in reality no such law, for God never made it.

Against this false and spurious law the prophet Ezekiel once protested when he cried out, "What mean ye, that ye use this proverb . . . saying, The fathers have eaten sour grapes and the children's teeth are set on edge? As I live, saith the Lord God, ye shall not have occasion any more to use this proverb. . . . When the son hath done that which is lawful and right, and hath kept all my statues and hath done them, he shall surely live. The soul that sinneth, it shall die. The son shall not bear the iniquity of the father, neither shall the father bear the iniquity of the son. . . . Therefore I will judge you . . . every one according to his ways, saith the Lord God." A careful study of the eighteenth chapter of Ezekiel will do more to overcome a belief in inherited disease than all the drugs and hygienic methods of which the world has any knowledge. The Ten Commandments also plainly state that only upon "them that hate me (good)" will the sins of the fathers be visited, even unto the third and fourth generation. Of course, those who hate God, or good, are as truly sinning as were their forefathers, and sin continues to bring itsown penalty upon the sinner, even if sin last unto "the third and fourth generation." Immediately the promise is added that God will show mercy "unto thousands of them that love me and keep my commandments."

So it rests with the individual. "Make you a new heart and a new spirit; for why will ye die, O house of Israel? For I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord God: Wherefore turn yourselves, and live ye."

REFERENCE LIBRARY HAS BEEN ENLARGED

The "reference department" at the Public Library has been greatly enlarged by taking down a partition and making two rooms into one. This gives about 9 x 15 feet more space, which adds greatly to the convenience of the public and improves the interior of the library.

One of the best kept lawns in the City is the one around the Public Library, which looks particularly fine at this season of the year. It is owing to the good work of Mr. Matheson, the caretaker, that the grounds are in such splendid order.

POLICE COURT

Only one man graced the prisoner's dock this morning—Joseph Long, who was remanded from Saturday for driving a rig while drunk. He was fined $8.75, or fifteen days in gaol.

The following men pleaded guilty to being drunk when appearing in court, and were fined $2 each:—Archibald McCall, John King and Walter Edgar.

What We Admire In The Woman We Love

Unselfishness is the root of all graciousness, as indeed it is of most virtues, for charm loses its influence unless maintained by the superior qualities of mind and heart. Our interest in our friends is bound to ebb and flow, as is also our love, and after the first enthusiasm is over we must find the object of our love or friendship, to have some quality to command our respect, or the friendship will soon wither.

The one who wishes to be warmly welcomed should never allow her moods or her little private worries to come uppermost. We cannot feel the same sense of pleasure when meeting th friend who has always a trouble, real or imaginary, to confide in her first greeting that we experience when meeting another who comes to us bubbling over with the joy of life, and who infuses us with the same sunny radiance that seems in truth to be part and parcel of her being.

When meeting friends—and when in the midst of the home circle it is equally as important—we should endeavour to avoid all feelings of restraint, gloom, and resentment, and put away any differences of opinion if we desire to be welcomed and loved.

A womanly woman is charming in her every action; she is tender towards the bashful, merciful towards the absurd, gentle towards the distant, and gracious to those beneath her, and dependent on her; she makes light of favours she has granted, but is grateful for those she receives. One great secret of her charm is her charitableness, and the great scrupulousness in imputing motives to those who cause her even way of living to be set aside.

Smart wit and eloquence falls flat when we lower ourselves to level it at the weak and defenceless.

As Goethe has said: "In no better way may we judge a person's character than by what he laughs at," and judicious laughing is indeed a quality of charm.

A pleasant tongue is a rare accomplishment; a pleasant way of putting things may be a natural gift, but these must both come from a genial and charitable nature with a disposition free from jealousy and all pettiness. Loving thoughts, exercised day by day for those amongst whom we are situated will quickly grow into lovable habits, which will spread into and amongst our circle of friends, and cause us to be welcomed, and prove that womanliness is not a thing of bygone ages.

The march of intellect, which licks all the world into shape, has even reached the devil.—Goethe.

If you want to succeed in the world you must make your own opportunities as you go on.—John B. Gough.

Advice, like snow, the softer it falls the longer it dwells upon, and the deeper it sinks into the mind.—Coleridge.

The paths of virtue, though very seldom those of worldly greatness, are always those of unpleasantness and peace.—Scott.

Example is more forcible than precept. "Peope look to my six days to see what I mean on the seventh."—Rev. Mr. Cecil.

Some men are more beholden to their bitterest enemies than to friends who appear sweetness itself, for the former frequently tell them the truth, but the latter, never.—Cato.

Three deaths resulted from a train wreck on the C.N.R. near Cote, B.C. An express messenger named Donaldson and two mail clerks were the victims.

The Duke of Connaught will be asked to lay the corner stone of the first buildings of the new British Columbia provincial university. The site is at Point Grey.

A woman doesn't care what a man looks like. She'd rather a man wouldn't be handsome, so he'll think about her instead of about himself. The way to please a woman is to help her to think of nothing but herself.

FIRST SERMON TO HIS NEW CONGREGATION

Rev. J. P. Wilson at Charlotte Street Church Yesterday

Yesterday morning the Rev. J. P. Wilson, formerly of Napanee, and now Pastor of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church, occupied the pulpit of his charge for the first time in his official capacity. But, as he, himself, remarked, during the time he was Pastor of the George Street Church, he spoke to the congregations of the Church of which he is now the head, several times, and became known to a goodly number of the congregation. A number of faces he recognized yesterday morning during the service.

In a short address to the congregation before he touched upon the text from St. Paul's Epistle to the Galations, he said that the wheel of the great Methodist Conference had rotated to the extent of another revolution. As a result many pastors yesterday found themselves facing new congregations and in charge of new churches. He referred briefly to the four years he spent in Peterborough as Pastor of the George Street Church, characterising them as four of the happiest years of his ministry, and stated that of all the places through which he had travelled there was no place he would sooner return to than Peterborough. During his former stay in this City he had noticed that the citizens of Peterborough were loyal to their City, and while they were possessed of other commendable qualities he thought they excelled in this particular.

He had strolled along some of the streets of the City he had known, and in some instances was bewildered at the change that had taken pace in Peterborough since he had left it. Vacant lots and squares had been built up, new lanes, streets and avenues had been opened.

His coming here had been made necessary because of a great grief that had fallen upon the congregation in the past year, when they suffered the loss of one of the most refined of Christian gentlemen. Mr. Mansell (he would not say 'the late Mr. Mansell' in that his influence was still potent in the congregation), was beloved by the Conference, as well as the people of the Church, and his death was deeply regretted. Mr. Wilson remarked also that he had nothing at all to do with his leaving Grace Church, Napanee, at the end of the second year, and coming to the local Church. The change had been made by the Conference without his interference in any way.

He was not altogether a stranger, as he recognized several faces in the congregation as friends, whom he had known for years. "I am here in the name of God, to give my best, and receive your best, for the upbuilding of the Kingdom of God. It is for you members of this congregation to fulfil the visions and make perfect the work of those who, a few years ago, occupied these pews, but are gone now," he concluded.

Mr. Wilson chose as the text for his first sermon as leader of the assembled congregation, the 9th verse of the 6th Chapter of Paul's Epistle to the Galations which read as follows: "And let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not. As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith."

The Epistle to the Galations was really the charter of our evangelistical faith. The Galatians had lost their energy and had become careless. Paul's words were full of activity and hope. Two words were prominent in the text: "Season" and "Opportunity". The season is here now and we must sow in the present to reap a harvest in the future. How many jaded, spiritless men would go to work to-morrow morning unfit for their task because of that condition? How mean columns of figures would be added up by men whose brains were burning as they worked. How many with despair, reddened eyes, would pursue their domestic labours to-morrow. If iron and steel show symptoms of weariness, what could be expected from us frail children of dust.

To read of Christ's cross, and of Paul's missionary work, seemed heroic. But to take up your own cross, to go out to-morrow yourself will not prove romantic in the least. The Christian religion was not a picture of piety but the biography of saints; not the picture of patience, but the story of brave men and women heroically bearing a great load.

Doing the common things for God was the climax of the Christian life. Oft times the labour was unappreciated to a disheartening extent. But we sow our own harvest and reap it ourselves. If at times we became discouraged we should remember that if we sow in the sowing time we will reap in the reaping time. There is no room for failure. Our life is linked with the life of God, and if we sow our own seed we will reap the harvest. For God had said: "Whatsoever a man soweth that also will he reap."

WERE FAVOURABLY IMPRESSED

Congregation of Mark Street Listen to First Sermons of Rev. Mr. Phelps

The Rev. Mr. Phelps, the newly-appointed Pastor of Mark Street Methodist Church, created a favourable impression among the congregation

At 10.45 a.m., just before morning service, the Trustee Board waited upon him, and tendered him a welcome, hoping that his ministry would be a happy and prosperous one. The Rev. Mr. Phelps thanked them and said he felt already quite accustomed to his new charge.

The new Pastor preached both sermons yesterday, and in the evening, chose for his text a passage of St. Paul to the Romans: "I am not ashamed of the Gospe of Christ, for it is the power of God, leading unto Salvation."

The preacher took the minds of the congregation back to the recent election and said that while legislation eliminated many evils, the resisting of evil was an individual matter, and was accounted for only by the Power leading unto salvation. He further referred to the ancient Roman, whose power was supreme, and remarked that the power of God had far surpassed it, and was more lasting than any such earthly power.

To-morrow evening a reception service will be held.

Chemong Park Is Popular This Summer

Chemonk Park was the Mecca for a big contingent of city people over the week-end. Nearly all the cottages at this resort are now open, and in addition to the visitors at the various summer houes, a large number of automobile owners with their friends spent yesterday afternoon at the Park. Within twenty minutes' motor ride of the city, Chemong is becoming even more popular than in the past, and innumerable are the autos that daily visit this resort. Good fishing has been enjoyd by the cottagers during the past week, and many good catches are reportd. Mr. Thomas Cullen, jr., landed a fine sixteen pound 'lunge on Saturday. Mr. Gordon Long got three fine 'lunge and several bass. Mr. Wm. Thompson also hookd a nice 'lunge on Saturday.

The young people of the Park enjoyed a dance on Saturday evening, quite a large number congregating at the Pavilion to indulge in the popular summer pastime. The Thursday night dances this summer promise to be more popular than ever, and the committee is leaving nothing undone to ensure a good time.

Mr. and Mrs. Ollie Milburn and little son, of Victoria, B.C., who have been spending the past ten days with Mrs. Milburn's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stevens, at the Park, left to-day for Muskoka.

Mrs. Howard Hopwood and her mother, Mrs. Ostrom, and Mrs. Leonard Acton, of Toronto, are guests at Mr. Hopwood's cottage at the Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hodgson motored from Toronto on Saturday and spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. E. Hicks, who are summering at Chemong.

Mr. Desbecker and son, Richard, of Buffalo, N.Y., came over to Chemong for the Fourth of July holiday.

Miss Lillian Hill spent the week-end with her sister, Mrs. Pearson.

Mr. J. M. Brooks and family are occupying their cottage for the summer.

Messrs. Campbell, Parsons and Brown are camping at Chemong for the summer.

WASHBURN CARNIVAL ORGANIZATION IS HERE

Big Show Arrived on Sunday and Have Everything in Shape to Open on the Grounds To-night

The Leon W. Washburn carnival organization, which will appear in Peterborough during the current week, arrived on Sunday night, and, by special arrangement, consummated its unloadingimmediately on arrival. The fat and sleek condition of the animals and the new and gorgeous painting of the paraphernalia was very noticeable, as was the quiet and refined demeanor of the members and attaches.

It was noted at that time by the citizens that the aggregation of loudly dressed women and raucous voiced barkers usually to be found with tented organizations was entirely absent form this carnival outfit. Mr. Washburn has always made it a point to entirely exclude objectionable characters from participation in his enterprises and it is for that reason that Mr. Washburn's carnival will always be welcome.

The inaugural performance will take place to-night at 7.30, preceded by a tour through the city of the International Ladies' Concert Band, which is a feature of the Washburn enterprise and the only Ladies' band touring the United States with a tented organization. The Washburn Trained Animal Arena is a feature of the carnival and around it are grouped the other units comprising the enterprise. Mlle. Flora with her den of lions, Professor Herbertino, the lion king, Princess Pauline with her educated leopards and Captain Vincent with his pen of polar, grizzly and cinnamon bears, are among the performers of the Washburn Arena, and two baby lions, a week old, will also be on exhibition. Among the other features are the Coney Island Dreamland containing a large number of human curiosities, headed by Frank the ossified man, who is a solid mass of bone from head to foot and absolutely incapable of motion, the Motordrome with its dare-devil riders, the D'Almas Hippodrome, the Barrel of Fun, the Trip to the Moon and Edward the Great, the gigantic snake, which nearly killed its trainer in Guelph and who will be exhibited by Marguerite the courageous young lady who performed the rescue of her assistant.

One Drunk's Fines Totalled $953

Toronto Man Had Appeared in Police Court Nearly One Hundred Times

TORONTO, July 6.—"My father has paid over seven hundred dollars in fines for me in this court," the man said, as he appeared before Magistrate Denison the other day. He was discharged on a promise to leave the city. "Drunk" was the charge against him.

Incredulity spread over the faces of even the most blase of police court reporters and officials as the man made the statement. To test its truth the man's record was looked up. "It will take a week to do it," said Inspector McClelland, but he courteously got busy on the task and the result showed that the half had not been told of a losing fight by a father to save a drunken son. This is what the record showed:

Total fines inflicted, $985.
Total costs added, $211.75.
Prison terms inflicted, 8 years 11 months.

The last item does not include an indefinite term at the Jail Farm.

The man is not yet 40 years of age and it is apparent from his record that, whatever his faults, he is more sinned against than sinning. When Society's "effort at reclamation" extorts from a man or his relatives nine years out of eighteen or, as an alternative, an amount of money that would set him up in business — and then fails to reform him — it looks as though Society had bungled the job.

IT COSTS YOU NOTHING.

Do you need furniture? Let us help you to buy. We have the styles to please your fancy, the quality to meet your judgment, and the prices to fit your purse. It costs you nothing to look through our stock, and it is no trouble to us. E. B. CLEGG & Co., 337 George street.

EXCEPTIONS TO THE REPORTED PEACH FAILURE

Growers Around Niagara Are Expecting a Good Yield—Failure is by No Means General

OTHER PROSPECTS

Mr. F. G. H. Pattison, of Winona, the fruit expert, gives the Times the following review of fruit prospects in Niagara district and elsewhere:

Peaches—From time to time new exceptions to the general failure of peaches in the Niagara District are coming to light. G. E. Fisher & Sons, of Queenstown, report a fair crop of peaches, ranging from the early to the late varieties. Cuttings laden with peaches from Yellow St. John, Alberta, Triumph and Engol mammoth trees have been on exhibition in the window of the Standard newspaper office, St. Catharines. These came from the Fisher farm.

A branch of a late Crawford tree laden with peaches has been exhibited at the Central telephone office, Niagara-on-the-Lake, for some time. This branch was brought in from the farm of George Black near St. David's, by Mr. Thos. Stewart, who states that all the trees in Mr. Black's orchard, as well as those in other orchards in the vicinity, are giving promise of plenty of fruit. These exceptions, however, only prove the general rule of peach crop failure in this district. Lambton County has a light crop. The districts of Leamington and Kingsville, in Essex County, and Ridgeville in Kent County, have full crops.

Cherries — Early varieties of this fruit, both sweet and sour, are now coming on the market, and are selling at good prices. The sweet cherry crop in the Niagara District is not quite as heavy as was expected earlier in the season. There are practically no sweet cherries elsewhere in Ontario, except in the Leamington district, and prices are likely to be well maintained.

Sour cherries, on the other hand, are a very good crop both in the Niagara district and on the north side of Lake Ontario, from Hamilton to Toronto. East of Toronto there are very few. Sour cherries are not likely to be any higher in price than last year.

Raspberries and Blackberries have suffered to some extent from winter killing, both in the district and, to a great extent, elsewhere, but on the whole will produce a fairly good crop. Marlboro' raspberries are likely to turn out better than Cuthbert's. The prices for both raspberries and blackberries are likely to be well maintained, and about the same as last year.

Pears are looking somewhat better in the Niagara district than was expected earlier in the season, and Keifers are likely to be a heavy crop. The pear crop, however, will not reach an average, and elsewhere is light, so that prices are likely to be good. Some signs of blight are appearing, but it is not bad as yet.

Tomatoes have been very heavily planted in the Niagara district and are looking better than for some years, the weather having been very favourable for their development. Elsewhere, too, they have been largely planted and in most localities are doing well. Consequently there is likely to be a heavy crop and prices will probably run low when the bulk of the crop is being harvested.

Already out-of-door tomatoes and cucumbers are being shipped from the Leamington district to Toronto and other points.

A few tomatoes appeared on the market at St. Catharines on June 27th. Around Queenston, also, they will soon be shipping them.

Potatoes have also been heavily planted in this district and are looking exceedingly well. Early potatoes will soon be on the market in increasing quantities with a consequent fall in prices. The season so far has been very favourable to the production of vegetables so that they are likely to be abundant and cheaper than for the past two seasons.

A bear and three cubs were seen on a back street in Revelstoke, B.C.

NEW SHERIFF FOR COUNTY OF VICTORIA

It has been announced that Adam Edward Vrooman, M.D., ex-M.P.P., for what was formerly known as West Victoria, has been favoured with the appointment of sheriff of Victoria County, in the place and stead of Mr. John McLennan.

Mr. McLennan, a man well up in years, filled the position for a period of twenty-nine years. He was appointed in the month of May, 1885, and during his term in office has filled the position in a very capable manner and has given the County of Victoria and the Town of Lindsay his very best efforts.—Lindsay Post.

"SAFETY FIRST"

It is noticed that the G. T. R. Port Hope, Cobourg and Rochester train does not pull in to the platorm at the Station, as has until recently been customary, but remains upon the second train to receive its passengers and baggage. Passengers remark that the fact of being obliged to walk across a track to the train hardly harmonizes with the G. T. R. motto "safety first." Possibly this circumstance is given rise to by some exigency of the moment, but the irregularity should surely be righted as soon as practicable.

Urges Liberals To Prepare For Election

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—Now that the provincial election is over and the rejoicings over our capturing West Peterborough have died away would it not be as well for the Liberal party in this riding to prepare for the Dominion elections, which are likely to take place in the fall? The Government knows perfectly well there is every prospect of a hard winter to face, and if they leave the elections until the winter and its effects are over, their chances of success at the polls are very remote. So as one who took part in the recent fight I should suggest the calling together of the Liberal party and keep the house in order so that when the dissolution comes it won't find us unprepared.

The committee rooms used in the recent election are available and would do for preliminary purposes of keeping together the committee that worked so hard and so successfully in the provincial election.

Thanking you in anticipation, I remain,

Yours,
CWMRY AM. BYTH.

WAY TO WATER A LAWN PROPERLY

The best method of watering a lawn says an exchange, is to apply a spray for from 6 to 12 hours, the stream being so gentle that water will not collect in sufficient quantities to run off. The water will then sink down into the soil and the roots will grow to a greater depth. When this method is used the lawn should not be watered oftener than twice a week, and then the ground should be soaked, so that the water penetrates for several inches beneath the surface. As a general rule, watering once a week is sufficient to keep a lawn in good condition.

The man who enjoys watering his lawn in the evening for a half hour after returning from work will probably prefer this method to leaving the stream on for a number of hours once a week. If he will divide his lawn area into six parts and confine his attention to a different part each evening he will obtain practically the same results in the long run.

SIGHTLESS GENIUS.

Some Blind Men Who Made Great Names For Themselves.

In connection with the appeal for funds which was recently made in order to provide books for the blind it may be recalled that the inventor of the Braille system was not himself born blind.

Louis Braille, who died in 1852, lost his sight at the age of three, as the result of an accident, and, fortunately for the sightless, was admitted to the famous institution for the blind founded in 1784 at Paris by Valentine Hauy.

Here the boy's brilliant talents were encouraged in every way. He began to work on his system when in his twentieth year, and, after much patient endeavor, perfected the method now in general use.

There is hardly any walk of human life in which blind persons have not obtained distinction. James Holman, the famous "blind traveler," who died a few years after Braille, visited every place of note in the world. Viscount Cranborne, who died in 1865, was the author of many important historical essays. In April, 1858, a blind clergyman, the Rev. J. Sparrow, was elected chaplain of the Mercers' company, London, and read the service, etc., from embossed books.

But perhaps the most remarkable case of all is that of Henry Fawcett, the blind professor of political economy at Cambridge, who was elected M. P. for Brighton in 1865, for Hackney in 1874 and 1880, in which year he was appointed postmaster general.—London Answers.

OBITUARY

MRS. SUTCLIFFE.

There passed away on Sunday morning, July 5th, at her late residence, 209 Edinburgh street, Mrs. Mary Sutcliffe, wife of the late Greenwood Sutcliffe. Deceased lady had not been in the best of health for some time, but her death was quite unexpected. Two daughters are left to mourn her loss, Mrs. S. J. McIntyre, of Renfrew, and Miss Minnie at home. The funeral will be held on Tuesday, July 7th, at 2.30 p.m., from the family residence. Interment at Little Lake Cemetery.

THE LATE A. G. DICKSON

Sunday morning at 4.30 o'clock terminated the mortal existence of one of Peterborough's best known merchants, Alexander Gillespie Dickson, who passed away quietly at his late residence, No. 383 Park street. The news spread with depressing quickness throughout the city, as it was not known publicly that the deceased had been ill, and confirmation of his death was anxiously sought by many sorrowful friends.

The particulars of deceased's short and fatal illness are not unlike similar occurrences that have come with startling regularity in our midst, and with their silent admonitions of the uncertainty of life on this plane.

Last Monday evening the late Mr. Dickson returned to his home on Park street after the business of the day was over, apparently in as full enjoyment of his bodily health as usual. He was fond of his home and its surroundings and after the evening meal went into the garden, as was his custom, and spent some time in the enjoyment of its out door pleasures. When he came in he said to Mrs. Dickson that he felt that he had taken a chill. Mrs. Dickson promptly resorted to the material remedies at hand with the hope of counteracting any ill effects from the chill. The following morning the family physician was called in, and after several days' constant attendance he became impressed with the gravity of the case. All that medical skill and faithful nursing could do from that on proved futile, and while the patient remained calm and conscious until within a few hours of death, the end came at 4.30 Sunday morning.

In the life of one so marked by the faithful and unostentatious discharge of its duties as that which characterized the late Mr. Dickson's, it was only to a few well trusted friends that much of his goodness and gentleness is known. For, while the deceased "abounded in good works," he was one of whom it could be said that seldom "his right hand knew what his left hand doeth." As a business man, the deceased was not only successful, but so conscientious and truthful in its every business detail that a customer was never deceived, with his knowledge. During deceased's twenty-four years' business experience in Peterborough he continued to demonstrate that a man can be honest and be successful in business.

The late Mr. Dickson was a native of Scotland, where he was born in 1844 and where he has three brothers still living. The bereaved widow, who survives him, and to whom he was united in marriage thirty-two years ago, is the only relative in Canada; and although no offspring resulted from their union, their married life has been one continued season of true devotion and happiness.

In religion, deceased was a consistent member of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church. In politics, he was a staunch Liberal and always took an intelligent interest in national and civic affairs. The body is in charge of Comstock's, undertakers, where it will remain until Wednesday morning, and at 7.40 will be conveyed to the burial plot, in Toronto, via C. P. R., for interment. A private service will be used in the Undertaker's rooms on Tuesday evening at eight o'clock.

Duke on the "Idle Rich."

The Duke of Portland, presiding at the annual meeting of the British Home and Hospital for Incurables at Streatham, referred to remarks by one speaker to the effect that he was not one of the "idle rich." He said that people in his position nowadays were of the most harmless kind.

"Let them abuse us as much as ever they please," continued the Duke. "It seems to amuse those who do abuse us, and I suppose they think that they gain some advantage to themselves by doing so. It certainly does not hurt people in my position any more than it hurts any other member of the community, and therefore I say—let them go on as much as ever they like."

King's Conjuror in Poverty.

A Maharajah's Revenge.

A maharanee of Nepaul committed suicide in horror at the disfigurement which an attack of smallpox had caused in her features. The maharajah, who was passionately attached to her, first wreaked his vengeance on the physicians who had attended her in her illness. Then he flew at higher game. Out of the great temple he brought the idols, placed loaded cannon before them and made gunners fire. In terror at the proposed blasphemy they refused. Thereupon the maharajah hanged several of them. The survivors then submitted, and the guns were fired and the idols blown to pieces.—London Mail.

MAY I USE YOUR 'PHONE?

First Time — O, Mrs. Smith, I'm dreadfully sorry to trouble you, but would you be so kind as to let me use your telephone for a half minute? I should consider it such a favour. I simply must get word to my grocer at once and I cant' leave the house cause I've got cake in the oven and —O, thank you so much! I think it is perfectly sweet of you to be so kind and neighbourly. Thank you again!

Fifth Time—May I please use your 'phone for just a minute, Mrs. Smith. I m so sorry to keep troubling you this way, but—thank you very much! It's very kind of you, I'm sure.

Tenth Time—May I use your 'phone again, rMs. Smith? Thank you. Beautiful weather, isn't it Twentieth Time—Just want to use your 'phone a second, Mrs. Smith. And I'm going to ask some one to call up on it a little later in the day. You wont' mind calling over and telling me when they do, will you? Thanks.

Fiftieth Time—I just come over to 'phone, Mrs. Smith. You haven't got the telephone in a very convenient place, have you? It's so dark there you can scarcely see the numbers in the book. I should think you would like it nearer to the window. Queer weather, isn't' it?

Fifty-first Time—I'd like to telephone, Mrs. Smith. What? Well, I declare! You think I ought to help pay for the 'phone? So that's the way you feel about doing youd neighbour a favour, is it? Well, I never heard the beat of it! Of course, I thought you were perfectly willing or I'd never have asked to use it. Well, I never! I dont' want to use your old telephone, Mrs. Smith. I wouldn't use it for a million dollars after that, and what's more, I'll never step foot in this house again, and don't you come near mine and I wouldn't be so mean and stingy for worlds and I'll have one of my own put in and wait till you want to borrow it and then you'll see, and—Oh, you needn't stand there holding the door open—I'm going just as fast as I can, believe me! Good day!

CONFIDENT OF VICTORY.

Liberal Leader Hearts in Manitoba Are Taken That Polls Be Opened.

WINNIPEG, July 7. — The last week of the political battle has been entered upon with expressions of confidence on both sides. T. C. Norris, Opposition leader, after touring the province last week, declared on his return here: "There's going to be a change on July 10th," and issued a manifesto to the electors emphasizing the certainty of victory if the polls are protected on election day.

"The machine," he says, "is desperate. Not if will stop at nothing."

Many meetings have been arranged for this week, including one here last night, addressed by Mrs. Nellie McClung.

The Conservatives are leaving nothing to chance, and the Cabinet Ministers are assisted by Hon. Messrs. Rogers and Roche of the Federal Cabinet. Many meetings are being planned for the closing days in the city and province.

Girl Killed In Toronto When Train Struck Auto

Remained in Car While Other Occupants Jumped to Safety

HAPPENED ON HILL

TORONTO, July 7. — One person was killed and six others escaped death by leaping to the ground, when a heavy motor car stalled on the steep Macpherson avenue hill, just north of the C.P.R. tracks, and backed directly in front of the outbound afternoon C.P.R. freight bound for Lindsay.

Miss Ella Waller, of London, is dead; her father, Principal Waller, of Huron College, London; Rev. Francis K. Powell and Mrs. Powell, of Toronto; Samuel Kennedy, chauffeur, and two girls whose names have not been ascertained, narrowly escaped being killed.

The car commenced to climb the hill at a slow rate of speed, and was stalled at a point about 25 yards away from the railway tracks. The police think the chauffeur must have lost his head, at any rate he did not put on the brakes and the car slid straight backwards down the hill, with the heavy freight pounding along at 20 miles an hour, and bearing down on the crossing. When the motor reached a point twelve feet from the tracks, all but Miss Mr. Howell and Miss Waller had jumped. The latter then called to the girl to follow him and leaped to safety, but Miss Waller, apparently too terrified to move, remained in the car and was hurled with it twenty feet to the fence on the west side of the roadway. Rev. Mr. Powell extricated her from the wreckage, and she was conveyed to the General Hospital, where she died at seven o'clock.

Samuel Kennedy, the chauffeur, was afterwards arrested by the police of No. 5 division on a charge of criminal negligence. He was released late last night on $5,000 bail.

HINDU EXCLUSION VALID.

B. C. Court Upholds Action of the Immigration Officials.

VANCOUVER, July 7.—The immigration authorities won before the Court of Appeal on the Hunsi Singh test case, covering the Komagata Maru passengers.

The court yesterday unanimously upheld the validity of the Dominion order-in-council respecting the prohibition of the entry of an alien not direct from land of birth, not having $200 and being a laborer. The officials acted under these orders-in-council and can, therefore, proceed to deport all the rest of the Komagata Maru passengers who fall in the same category. It is not known yet if the Hindus will appeal.

The Komagata Maru gang will not permit the five recovered Hindus to get back on the vessel. The Japanese captain took up the Japanese consul on a rope ladder yesterday, and the consul gave an ultimatum, to two o'clock. It is proposed to play a steam jet on the natives from a neighboring vessel, if their genial efforts to place them here back on the boat.

MANY AT FUNERAL

Thousands Line Route as Chamberlain's Body Passes

BIG SERVICE IN LONDON

BIRMINGHAM, July 7. — Joseph Chamberlain, the Unionist leader, who for many years occupied a prominent position in British politics, was buried yesterday in Hockley Cemetery, which is situated in the constituency he represented in the House of Commons for so many years.

Previous to the burial a memorial service was held in the Church of the Messiah, which was attended by the Lord Mayor of Birmingham, the members of the City Council and other civic dignitaries.

Apart from the civic element the mourners at both the church and the cemetery consisted solely of members of the Chamberlain family, as the late statesman had expressed the desire that his funeral should be free from everything of a public nature.

Nothing could, however, prevent a great crowd of the citizens of Birmingham, among whom Joseph Chamberlain was a popular hero, from lining the route along which the funeral passed.

As the procession passed the men reverently uncovered.

Hockley cemetery was thrown open last evening, and for several hours a procession made up of many thousands passed in front of Hon. Joseph Chamberlain's grave, paying reverential tributes. The grave was covered with magnificent wreaths.

Services In London.

LONDON, July 7.—Simultaneously with the burial in Birmingham memorial services for the late Joseph Chamberlain were held in St. Margaret's Church, Westminster. Premier Asquith, the members of his Cabinet, many of the late Mr. Chamberlain's colleagues in the House of Commons, members of the House of Lords and of the foreign diplomatic corps, together with a large number of persons prominent in the official and social life of the capital, attended.

A service also was held in the Church of St. Lawrence, Jewry, which adjoins the Guildhall of the City of London, and in which parish the late statesman's ancestors lived for many years.

DOUGLAS ACQUITTED.

British Official Not Guilty of Taking Sides In Mexico.

EL PASO, July 7. — George St. Clair Douglas, the British subject held by Constitutionalist authorities at Zacatecas was released yesterday. His detention had been the subject of representations to Carranza and Villa agents here by H. C. Miles, British vice-consul. Theodore Hamm, American consul at Durango, who investigated the case, left here yesterday to return to his post and report on the Zacatecas case.

The charge that Douglas assisted the Federals at Zacatecas has been withdrawn according to a telegram yesterday from Manuel de la Vega, Constitutionalist governor of Zacatecas state, in which he said Douglas had been found not guilty before a court-martial.

ROBERTS GIVES WARNING.

Army Will Resent Use of Coercion In Ulster.

LONDON, July 7. — How was it, asked Lord Roberts in the House of Lords during last night's debate, that they were faced with a situation in which the army had indicated the possibility of disobedience? The answer was that this was no mere political crisis; they were face to face with a clash of principles which raised a question far beyond the realm of ordinary politics at a comparatively early stage in the struggle. He warned the Government that any attempt to use military forces for the coercion of Ulster would break and ruin the army. His words fell on deaf ears. The country might plunge into civil war or might drift into it, but whichever course they took it remained civil war. They might make the position of the army yet more difficult by graduating the steps, so as to give each step a fair appearance of legality and reason, but those steps would none the less put them into the same abyss. Later it would become manifest that force was to be used for the sole purpose of coercing Ulster. When that moment was reached the disaster to the army which he foresaw would come about.

HOW TO BEAUTIFY A SUNBURNED SOILED FACE

It really a simple matter to renovate a face soiled by sun, winds or dirt. Ordinarily mercolized wax, used like cold cream, will transform the worst old complexion into one of snowy whiteness and velvety softness. It literally peels off the outer veil of surface skin, but so gently, gradually, there's no discomfort. The sorriest skin comes off, not in patches, but evenly, in tiny particles, leaving no evidence of the treatment. The youngest, healthiest under-skin forming the new complexion, in case of emphatic loveliness. One ounce of mercolized wax, to be had at any drug store, is enough to remove any tanned, reddened, pimpled, freckled or blotchy skin. Always before retiring, washing it off mornings.

Many skins wrinkle easily with every wind that blows, with hard worry, etc. An excellent wrinkle remover, because it tightens the skin and strengthens relaxed muscles, is a wash lotion made as follows: Powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in witch hazel, 1/2 pt. This gives immediate results.

"DIE HARDS" FEW

Majority of Peers Unwilling to Reject Amending Bill

CREWE URGES CONFERENCE

LONDON, July 7.—The House of Lords yesterday passed by 273 to 16 the second reading of the bill to amend the Irish Home Rule bill.

That the House of Lords would pass the bill in order to amend it in committee, was a foregone conclusion, but there was surprise that only ten "die-hards" could be found to vote the Lord Willoughby de Broke's motion for its rejection.

The Marquis of Crewe, in winding up the debate for the Government, challenged the Opposition to guarantee that there would be no civil war in Ireland, even if the bill was amended totally excluding Ulster. Concerning the possibility of a solution by conference, if dropping the amending bill and breaking down the Government's policy was to be a preliminary, it would be impossible for the Government to accept it, but, short of entailing such a sacrifice, the Government was most anxious to facilitate a conference, he said.

For himself, he did not hesitate to say that if John Redmond, the Irish Nationalist leader, Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster Unionist leader; William O'Brien and two or three other Irishmen, could get together it would be a better augury for some permanent arrangement than any other kind of a conference.

After division was taken, notice of several amendments was handed in providing for the exclusion from Home Rule of the whole of Ulster.

These amendments, if carried, will make the exclusion of the whole Province of Ulster absolute, without any referendum and election, and the excluded province will be placed under the jurisdiction of the new Secretary of State in the Imperial Parliament, whose administrative orders would require the sanction of the British Parliament.

SMUGGLING CHARGES.

New Yorkers Accused of Wholesale Illicit Importations.

NEW YORK, July 7.—Herman J. Dietz, of New York, a diamond merchant, and his son Charles, were indicted yesterday by a Federal grand jury here on 11 counts, as participants in an alleged conspiracy to smuggle diamonds into the United States. Diamonds valued at from $300,000 to $500,000 were smuggled from Canada in 1911 and 1912, Assistant U. S. District Attorney R. A. Wood stated last night. Government customs and secret service agents have been at work on the case for a year.

The indictment charges the accused with smuggling stones worth upwards of $160,000 between Feb. 13, 1911, and April 1, 1912. Attempts of the accused to sell smuggled stones in this city are specified. Bench warrants will be issued for their arrest, it was announced last night. It is understood that they are now in Europe.

FAMILY MURDERED.

German Pair and Daughter and Granddaughter Slain.

CHICAGO, July 7. — A family of four was wiped out by blows from an axe in their home in the German settlement of Blue Island, a suburb, Sunday night.

The victims were: Jacob Neslesla, 72 years of age; Mrs. Anna Neslesla, wife of Jacob, 65 years; Mrs. Martha Mansfield, 34 years; daughter of above; two-year-old daughter of Mrs. Mansfield.

Bloody finger prints on the axe handle were photographed. Search was instituted for William Mansfield, husband of Martha, who is alleged to have deserted here a year ago, and for Michael Cherewisni. The latter was compelled to vacate the Neslesla house three weeks ago by the landlord in order to make way for the new tenants. He is said to have uttered threats against the landlord and Neslesla.

Acadia Off For North.

HALIFAX, July 7.—With Captain Anderson and a large staff of assistants from the hydrographic department, Ottawa, the survey steamer Acadia sailed yesterday for Hudson Bay. The steamer will make her first stop at Cape Chidley, making surveys of Hudson Strait.

The steamer Sheila, from Sunderland, England, which has been purchased by the Canadian Government, arrived here yesterday. She will be used to transport men and material to Port Nelson.

Shot Each Other Mistook.

NORTH BAY, July 7.—Albert Marchand, of Orrville, Ont., was shot and killed near Hearst by a companion named Bouchey, of Rockford. The two were members of a party of land prospectors, who had been out three weeks. Their dogs raised a moose which was at bay, and Marchand and Bouchey were both taking aim at it, when Marchand stepped in front of Bouchey's rifle.

ROYALTY AT EDINBURGH.

King and Queen Get Usual Fusillade From Militants.

EDINBURGH, July 7.—The suffragettes took advantage of the visit of King George and Queen Mary here yesterday to prepare the usual suffragette demonstration, in which the bombardment of the royal coach with suffragette literature was a feature.

Two women obtained possession of a balcony in a house opposite the station, and as the royal carriage emerged they threw down upon it a lot of suffragette appeals. Then two detectives seized them, spoiling their aim. Some of the handbills fluttered into the street and the royal carriage passed over them.

The King, looking up, saw the women struggling in the arms of the officers. They were removed to the police station, the crowd along the way giving them a mixed reception of cheers, mingled with hooting.

The women gave the names of Lock and Owen. Among their missiles was a paper ball containing a message: "To show King George that women are being persecuted for defending their freedom."

Petition Premier.

LONDON, July 7.—Rev. Reginald J. Campbell, pastor of the City Temple; Rev. R. F. Horton, pastor of Lyndhurst Road Church, Hampstead; Rev. J. H. Shakespeare, and several other prominent non-conformist ministers, have sent a letter to Premier Asquith appealing to him to put a stop to the forcible feeding of suffragette prisoners.

The writers declare that the employment of forcible feeding is barbarous, cruel and disgusting and, that, regarded as a deterrent, it has proved futile.

Death Due to Reckless Driving.

NORTH BAY, July 7.—A coroner's jury, inquiring into the death of Miss Morrisette of Mattawa, who died of injuries after an auto, owned and driven by David Merland, upset, found that her death was caused by reckless driving. The other occupants of the car were unable to appear, but witnesses told of seeing the car speeding before the accident.

"PEBLO"

The Chain of Quality

We have not any doubt but that most people value their eyesight sufficiently to want to take the best care of it. That is why we want to the success of spectacles for our Optical Trade Mark "PEBLO" and Crystal of Lenses that can be made and which we handle exclusively under the trade mark "PEBLO." We believe our patrons would appreciate having their eyeglasses fitted with the superior quality lenses, and after two years exclusive use of "PEBLO" Lenses, we are still satisfied with the lenses, judging by the hundreds of unsolicited comments which we have heard with these beautiful lenses. It is interesting to know that in spite of the increase of prescribing "PEBLO" Lenses that patent to our patrons are no more than when we were using makes of lenses, this being due to the high quality we buy at a time. We manufacture these "PEBLO" Lenses from the rough, "PEBLO" glass in our own lens grinding department.

Sweeping—dust contains many dangerous microbes.

SWEEPING is actually dangerous, as well as uncomfortable and almost useless, if it merely stirs up the floor's dust and dirt. Sweeping-dust contains millions of flaky atoms of dried vegetable and animal matter which carry disease-breeding germs and microbes.

DUSTBANE
"Catches Sweeping Dust"

Dustbane contains an antiseptic which kills germs, and its evaporation purifies the air, protecting women and children from dust-microbes. The bright green powder is swept ahead of the broom, falling upon and absorbing the dust, leaving floor or carpet bright and clean.

Dustbane saves labor in sweeping, saves nearly all your dusting, prevents damage by moths, keeps carpets bright, and protects the family's health. It can be used over and over again, and its cost is trifling.

Try it free—at our risk.

We know that when you've once used Dustbane, you will never again be satisfied to sweep without it. In order that you may try it without risk, we make the following.

Trial Offer

ORDER a regular 35-cent tin of Dustbane from your grocer. Use it for all your sweeping for a week. If you are not absolutely satisfied, send the partly used tin, back to the grocer within ten days and he will refund the full purchase price.

Full directions for use on every tin.

"THE TERMS OF SURRENDER"

By LOUIS TRACY

Power planned to take MacGonigal by surprise. He wrote with purposed vagueness as to his arrival in London, meaning to drop in on his stout friend unexpectedly. He arrived about six o'clock in the evening at the big hotel where Mac was installed, and was informed that "Mr. MacGonigal" was out, but might return at any moment. He secured a suite of rooms, and was crossing the entrance hall, with no other intent than to sit there and await Mac's appearance, when he almost cannoned against a woman—a woman with lustrous, penetrating brown eyes. What was worse, he stood stock still, and stared at her in a way that might evoke her indignation.

But, if she was annoyed, she masked her feelings under an amused smile.

"You don't recall me, of course, Mr. Power," she said; "but I remember you quite well—even after twenty years!"

"Meg!" he cried.

She reddened somewhat. Though wearing a hat and an out-of-doors costume, she was unveiled, and there was no trace of scar or disfigurement on her face.

"Marguerite Sinclair, at any rate," she answered.

"Sent here by the gods!" he muttered.

"Your gods are false gods, Mr. Power. I, for one, don't recognize them as guides."

"Marguerite Sinclair!" he went on. "So you are unmarried?"

"And you?" she retorted.

"I? I am free, at last."

"Free?"

"Yes. Come with me. We can find a seat somewhere. If you have any engagement, you must break it."

She dropped her veil hurriedly. If there are tears in a woman's eyes, she does not care to have the fact noticed while she is crossing the crowded foyer of a hotel. Manlike, Power attributed her action to the wrong cause.

"Why hide your face?" he said, striving hard to control an unaccountable tremolo in his voice. "What have you been doing? Praying at Lourdes?"

She did not pretend to misunderstand: "A French doctor worked this particular miracle. The chief ingredients were some months of suffering and the skin of eggs. It was not vanity on my part. I was tired of the world's pity."

"Then, thank Heaven, I loved you before your scientist doubled your good looks!"

They had found two chairs in a palm-shaded corner, and Marguerite raised her veil again. Then he saw why she had lowered it.

"Derry," she said, and her lips quivered, "why were you so cruel?"

"I'll tell you, May I-"

"Not now. I couldn't hear it."

"Can you bear being told that I have never ceased to love you—that you have dwelt constantly in my thoughts during all these slow years?"

She bent her head. For a long time neither spoke. Plucking at a glove, she revealed a ring on her left hand—his ring! Then Power began his confession. He did not tell her everything—that was impossible. Nor was it necessary. In the first moment of their meeting he had said what she had been waiting thirteen long years to hear.

So, as the outcome, it was MacGonigal who surprised Power. A clerk at the key office gave him the name of the gentleman who had been inquiring for him, and, although taken aback by finding Power deep in talk with a lady, Mac "butted in" joyously.

The two stood up, and Power took his friend's hand.

"Mac," he said, "this is Miss Marguerite Sinclair. You'll soon be well acquainted with her. She becomes Marguerite Power at the earliest possible date."

Now, MacGonigal had formed his own conclusions, owing to the urgency of the message for that sealed packet. Anxiety, and not a desire to see life, had drawn him from his shell in Bison. Power's words had answered many unspoken questions, solved all manner of doubts. His face shone, his big eyes bulged alarmingly. He mopped a shining forehead with, alas! a red handkerchief.

"Wall, ef I ain't dog-goned!" he vowed. "But I'm glad, mighty glad. You've worried me, Derry, an' that's a fact." He turned to Marguerite, little guessing how well she knew him. "Bring him to the ranch, Ma'am, an' keep him thar!" he said. "It'll look like home when you come along. An' that's what he wants—a home. I don't know whar he met you, nor when, but I kin tell you this—he's been like a lost dog fer thirteen years, an' it's time he was fixed with a collar an' chain. Anyhow, when he's had a good look at you, he'll not need the chain."

"Mac," said the woman with the shining eyes, "you're a dear!"

And from that moment the firm of Power and MacGonigal acquired another partner.

THE END.

On the Advice of His Doctor

He Used Dr. Chase's Ointment for Protruding Piles With Splendid Results.

Too often a doctor can only think of an operation when asked for a treatment for piles. Some are sufficiently broad-minded to use the most effective treatment available, which is undoubtedly Dr. Chase's Ointment, as was proved in the case referred to in this letter.

Mr. Simon E. Jones, Railway street, Inverness, N. S., writes: "I have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable for protruding piles. For three years I suffered from piles, and was advised by a local physician to try Dr. Chase's Ointment. I had tried many treatments in vain, and therefore know which is the best. I can highly recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment, and you are at liberty to use this statement."

The record of cures of every form of piles which stands behind Dr. Chase's Ointment is the strongest guarantee you can have that it will promptly relieve and cure this ailment, even in the most agravated form. 60c a box, all dealers.

Naval stations have been established at Tutuila, Samoa; island of Guam; Guantanamo, Cuba; Honolulu, Cavite and Olongapo, Philippine Islands. The latter has become an important naval base for the Asiatic fleet.—Philadelphia Press.

First Opera Glasses.

The single opera glass was first used in the time of Louis XIV. It became the rage, and everybody used one. The double opera glass (jumelle) was invented in 1823, but did not at first find favor with women. A treatise was written in the early part of the nineteenth century on l'art de lorgner, in which it was shown that a woman with fine arms would hold the glass with both hands, if she were blessed with fine hands she would take off her gloves, if her neck were long she would recline back in her chair, and so on. It was quite a treatise on coquetry.

HAD AN EASIER METHOD.

Being a Wise Tramp, He Was Prepared For Offers of Work.

Mrs. Brown stood in the doorway of her suburban home and eyed the tramp critically.

"Are you willing to work for a meal?" she asked at last.

The tramp extended his hands expansively, as though work was the one thing in life he hankered after, and his apparent sincerity overcame Mrs. Brown's last scruple.

She retired into the house and presently returned carrying a large plate of food and a businesslike looking hoe.

When the tramp had eaten the food she handed him the hoe and, pointing toward the garden path, remarked:

"Now, I want you to clean out that gutter. You see, it is filled with mud."

The tramp glanced at the gutter, then at the hoe.

"I never use a hoe," he said, "when cleaning out a gutter."

"Never use a hoe! Then what do you use, a shovel?"

"No," said the tramp as he moved toward the gate. "My method is to pray for rain."—London Answers.

Appreciated Appreciation.

"I should think you would refuse to live with your husband any longer. There is no reason why you should go on working and denying yourself for the sake of furnishing him with money to be spent for drink."

"I suppose I am foolish, but how am I to help myself? I've told him a dozen times to go away and never let me see him again. He refuses to go."

"Why don't you quit giving him anything to eat? Let him get good and hungry, so that he will either have to hustle for himself or starve. He won't hang around you long if he finds that there's nothing in the house with which he can fill his stomach."

"Yes, I suppose you're right, but I can't bear to think of doing anything like that. It's so pleasant to watch him eat when I get up a good meal for him. It's the only sign of appreciation that I ever get from anybody."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Professional Advice.

"Yes," said the doctor as he examined the patient, "you have let yourself run down. You should develop an interest in what is going on around you. You should keep in touch with the events of the day. You should subscribe for a dozen good newspapers and a few magazines and digest them thoroughly each day. You should stimulate your mind with a varied diet of reading matter. By the way, what is your occupation?"

"I am an exchange editor," replied the patient.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Thoughtful.

"Is my hat on sufficiently crooked?" she asked him.

"Yes, my dear. But you have a little too much red paint on the left cheek. I'll tone it down. There, that's better. No, it isn't. Now, there's too much on the right cheek. Never mind. I'll even it up if it takes a week."

Later on the lady remarked to her dearest friend: "John is a dear, good fellow and so thoughtful. But I just felt all the time I was sitting in church that I looked like a chalk faced ghost."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Penalty of Environment.

"It is of no use bringing out that man for office. His early life would be against him."

"Why so?"

"He was a messenger boy."

"What has that to do with his candidacy?"

"The force of early habit. He never could bring himself to run for office."—Baltimore American.

A PERFECT WIFE.

The Devotion of Lady Beaconsfield to Her Husband.

Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield the great Prime Minister of England, married, when 35, the 50-year-old widow of Wyndham Lewis. After her death he said to a friend: "I hope some of my friends will take notice of me now. I feel as if I had no home. When I tell my coachman to drive home I feel it is a mockery."

"The severest of critics, but a perfect wife," is Disraeli's well-known tribute. He declared: "I do owe to that lady all I think I have ever accomplished, because she has supported me by her counsel and consoled me by the sweetness of her disposition." He declared "there never was a better wife. She believed in me when men despised me. She relieved my wants when I was poor and persecuted by the world."

Disraeli had a few friends and no intimates. His birth, ancient as it was, was his disadvantage; his dress and demeanor were as eccentric as his style of speech and literary reputation. He had failed in his maiden speech and was looked upon as an unsuccessful adventurer, but his wife had as much faith in him as he had in himself, and gratitude made him a devoted husband.

A nobleman who had no better sense than to expostulate with him for always taking his wife with him, said: "I can't understand it; you make yourself a perfect laughing stock by always taking your wife with you." Disraeli replied: "I suppose you can't understand it, for no one could ever in the last and wildest excursion of an insane imagination suppose you to be guilty of gratitude."

Once, when Disraeli was going to Parliament to make an important speech, she accompanied him. When the carriage door was shut her hand was caught in it. Rather than distract her husband's thoughts she patiently endured the pain until the door was opened and still endured it as she sat in the gallery looking down with a satisfied smile on her husband that she might encourage him to loftiest efforts.

From their wedding day the existence of one was merged in that of the other. She had money, but he had no sordid motives. It was a love match and paved the path of his ambition. It was her pride to shine in the reflection of his fame. The secret of the spell by which she held him was that she loved him with a love surpassing that of woman, and he appreciated as few men do, at its full value the self-sacrificing devotion. And as that perfect wifehood drew near its destined close Disraeli said: "We have been married 30 years and she has never given me a dull moment."

War In the Air.

A startling forecast of the future war in the air was made at the United Services Institution recently by Col. L. C. Jackson, late Royal Engineers, in dealing with our defence against possible aerial attack. We might, he said, assume that in 1917 France and Germany would each have fleets of forty or fifty airships, with a carrying capacity of forty tons, a calm weather speed of sixty miles, and a range of 1,500 miles. These vessels would be able to drop a ton of explosive in one charge. Military aeroplanes in 1917 would probably have a speed of not less than 75 miles an hour, a range of at least 500 miles, be armored to resist small-arm fire, and have a crew of three with a machine-gun or bomb-dropping arrangements. If those assumptions were correct, in three years' time our vulnerable points—dockyards, magazines, and stores, ammunition factories, oil reservoirs, wireless stations, and great centres of population—would be exposed to attacks from the air. Col. Jackson thought the gun would be the most effective defence against aerial attack.

The popularity of the statue in New York harbor among aviators desiring a point by which to steer puts an end to all the doubts that have been expressed concerning its usefulness.

Nose Tip Vaccination.

The young Japanese diplomat pointed to his father, the marquis.

"That's father," he said, "the old fellow with the saucer shaped scar on the tip of his nose. All Japs of the older generation have that scar."

"Yes," said the debutante.

"Yes; it's a vaccination mark. In the old days, when compulsory vaccination first began, we Japs vaccinated everybody on the tip of the nose. Why? Well, because it was a good place, where there's no movement to rub off the scab, and also because the vaccination scar on the nose was easily identified by the medical officers of the government. A man didn't have to take off half his clothes in order to prove that he'd been vaccinated.

"Yes; the nose tip vaccination had its good points, but before the modern hankering after beauty it had to go."—New York Tribune.

Antiquity of Death Masks.

Although there is no mention of death masks in the works of Homer or in any of the later classics, modern explorers have satisfied themselves that in the early burials of all nations it was the custom to cover the heads and bodies of the dead with sheets of gold so pliable that they took the impress of the form, and not infrequently, when in the course of centuries the embalmed flesh had shriveled or fallen away, the gold retained the exact cast of the features. Schliemann found a number of bodies "covered with large masks of gold plate in repousse work," several of which have been reproduced by means of engraving in his "Mycenae," and he asserts that there can be no doubt whatever that each one of these represents the likeness of the deceased person whose face it covered.

URIC ACID SUFFERING
Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it forms stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

THE ORIENTAL AT HOME

HIS LIVING IS PLAIN AND HIS THINKING IS HIGH.

Those Who Have Seen Life in Its Many Phases in India Say That the Standard of Morality and Intellect Is Far Loftier Than Western Prejudice Has Given the New World to Believe.

Much harm has been done in the past and much ill-feeling created by a reckless disregard of East Indian thought and feeling; by the western; er's failure to understand the Oriental, but all the English who have lived and worked among Indians and treated them with justice and consideration know how honorably and with what confidence they respond, says a writer in The Family Herald and Weekly Star, apropos of the Hindu immigration problem now vexing the people of the west coast of Canada.

The native of India, if let alone by political agitators, can be counted upon to live quietly and peaceably. The reason is that his wants are simple, according to Western ideas. Plain food and drink suffice him. He is forbidden by his religion to touch spiritous liquor, so the wine merchant need not look to him as a customer.

With this plain living goes "high thinking." The Indian has the habit of thought, of meditation. He is a philosopher, be he a humble coolie tilling the rice fields, or a high-born rajah. This is shown amongst other things in their deep love of nature.

Every plant in its season calls up some historic, or poetic association. This trait is more marked also in their twelve or more annual festivals, each of which is greeted with religious fervor. The Feast of the Cosmic Energy," or the developing of the forces of the earth; "The Feast of the Motherhood of Nature;" Such titles show profound thought. In the unfolding of the buds in spring the coolie sees with grateful eyes the bounty of the universal earth mother, "Dma Himavutee," "The Mother of the Nation," the spirit whom he venerates.

The community life of a village in India exists to-day as it has existed from time immemorial. It is a piece of the life of the youth of the world preserved intact.

A council of five elders rules under the "head-man," who is responsible to the state for the land tax. The office of "head-man" is hereditary, going from father to son. In the same way the trades and professions are hereditary. The village priest, watchman, accountant, musician, and doctor are all plying the same occupation as their father and grandfather.

Says the potter in an Indian village, "My father's father made pots for the court of Indra, (i.e., Paradise) since when we have always made pots. When births or deaths occur the potter gains, for all the pots in the house have to be broken and new ones put in their place to avoid ceremonial defilement.

It is said that "The Englishman's house is his castle." It is equally true that the mud-hut of the poorest coolie is his palace. This strong sentiment for the sanctity of the home has its outward sign in the daily "Veneration of the Threshold." At daybreak when the Indian woman sets about her household duties she puts flowers or leaves upon the threshold, or sometimes makes a pattern in rice or grain.

In spite of the misrepresentations of those who know a little about India and not a great deal, there are no happier homes than the Indian homes. Officially, the women is in subjection, but there may be quoted the authority of Flora Annie Steele, the novelist, who knows her India through and through that the husband is not necessarily a tyrant.

"Honored Mother," is the title by which all Indian men address their female parent, from prince to coolie. His wife, as soon as he gets one, must reverence, look up to and obey his mother just as she did her own.

The habit of thought and contemplation which is ingrain in the native of India, causes students to be much respected. This is the case even when the student is of another nationality and religion, and when the object of study is not exactly known.

A few years ago an English lady, since well-known as a writer on Indian life, settled in a lane of a native town to learn the language and observe the habits and customs. She was not only welcomed with every kindness by the inhabitants but they looked upon her as their guest and esteemed it an honor to keep her wants supplied.

Natives of India are extremely fond of children and very kind to them. Readers of books dealing with the Indian Mutiny will remember the many instances of little English children who were saved by the fidelity of their native servants.

Contrary to what is generally believed, a native is not resentful unless very deeply offended. Those who are accustomed to native households speak warmly of the tactful courtesy that governs their actions at awkward moments. They criticise rudeness in others with graceful forbearance.

An English girl visitor behaved very rudely and thoughtlessly when on a visit to some Indian ladies.

"She is not well born," was the pitying comment of the hostess.

Visitors to India are always struck with the decorum of Indian life. The streets, except in the disreputable bazaars, compare very favorably with the streets of any European or American town. Women of all classes and nationalities are safe. There is no freedom of word or look to offend.

In the practice of his religion the Indian is very strict. The bath is a ceremonial purification.

At It Again.

"There's no doing anything with our choir. The soprano and alto are at it again hammer and tongs."

"I suppose your homely alto is jealous of your soprano's pretty face."

"No; our pretty soprano is jealous of our homely contralto's fine figure."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Indigestion And Headaches

In the western Provinces, where so many thousands live far from doctors and drug stores, very many rely on Dr. Chase's medicines to cure disease and maintain health and strength. This letter gives some idea of what perfect control Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills exert over the most common ills of life.

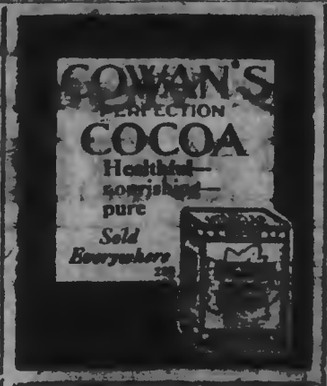
Mrs. H. K. Hewer, farmer's wife, Eastburg, Alta., writes: "For about ten years I suffered from constipation, indigestion, headache and languid feelings. Treatment from two or three doctors afforded only temporary relief, so I turned to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and with most satisfactory results. Headaches have disappeared, regular habits established and general health very much better. Both my husband and I can speak highly of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver pills, as we have both been greatly benefited by them." One pill a dose, 25c a box, 5 for $1.00, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

"Dead" Soldier Sits Up.

One of the men of the First royal Scots fusiliers, who reached Southampton recently from South Africa, was Private McDevet, who, though in the prime of life, has snow white hair. He had a narrow escape from being buried alive in India. After an attack of fever he was pronounced to be dead and was placed on a slab in the mortuary to await burial. Two hours later the sentry outside heard knocking from within. He opened the door and was startled to see McDevet sitting up. The experience turned McDevet's hair white. The sentry was driven mad by the shock and died.—London Mail.

A New Kind of Date.

Perhaps the last thing in the world over which the vagaries of fashion might be expected to exercise any influence is in regard to such an everyday practice as the style of dating letters. Yet even here fads and fancies have their way. A new fancy is said to be the elimination of the date of the month altogether, simply giving the day of the year. For instance, Aug. 1 would be represented by "213-1914," while for New Year's eve "365-1914" would be used.—London Globe.



FLEET STREET'S G.O.M.

Earl of Halsbury Is Smart as a Boy at Eighty-Nine.

The Earl of Halsbury is frequently referred to as the most striking figure in the politics of the time. On the threshold of his ninetieth year, he has been figuring as chairman of an inquiry into the financial transactions of Lord Murray of Elibank, and doing it as well as many a judge only old enough to be his grandson. Lord Halsbury was Lord Chancellor of England for eighteen years! He is also the patriarch of Fleet street. His father was the first editor of The London Standard, when that journal was founded in 1827 to oppose Catholic Emancipation. Lord Halsbury can probably claim a longer family association with journalism than even the Walters, of The Times, for his grandsire was the infamous "Jack" Giffard, the "Dog in Office," as he was known, when the Irish Parliament was being smashed up, and editor of The Dublin Journal, a subsidized Government organ in the Irish capital. When he began to churn "copy" for Fleet street, therefore, he had hereditary claims to the street's regard. To-day he is still churning "copy." Nearly a decade ago, in his eighty-second year, he started editing "The Laws of England"—which is what may be truly called a "tall order," and will last even Lord Halsbury a lifetime.

Lord Halsbury is the last living link in the Law with the days of King George IV. and Queen Caroline. He was a "fearless barrister" when his father died, and left him absolutely with his way to make. No files settled on Hardinge Stanley Giffard, however. Within twenty years he was Solicitor-General, with an income of $75,000 a year.

Forty years ago he was Solicitor-General in a Cabinet which included such world-famous politicians as Lord Beaconsfield, Viscount Cross, Lord Salisbury, Earl Cairns, the Dukes of Richmond, Northumberland, Marlborough, and Rutland, the Earl of Derby, Lords Sandon and Iddesleigh. All have gone—the last to pass away being old Lord Cross, who died a few weeks ago at 90 years of age.

Lord Halsbury is a real pillar of the church, but his vocabulary is expressive—and picturesque! Even as Lord High Chancellor of England he has been known to "let it go." There was an occasion when he nearly perpetrated an abrupt expletive from the Woolsack. Lord Rosebery had made a speech on the King's Declaration. Lord Halsbury was extremely irritated. Jumping off the Woolsack he said, "As for the noble lord's criticism I don't care a—well, I don't wish to be abusive, so I will say I don't care anything at all for it." Goodness knows what would have happened if the Lord Chancellor had not corrected himself in time!

Found In a Glacier.

Sir Martin Conway has recently told this story of finding a lost ax in the Alps: Zurbiggen, one of the celebrated mountain climbers of the world, in scaling a peak of Les Anglaises, near Chamounix, accidentally let his ax fall near the summit of the peak. It fell some thousands of feet. In the normal course of things it was buried in snow and swallowed up in the glacier, being covered deeper and deeper each year, and at the same time being carried slowly downward as the ice flowed on. Seven or eight years afterward Hon. C. G. Bruce and Harkbir, a Sepoy chief, in descending a peak in the Alps just as night was falling, and a great crevasse barred the way, being unable to find the bridge over it, cut a path down to the bottom, where Harkbir stepped on an ax which had M. Z. Zurbiggen's initials on the handle. There could be no mistake as to the identity of the ax, as Harkbir had seen it and used it before.

ON THE DEATH OF POE.

They have laid thee down to slumber where the sorrows that encumber
Such a wild and wayward heart as thine can never reach thee more.
For the radiant light of gladness never alternates with sadness,
Stinging gifted souls to madness, on that bright and blessed shore.
Safely moored from Sorrow's tempest on the distant Aiden shore,
Rest thee, lost one, evermore.
* * * * * *
From the earth a star has faded and the shrine of song has shaded,
And the muses veil their faces, weeping sorrowful and sore.
But the harp, all rent and broken, left us many a thrilling token—
We shall hear its numbers spoken and repeated o'er and o'er.
Till our heart shall cease to trouble, we shall hear them sounding o'er.
Sounding ever, evermore.
—Sarah T. Bolton.

PANAMA'S BIG PROBLEM.

Uncle Sam's Medical Corps Made the Big Canal Possible.

"The Panama canal could never have been completed except for the work of the medical corps," said Sir Robert Weeks, widely known builder and engineer of London and member of the British parliament for twenty years. Sir Robert built the tunnel through the Andes, completed about two years ago; constructed the great harbor improvement at Buenos Aires and is about to start work on the construction of the Georgian Bay canal from the St. Lawrence to the great lakes.

"It was because the French could not combat disease that they failed in the building of the Panama canal," continued Sir Robert. "Your government realized that to make a success of the canal work disease would have to be stamped out, and it was almost as big an undertaking to do this as it was to dig the ditch. I do not take the view of some engineers that the Panama canal is not a great engineering work, but merely a big work of excavation. It is a tremendous engineering feat, one of the greatest ever undertaken, and the engineers and builders deserve greatest credit for it.

"The Andes tunnel was a big work, but difficult only because of the inaccessibility of the supply stations. The actual tunneling through the mountain was about five miles, but the approaches to the tunnel are about twenty miles on each side. The tunnel runs from Argentina on the east to Chile on the west."—Washington Post.

SHE GAINED 24 LBS.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Harlowe Ont. writes: "I was troubled for many years with weak, watery blood and dropsy. I had nervous headaches, dizziness, and sinking spells and was, in fact, a semi-invalid. Doctors told me my heart and kidneys were diseased and gave me up. By using 10 boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been cured of many of my old complaints and gained 24 pounds in weight."

Goes 500 Miles an Hour.

While experts continue to discuss the practicability of H. Bachelet's aerially suspended railway, J. Enson, a Birmingham manufacturer, announces that he has invented a train which will travel 500 miles an hour, 200 miles an hour faster than the Bachelet train.

This latest invention is of the monorail type, but like one of the Bachelet features inasmuch as it will fly after attaining a certain speed. It does not rely for levitation on magnetic repulsion, but on the principles of aviation. It will be a hybrid of a street car and an aeroplane with an overhead trolley and propellers. The model is driven by electricity. The inventor claims that it can attain a speed of 500 miles an hour with ease and safety, and he expects to give a demonstration soon with a working model.

The African Elephant.

Shunning man and, as a rule, fleeing at his approach, the African elephant when attacked often shows fight and is dangerous prey. Kongo specimens have very large ears that even stretch back beyond the neck and cover part of the flank. In color the Kongo elephants are of a grayish blue, almost slatelike tint. No one has ever reported seeing specimens of the sacred white elephant of India there. In else Kongo elephants have been killed that were more than fourteen feet high at the withers and reckoned at more than eight tons in weight. Tusks obtained are sometimes more than 200 pounds in weight and six feet and a half in length.

Sign Crusade In England.

The crusade against outdoor advertising signs in England accomplished results years ago. It was the Society For the Prevention of Abuses In Public Advertising—called "Spapa" for short—that led the fight. There is now a well enforced law in England which empowers local authorities to frame bylaws "for regulating, restricting or preventing the exhibition of advertisements in such manner or by such means as to affect injuriously the amenities of a public park or pleasure promenade, or to disfigure the natural beauty of a landscape."

Leper Colony In England.

With the late Lord Strathcona's gift of $25,000, the first leper colony in the United Kingdom will be established next fall in a deserted part of Essex. There are now only twenty cases of leprosy in the entire United Kingdom. They are isolated, but widely scattered, and the bringing them together for care at a central colony will not only assure more comfort for the afflicted, but will enable new research into the disease. A specially equipped hospital will be a part of the new colony.

NATIONAL FRIENDSHIP.

My other message is to assure you that the friendship you entertain for the people of the United States is reciprocated by them far more universally and far more heartily than ever before. There is a friendship of governments and a friendship of nations. The former may shift with the shifting of material interests or be affected by the relations of each power with other powers, but the latter rests on solid and permanent foundations. With our two peoples it is based on community of speech, of literature, of institutions, of beliefs, of traditions from the past, of ideals for the future. In all these things the British and American peoples are closer than any two other peoples can be. Nature and history have meant them to be friends. — James Bryce, Former Ambassador at Washington, to the British.

COLLEGE SETTLEMENTS TO PROTECT UNCLE SAM'S IMMIGRANTS

"Mother" House in New York Is Nucleus of Countrywide Movement for Betterment of Alien Youth of America.

FORERUNNER of all institutions of its kinds in this country, the College Settlement, which has since its inception occupied a house at No. 95 Rivington street, New York city, has now attained to the dignity of twenty-five years. There are now college settlements in Philadelphia, Boston and Baltimore, and in New York the settlement has branch houses at No. 188 Ludlow street and No. 96 First street. The "mother" house of the settlement has not found that the need for its ministrations has in any way lessened in the Rivington street neighborhood through all these passing years, because, although there is a constantly shifting population in that region, there are always one thousand persons to the block. As they become more prosperous the families which have come to the new country from other lands move into other neighborhoods or out into the suburbs, but there is always an equally eager horde of freshly arrived immigrants to take their places.

A Vast Army of Aliens.

"One hundred and fifty thousand human beings are here packed into two hundred acres of land," says the settlement historian. "They are of all nationalities and fresh from the steerage. Here they get their first impress of American life. The settlement has been here continuously all these years, amid an ever changing immigrant population, holding before them ideals of American citizenship and home life, showing them the best that America offers, and helping them to preserve the best of their Old World traditions. From it have radiated influences which have touched the lives of individuals, have altered and uplifted the civic life of the community and have reached far distant towns and cities.

"It has been a hard fight from the beginning, both to protect the individual and to change his environment. The settlement has worked with other organizations for the betterment of the neighborhood, cleaner streets, more and better schools and playgrounds. It was a pioneer in many ways. Its baths were the first public ones in the neighborhood; the library was the first in Rivington street, the yard was the first playground in the city and the only one on New York's east side for years.

Some of the Workers.

Miss Vida Dutton Scudder, a graduate of Smith College, is given the honor of having the greatest part in starting the settlement. Miss Jean Gurney Fine, also of Smith, was the first head worker. The money was privately raised at first, and among the original contributors was Phillips Brooks. The district in which the house was situated was at that time the most corrupt in the city politically. Its five hundred saloons were balanced only by five churches and a very few philanthropic agencies. The house was opened in 1889 with seven residents, representing Smith, Vassar and Wellesley.

"The settlement was first known in the neighborhood by its baths," according to the historian. "As baths were its only defensible means of support the neighbors were greatly interested in the experiment. Baths were sold at five cents each, the bathrooms were lighted by gas and the bathers frequently carried off the soap, so that, not without reason, we were asked to raise the price. The business flourished and we made many friends with the bathers as they waited in the kitchen. Some were weeklies, some annuals, while others approached their first experiment of the kind with fear and trembling. It soon became evident that there was a great popular demand for bathing privileges. The matter was explained to charitable organizations as well as by the city, and the settlement, having pointed the way, as its function was, closed its baths."

No Room for All.

The settlement was amazingly popular from the first in Rivington street. For every boy who came in to attend a club there were always at least two who must be excluded for lack of room. They came in by the windows and coal holes, and when they could not get in at all they called attention to their interest in the work by delivering various tokens of their interest through the windows or by ringing the doorbell. So constant was this practice that two deaf mutes who came into the neighborhood always indicated the house by making signs of pulling an imaginary bell.

"In the pioneer days the settler travelled an uncharted country. She never knew in the morning where her quest would lead her before night. There might be a run on the settlement bank, with long lines of depositors waiting in the street, because a small boy had interpreted the housecleaning operations with the inflammatory utterance, 'The bank's bust and they're going to move.' Sometimes there was a neighbor's new baby to be washed in the bread bowl or the dishpan. At other times there were interviews with excited Jewish parents who were sure their daughter was being taught Christian songs because she had been taught the words of 'Mary, Mary, quite contrary.' The residents came to look for the crude excitement of a really live neighborhood where there was always a fire, a street fight, a parade or at least a faker and a crowd, and it was easy to be patient with the tenement house folk who found it 'lonesome' in the country."

Much of the work of the settlement is done through its clubs, of which there are now more than fifty, including clubs for married women, for young women and girls, for young men and boys and for children. There are also gymnasium classes for girls, boys and children, and a cooking school which is patronized by young women and school girls. The settlement conducts a kindergarten at No. 188 Ludlow street. Dances for the young men and women are frequently held at the settlement, especially in the summer when the absence of the regular clubs leaves the settlement parlor open for this purpose. The settlement also maintains as a vacation place for the children in summer a beautiful country house, Ridge Farm, Mount Ivy, where groups of the settlement children go for a needed breath of country air.

Funds Are Needed.

The question which confronts the settlement in its twenty-fifth year is whether the settlement must be curtailed for lack of funds or whether it may go on and keep pace with the demands made upon it. Last summer the funds gave out and it was necessary to close the gymnasium. The boys who had spent their idle hours within its friendly walls resorted to a nearby store kept by a notorious gunman, who set to work by all the devices known to his trade to get them into his clutches. Painful evidences of his success have already been observed in many a boy. In order to pay the mortgages on its several houses the settlement now wishes to raise a sum of $100,000. In order to be able to continue its work without curtailment the settlement needs to raise the sum of $100,000. A campaign has been started to complete this sum during this anniversary year.

Miss Elizabeth S. Williams is the head worker of the settlement. Mrs. Charles B. Spahr, of Princeton, N. J., is chairman of the Board of Directors, and Mrs. Milton G. Starrett, of New York, is treasurer.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Arletta In Paris

A Queer Introduction and the Result.

By F. A. COLLINS.

The ormolu clock on the mantel in the pretty drawing room at Auteuil, near Paris, with windows overlooking the garden, never slept, although its mistress, Mrs. Marion Bennings, did regularly every evening that her son and herself spent alone.

She was nodding now over a ribbon decorated basket containing some silken hose she had been mending. The ormolu clock struck 11 and Otto, turning around, pushed a book off to the floor. The noise awoke Mrs. Bennings who sat up with a start and remarked:

"I am off to bed. What a stupid evening! I haven't heard you speak for an hour."

"You couldn't," said Otto. But as she stared at him indignantly he made haste to add, "Because I haven't spoken for an hour."

Mrs. Bennings got up slowly, and a letter fell from her lap. Otto hastened to pick it up.

"You'd better read it," said his mother. "My cousin, Harry Jones, who is tremendously rich, writes that he is bringing his motherless daughter to Paris. Her name is Arletta, and I have heard she is pretty and accomplished. We must be very nice to them, particularly to the daughter. She is an only child."

"Then I congratulate her. I'm an only child too," remarked Otto.

"Her husband will be very fortunate. Don't you agree with me?"

"I'll withhold judgment till I see the young lady," said her son.

Left alone, Otto resumed the writing of his letter, which he was to address to a certain Celeste, and reflected that probably his mother was already planning to marry him to Arletta, the daughter of the wealthy Mr. Jones. But he made a bet with himself that it wouldn't come off.

Suddenly a woman's voice to the accompaniment of a guitar came through the open window. It was soft, rich, yet penetrating.

"La nuit ecoute et se penche sur l'oreille," etc.

"Hello!" said Otto. "A strolling singer, and a good voice too." He went to the window and called out, "Qui vive?"

"Oh, dear!" answered a woman's voice outside. "They told me you spoke English."

"So I do, after a fashion," said Otto, leaning out of the window. "Do you?"

"Why, of course I do," said the voice. "I'm English; at least I'm American."

"The deuce you are! What are you doing in our garden?"

"I wish you would let me come in and tell you, will you?"

"Come in at once. Here, give me your hand. It's only a step."

A pretty girl dressed in a Spanish costume, as if for a fancy ball, followed the hand. Her costume was rich and looked fresh, but she sank into a chair by the window, exclaiming:

"Oh, how good it seems to be able to sit down again in a chair!"

"Have you walked all the way from Paris?" asked Otto.

"From Paris and ever so much farther. My shoes are worn to shreds. See?"

She stretched out a tiny foot. Slipper and silken hose were in shreds.

"I've been singing for two days," said she, "and, see, that is all I took in"—showing him a few sous—"and I'm so hungry."

"Hungry!" cried Otto, drawing forward a little table with teddy cakes and wine. The girl looked at it longingly, remarking:

"Cake. That's what everybody offers me, and I'm dying for a—ham sandwich."

"I'll forage for something more substantial!" cried Otto, starting toward the door.

"Not till I explain. Wait, please," said the girl. "Are you an American?"

"You bet I am!"

"Thank God!" she said. "Then you'll believe me. I'm not a beggar. I'm in hard luck. These are all the clothes, this is all the money, I have. I'm a stranger in Paris. Day before yesterday I arrived there and went to the Grand hotel to wait for my father. I had a maid, half a dozen trunks and a letter of credit. On the way from the Gare du Nord my maid ran away with the trunks and my letter. At the hotel they wouldn't believe me when I told them who I was. I hadn't a friend in Paris except some relatives of my father, whose address is in my vanished trunks. This masquerade suit hung in the closet of the hotel. I borrowed it and rented a guitar and started out to see if I could support myself. I had read of students in distress doing such things. I thought it would be a lark, but it has been awful. And I kept thinking I'd come up with some nice Americans. I was doing my very best, you see."

Otto agreed with her. He couldn't help it, she was so pretty. When he told her this she permitted him to go for a sandwich. In a minute he came back with some cold chicken and little biscuits, a small cheese and a pot of jelly.

"Will these things do?" he queried doubtfully.

"Do? Do!" she cried, with delight. "Watch me!"

She perched before the tray and began to eat ravenously. "This chicken is divine," she exclaimed. "What nice fellow you are! But I can't eat much. I'm too worried."

"Worried?" said Otto. "What about?"

"I guess you'd be worried if you didn't know where you were going to sleep tonight."

"So I might," said he, "but where did you sleep last night?"

"In the Parc Monceau."

"In the park? All night?"

"All night, and there was such a wretch near me!"

"I'm sure there was," said Otto, hunting through his pockets. "Here, take this money. At least you won't have to sleep in the park."

"Then I can't sleep here?" pouted the girl. "You believe me, of course, but you have your fun, little doubts. My story is so absurd."

"I believe every word," said Otto, "but this hotel is expensive."

"I'll take the money," said the girl, "and as soon as my father comes he will repay you. You'll tell me your name. How he will thank you! Oh, if only the shops were open so I might buy some shoes and stockings. These are holes."

Otto ran to his mother's workbasket, which she had left behind her, and drew forth a pair of stockings. He offered them to the stranger, who received them with a shriek of joy.

"Could I borrow these?" she cried. "Your wife's?"

"My mother's," said he. "I'm not married."

"Not married?" cried the girl, holding the silk hosiery aloft. "I thought—"

This was the scene that Mrs. Bennings witnessed as she opened the door in her drawing room to inquire why her son was still up. Ottie paused a moment, then strode in, exclaiming:

"Otto!"

Otto jumped around guiltily, and the stranger screamed.

"Mother, let me explain," said Otto. "This lady"—

"Lady!" interrupted Mrs. Bennings. "What is this lady doing in my house unknown to me?"

"I'd better tell her," said the girl, rising to her feet. But the outraged matron, motioning her to be silent, said:

"I will deal only with my son. As for you, begone!"

"Are the stockings here?" asked the girl of Otto. "Then I'll not wear them a single instant. I'd rather go barefoot. I would—indeed, I should. I'm very sorry, madam, that I intruded, but I was in great trouble. Until my father, who is to arrive this week"—She stamped her feet into the ruined slippers and rose, half crying: "I'm going. I'm sorry I came in."

Otto was at her side. "I'll take you to a hotel. Let mother think what suits her. Come!"

He offered her his hand. The girl put hers in it, and they turned toward the window. But Mrs. Bennings cried:

"The door, if you please!"

The stranger went to the door and, turning, said, with dignity:

"I know that appearances are against me, but when my father reaches Paris we will call and explain. Won't you please tell me your name?"

Mrs. Bennings shook her head, but Otto answered promptly:

"My mother is Mrs. Marion Bennings."

The girl stared, then began to laugh hysterically.

"Papa's cousin!" she cried. "I'm Arletta Jones, your Cousin Henry's daughter. You are papa's relatives, whose address is in my trunk."

Mrs. Bennings looked at her closely.

"It is—I see it is true. There's a resemblance. You played this prank to test us, naughty child."

"Prank!" cried Arletta. "Is that what you call it? Why, I haven't washed my face for two days."

Mrs. Bennings threw up her hands in horror.

"I'll have a bath and bed prepared for you at once. Then you shall tell me all that has happened."

"So you're my Cousin Otto. How nice!"

"Well," replied Otto thoughtfully, "we'll let it go as cousin for a day or two."

A Man Who Grew Shorter.

The death is reported of Albert Mills, known as "the brittle man of Birmingham." For twenty-six years Mills had suffered from an obscure disease which caused a shrinkage of bodily stature and made him the object of study by medical men from all over the world. Mills was fifty-eight years of age. The disease was diagnosed as osteomalacia, and its chief symptom is the disappearance of lime from the body, leaving the bones soft and misshapen. It became impossible for him to move, and for over fourteen years he had been confined to his bed. Before his illness he was five feet eight inches in height, but he gradually shrank until at the time of his death he was under four feet high, having lost twenty inches in twenty-six years.—Pall Mall Gazette.

ANNIE LOUISE CARY

And Her Favourite "Robin Adair"

The indisputable queen of song in her day was Annie Louise Cary. She was one of the world's famous contraltos when she retired from the operatic stage at the very height of her career in opera. She retained the sweet, wholesome characteristics of the American girl all during her musical triumphs. She made her debut in Copenhagen, although she studied in Milan. For three years she delighted European audiences before making her appearance in America. For over twelve years, with the exception of a brief European tour, she delighted American audiences with the charms of her voice and personality. But to hear her sing "Robin Adair," that simple old song, and that masterpiece of Arthur Sullivan's "The Lost Chord," and Longfellow's "The Day is Done," with the rich tones of the happy, good-natured personality that always charmed, she always left the audience breathless and spellbound.

"Robin Adair," "The Lost Chord," and many other favourites of Cary, are to be found in "Heart Songs," now being distributed to the readers of this paper. See Coupon elsewhere in this issue for terms.

There was such a demand for the Heart Songs that we had to discontinue inserting the coupon. We have now on hand a further supply, and the coupon will run for two weeks. If you desire a copy, save the coupons and together with 98c. you will get a $3.00 book.

HOW TO PREVENT ACID STOMACHS AND FOOD FERMENTATION

By a Stomach Specialist.

As a specialist who has spent many years in the study and treatment of stomach troubles, I have been forced to the conclusion that most people who complain of stomach trouble possess stomachs that are absolutely healthy and normal. The real trouble, that which causes all the pain and difficulty, is acid in the stomach, usually due to, or aggravated by, food fermentation. Acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach and food fermentation causes wind which distends the stomach abnormally, causing that full bloated feeling. Thus both acid and fermentation interfere with and retard the process of digestion. The stomach is usually healthy and normal, but irritated almost past endurance by these foreign elements—acid and wind. In all such cases — and they comprise over 90 per cent. of all stomach difficulties—the first and only step necessary is to neutralize the acid and stop the fermentation by taking in a little warm or cold water immediately after eating, from one to two teaspoonfuls of bisurated magnesia, which is doubtless the best and only really effective antacid and food corrective known. The acid will be neutralized and the fermentation stopped almost instantly, and your stomach will at once proceed to digest the food in a healthy, normal manner. Be sure to ask your druggist for the bisurated magnesia, as I have found other forms utterly lacking in its peculiarly valuable properties. — F. J. G.

KEEPING THE CAMP DRY.

Useful Hint For One Night Camps in the Rain.

In selecting a camp site choose, if choice be granted you, ground that will have a slight slope away from the tent on all sides. Never pitch in a hollow or on flat ground, which catches the drainings from a watershed, however small. If your camp is to be permanent dig a trench around the tent.

To obviate the necessity of this in one night camps and still insure a dry camp in wet weather have a four inch flap of heavy canvas added to the bottom of your shelter tent. This folds under and lies flat on the ground inside the tent. The rubber blankets are then spread so as to come well over the edges of the flap, making it impossible for any water to get inside by running under.

DELIGHTS OF CANOEING.

Tilting and Upset Race Interesting Features of Lake Sports.

In the way of small water craft there is nothing quite so alive as the canoe. It has the spring of a bird over the water, the silence of a water sprite stealing through mysteries of shadow and the swiftness of a fish darting on its prey.

The canoe seems to form part of the being who propels it and lends itself to a diversity of sports not surpassed by any other craft.

One of these is tilting. At a given signal pairs of canoes dart out upon a lake into deep water, and the tournament begins. In each canoe are a skilled canoeman and a mate with a lance. The lances are long and wedded at the

CANOE SPORTS ON MOUNTAIN LAKE.

HOW TO BUILD CAMPFIRES.

The Cook Fire Hardest For Most to Manage Right.

Most campers do not know how to build a cook fire right. The lower picture in the accompanying cut shows the correct way.

Locate your fire to leeward of your tent in cool weather and to the windward when mosquitoes or other pests are about. Cut two logs about six inches in diameter and four feet long from a green or live tree. Lay them parallel to each other, about twelve inches apart at one end and six inches apart at the other, the wider end toward the wind. Bed these logs into the ground a bit or pack sand or earth next the logs on the inside and against them on the outside to prevent the fire getting under them.

Arranged in this way the wind blows the fire along between the logs. You can have a good fire, and yet you can get right up to the sides of it, having no smoke or heat to bother you.

Before you begin to cook gather a big supply of dry wood. For this fire use small pieces from the size of a lead pencil to an inch in thickness—rarely anything larger. Cut it all into short lengths, say six to ten inches long. Begin "laying" your fire from the small end of the range, being careful to cross the sticks so as to let in the air. Light it from the wide end, and the wind will do the rest.

The only thing to use in the way of a device about a cook fire, besides the cooking utensils, is what is called a "grate." It is simply three pieces of steel eighteen inches long, one inch wide and three-sixteenths of an inch thick, loosely riveted together at two places. It folds up, can be extended as desired and is a very practical thing.

The heating fire illustrated in the upper portion of the cut is intended for cold weather to reflect heat into the open tent, which should be set eight to twelve feet away.

RELIABLE CAMP FOOD.

You Had Better Stick to the Old Standbys.

Raw materials which have been brought by great labor at the paddle and under the pack to a country where fresh supplies are unobtainable are far too valuable to be wasted in unsuccessful cooking experiments.

Cornmeal, wild rice, beans, flour, bacon, sugar, tea and salt, with a bit of soda and pepper to enliven the same, and some prunes and tobacco to aid digestion, have been from the beginning and will be until the end of time all that man requires to keep him alive and working.

But man, particularly city broke man, needs more to make him really happy—his palate and his health demand something more of variety.

So, when one reads in the catalogues of dehydrated vegetables so reduced that a single pound is the equivalent of a dozen pounds of the fresh garden product; of a pound of porterhouse stewed down to a thimbleful of goo, and of a quart of turtle soup dried into an inch cube, his mouth begins to water.

But between the patent fodder in the sporting goods store and your grub sack in the wilderness should intervene the cool, dispassionate third degree of your experience, because some of 'em are good and some of 'em are not, and all of 'em must be handled right to give the best results.

Washing the Camp Dishes.

Never believe the man who tells you that sand and water are all you need to wash your dishes. Camp fare entails greasy dishes, and good soap with hot water is the only combination that will keep the dishes fit to eat out of. Neatness in camp is as essential as in the home.

SEIZING AN OPPORTUNITY.

Possibilities Inspiration Upon the Pessimistic Is a Distressful Calamity.

The chemist had finished his experiments and the result was, in his opinion, the finest salt cream on the market. Looking quite good enough to eat it was set carefully away in the pantry to harden before being packed in glass jars to be put on sale. The chemist went to bed light hearted. His weeks of hard work were over; now it only remained to collect the fortune he was certain to make.

Next morning the new maid brought on the finest doughnuts the family had ever tasted. The chemist's wife sighed rapturously, "A good cook at last, thank fortune!" Her liege lord replied hesitatingly, "Things seem to be coming our way at last, my dear."

When, a little later, he went to take a fond glance at his big pantful of cold cream he found that it had, indeed, come his way. The new cook had fried the doughnuts in it!

"Eighteen dollars for that lot of doughnuts!" he groaned.

His wife's face fell; then, woman-like, she saw an advantage in the situation.

The Way It Started.

They were leaning over the line fence, these ladylike neighbors, and they seemed to be having an argument.

"How do you know it's so?" asked one lady.

"I said it was so, didn't I?" the other came back coldly.

"Uh-huh, you did. And I suppose it's your idea that whatever you say goes?"

"Well, if I say it to you it does—it goes all over town!"

This bit of repartee started so much trouble that the police had to be summoned.

Thoughts Higher Up.

John Thompson was a good husband, but he possessed a weakness for constantly teasing his wife about dress. One day he found her sitting by the window.

"Watching the styles, Emmy?" he asked.

"Now, John, give me credit for having thoughts higher than dresses now and then," she answered.

"Then you must be thinking of a new hat," he retorted.—Lippincott's.

CARSON'S RETURN TO BELFAST MAY BE THE SIGNAL FOR AN OUTBREAK

Action of the House of Lords in Carrying Second Reading of the Home Rule Bill Has Left Ulsterites in Threatening Mood.

GUN RUNNER'S EXPLOIT

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, England, July 7.—(Special cable.)—Despite the assurances that House of Lords merely carried the second reading of the Home Rule Bill to give an opportunity for drastic amendments, word comes from Ulster this morning that the Ulsterites are in a threatening mood, and fears are expressed that Carson's return to Belfast Friday will the signal for an outbreak.

A sensational story is published here to-day that under the very noses of seven of His Majesty's warships of the destroyer class, a gun running vessel named Mabel, slipped through last night and landed many thousand rounds of modern ammunition on the beaches and rocks at various points.

There is a feeling of deep resentment against the House of Lords, whom Ulster regarded as its protector. The word "traitor" is being freely used in the north and west of Ireland to-day in regard to the Lords' action.

BELFAST, Ireland, July 7. — The National volunteers are growing amazingly. The present strength is estimated at 153,500, or an increase of 281 centres and, nearly 40,000 men since June 10. County Mayo has five thousand ex-soldiers drilling and the County of Roscommon two thousand more trained men ready to move into Mayo at brief notice. People are waiting in queues before the various Dublin tailor shops to secure admission for ordering National volunteer uniforms.

Two hundred rounds of ammunition were landed from a collier on the coast of County Down concealed in coal bags.

MINISTER NOW AN OIL BROKER

Rev. Leif Huseby of Unitarian Church, Takes Up New Calling

CALGARY, Alta., July 6—Rev. Leif Huseby is no longer Pastor of the First Unitarian Church. He has abandoned the flock, the members of which he has guided in the ways of the good for the past year, to become an oil broker. It is a far cry from the vocation of a minister of the Gospel to that of J. Rufus Walling ford, but the new financier is making good, and hands out oil certificates with the same graciousness that was so characteristic of him when he was passing out marriage certificates.

"The lure of helping to build an empire was too much for me to resist," said the former minister to a representative of The Morning Albertan, last night. "I think it must be something in my blood. My forebears were financiers, and perhaps I should have followed the commercial faith of my fathers. Yes, it is quite true that I have resigned the pastorate of the First Unitarian Church, and that I have gone into the brokerage business. I do not say that I have abandoned the ministry permanently, but there was a division in my Church over some trivial matter and just about that time oil was struck in the Dingman well. The thing appealed to me as something tremendous. The idea of doing my part in making of this country one of the great oil fields of the world possessed me, and now I am a full-fledged broker. Perhaps, after a little, when I know more about the business I will float a company of my own. I like the business tremendously."

PROTECTING ROOF AT THE MARKET SQUARE

The following clause from the report of the Property Committee to the City Council was adopted as read last night:

To the Council of the City of Peterborough:

Gentlemen, — Your Property Committee beg leave to report and recommend, as follows: (1) That in order to consider the suggestion from the Retail Merchants' Association that a strip be paved inside the present market sidewalk for rigs, and that both sidewalk and strip be covered for protection from rain, etc., the Chairman be requested to procure an estimate of the cost.

WASHBURN'S BIG CARNIVAL MAKES A HIT

Clean, Bright and Clever—Monster Collection of Attractions Delighted Hundreds of People Last Night

HERE FOR THE WEEK

Peterborough has in the past been visited by many carnival organisations; some good, some mediocre and some, even worse, depending on salacious shows, immoral dances and alleged "girl shows" for attraction, and thereby in the eyes of our people, casting odium upon the entire carnival business. An exception to the above, which is worthy of note in these columns, is the Washburn carnival, which opened its week's engagement at the Exhibition grounds last night.

To begin with, the attaches of the Washburn enterprise, from managers to working force, are ladies and gentlemen in every sense of the word. The Examiner representative was present during the process of unloading and erection of the shows, and much to his surprise, there was no intoxication, no profanity; everything seemed to move with the regularity of clockwork. And the formal opening of the carnival disclosed a total absence of suggestive shows or "oriental dancers"; no gambling devices of any nature, no raucious barkers or flashy women. The quiet, sedate and well-bred members of this organization have astonished the people of Peterborough, who, from past experience, have grown to consider most carnival people as undesirables.

The principal feature of the carnival is Mr. Washburn's own exhibition, the Trained Wild Animal Arena. Here appear Mlle. Flora, a handsome young lady who performs daring feats of training in a big cage with six Numidian lions; Princess Pauline, with a group of magnificent leopards and jaguars, one of whom "plays dead" most realistically, allowing himself to be pulled about by the tail, cuffed over the ears and otherwise mauled about with impunity; Herbertino with a den of black-maned African lions, one of whom presented marked evidences of intractability and seemed several times on the point of leaping upon his trainer; and Captain Vincent, with a troupe of polar, grisaly and cinnamon bears. Here, too, are two pretty lion cubs a month old, and their cage was the centre of attraction for the children previous to the performance.

The Motordome is another big feature, consisting of a huge wooden cup, 30 feet high and 75 feet in diameter, about the rim of which the audience stands on an elevated platform. Inside of the cup, which is well named the "saucer of death," three motorcyclists speed at a terrific rate, one above the other, the top cyclist absolutely horizontal and held to the rim of his circular prison by centrifugal force alone. A speed of nearly 80 miles an hour was attained last night by the principal rider, "Dare-devil Scott," who calmly sat erect with folded arms while his powerful machine spun around the dizzy circle. This is really the most dangerous act—to its participants—ever witnessed in this City.

Then there is Hamburg's Athletic Show, where John Kilonis, the Greek champion wrestler, holds forth and meets all comers with a cash forfeit; he is ably assisted by several physical culture experts of both sexes, who put up a clever and interesting exhibition. ext comes the Coney Island Freak Show, headed by 'Frank,' a real human curiosity, a living man turned to solid bone from head to foot, not a joint movable, even his jaws set and rigid, his vital organs protected by a solid shell of bone like a turtle's, and fed through a tube by an attendant nurse; yet, strange to say, a man of advanced education, who talked interestingly with the Examiner man and several local physicians, described his condition in scientific terms, smokes continually, and is of pronounced optimistic temperament in spite of his affliction. Here are the "electric lady"; Joe, the "lizard boy," a negro who is gradually turning white, and who is a graduate of Tuskegee University; "Bambola," a real Filipino Igorrote; the "electric lady," snake charmer, and a host of tropical birds and monkeys of rare species.

D'Almaa's Hippodrome, an exhibition of educated dogs, ponies and monkeys, aided by a funny clown; the "Trip to the Moon" and "Barrel of Fun," wherein "traveller" has many comical experiences; "Eduard the Great," a gigantic python, and several other meritorious shows, make up the remainder of the carnival while the big Ferris wheel, "ocean wave" and an elaborate merry-go-round furnish the riding devices, and "Gyp," the sagacious old elephant, carried big loads of children (and many of their elders) about the grounds all the evening.

At 10.30 Miss Elma Meier, an attractive and graceful young lady, executed a really marvellous dive of nearly 100 feet into a tank containing less than four feet of water. This in itself is a wonderful exhibition of nerve and daring, and was preceded by several styles of diving from a springboard by Miss Meier.

The Washburn shows are worthy of extensive patronage by our people. As before stated, there is absolutely no questionable feature in the organization ;the shows are clean in every detail, the ladies and gentlemen courteous and pleasant, suggestiveness gambling and rowdyism totally absent. A profitable week's business for the carnival may be safely predicted.

Utilities Commission After Hearing Superintendent's Report Decide That Revenue Would Not Justify the Expense

OTHER BUSINESS DONE

At a meeting of the Utilities Commission held yesterday afternoon a report was read from the Superintendent regarding a petition for a main on Gilchrist Street, north 123 feet to Dublin Street and 293 feet west on Dublin Street, estimating the cost of the work asked for in the petition at $562.80, and the revenue $23.34 from services and $16.50 from frontages, making a total of $39.84.

As the revenue did not, in the eyes of the Commissioners, justify the expense, the petition was not granted.

A petition for a main on Rubidge Street south, from Kirk Street, was not acted upon for the same reason. The estimated cost was 642.40, and the revenue $21.78.

After his report on the matter was read the Superintendent was instructed to lay the service requested to the Separate school. It was also agreed that the St. Vincent's Orphanage would be allowed to pay for their service by flat rate instead of by meter as heretofore.

A letter was received from the Employers' Liability Corporation, saying they were willing to pay wages and expenses to Casto, the Italian who was injured in the south end of the City a few weeks ago, to the extent of $50. It was referred to the Superintendent for a report

LATE PRISONER DEAD IN TORONTO

George Coates After Breaking Jail Here on Saturday, Was Run Over by G.T.R. Train Yesterday

MOTHER'S TOUCHING LETTER

George Coates, alias John Clarke, who escaped from the Peterborough jail on Saturday evening, died in the Parkdale Hospital, Toronto, yesterday afternoon, after having been found on the G.T.R. embankment at Swansea with both legs amputated.

Apparently he sustained his injuries while trying to beat his way to Toronto. For some time considerable difficulty was experienced in obtaining medical assistance. Finally, Dr. Hart of Dowling Avenue, was reached and met the train which was bringing Coates to the city. He died a short time after admission to Parkdale Hospital.

The authorities were confused for a time by a statement the man made to a surgeon that his name was Wilcocks, and that he lived at 186 Broadview avenue. In his clothing was found a piece of paper bearing the above name and address and part of a postal card, upon which reference was made to a wedding at Havelock, Ont.

HIS OWN HANDWRITING.

When Mr. Wilcocks examined the paper he discovered to his surprise that it was his own handwriting, but he could not recognize the deceased or recall any occasion when he had met the man.

Mr. Wilcocks, who is a travelling man, says that it is quite possible he may have met the man in the country, and that the latter had obtained his name and address with the object of calling on him the first time he came to the city.

HIS MOTHER'S LETTER.

A thorough search of the man's clothing by Inspector Verney of Cowan Avenue Police Station revealed a letter which led the police to believe that the man is George Coates of West Scranton, Pa. The letter apparently was written by Coates mother in reply to one asking for financial assistance. Coates apparently had been in trouble on two occasions, and had served terms in jail. "This is only what you will get if you don't mend your ways," wrote his mother. "God does not sleep, neither does He strive with man. Go where you are not known, live a better life, and make a man of yourself," writes his mother, who apparently had become disheartened over her son's failures to keep his promises of leading a better life.

A spread letter addressed to the same name in care of Henderson Nesbitt, Peterborough, was also found.

Chief Thompson told the Examiner he felt sure the dead man was the prisoner who sawed through the bars of the jail and made his escape rather than wait until he was taken to Central Prison where a six months' term for theft awaited him. Chief Thompson states that he saw the letter mentioned when the man was being searched, and remembers the name Coates.

APPOINTMENTS WERE NOT MADE

Mr. Thos. McCarry, of South Renfrew, is the Probable Choice for Attorney General's Position

FERGUSON'S PLUM

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, July 7.—Though it was anticipated that this morning's meeting of the Ontario Cabinet would result in appointments either on the Board of Workmen's Compensation, the Speakership, or the office of Minister of Public Works. None of these offices were filled. The chief reason is that the illness of Hon. j. J. Foy, Attorney-General, is holding back the action of the Cabinet. It is anticipated that owing to the frequent illnesses of Mr. Foy he will accept a senatorship and thus leave another vacancy in the Cabinet. Just at present Mr. Thos. McCarry, of South Renfrew, is the most popular for the attorney-generalship, while Mr. Howard Ferguson runs best chance of becoming Minister of Public Works.

Hindus Will Be Deported

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, July 7. — There is considerable gratification felt in Government circles here at the finding of the British Columbia courts upholding the order in council by which the Hindus on the Komogatu Maru are refused entrance to Canada. Action will now be taken at once to have the Hindus deported whence they came. It is feared that the Government will have to bear part at least of the costs of deportation which will probably be effected by separating the Hindus into batches and taking them away on various ships.

Board of Works to Open Them on Wednesday Evening Next—Report of Committee Adopted by Council

AREA TO BE PAVED

Below is given the report submitted by Alderman Duncan and his colleagues of the Board of Works to the City Council last night. There were present at the Council meeting, Mayor Buller, and Aldermen Saunders, Duncan, Stratton, Green, Duffus, Langford, Johnson, Anderson and McIntyre.

The whole report, with the exception of Clause Number Six passed the Council without any discussion whatever.

In connection with this matter it will be remembered that the Board of Works held a meeting a few days ago at the place where the new flag cabins are to be placed. They were met by Superintendent Coyle, of the G.T.R., who asked that the company be allowed to construct the ducket houses on Bethune street on piles fourteen feet above the ground. The report, however, received by the Council last night, recommended that the ducket houses be placed in a different situation than wished by Superintenden Coyle. Mayor Buller said that he did not think it would be wise to antagonize the G.T.R. in this as the railway had always been willing to accommodate the city, and were even now considering the proposition of the test line on the old Chemong track. While most of the aldermen agreed with him in this, they felt that the ducket house, placed as recommended by the Board of Works would be in a more commanding position and result in greater safety. They did not think that in asking the G.T.R. to move the cabins to the places specified would antagonize the railway to any extent. The report was therefore passed in its entirety.

The report of the Board of Works was as follows:

Gentlemen,—Your Board of Works beg leave to report as follows:

1. We authorized the City Engineer to write the different public utility companies and request them to furnish him with a plan of all their works on the streets, showing their location and depth and also to furnish him with plans and profiles of all future work before it is undertaken and to notify him one week ahead when they purpose beginning any work.

2. We recommend that notice is given in accordance with Section 9 of the Local Improvement Act of the intention of the Council to construct sewers on Bethune street from Sherbrooke street to Dalhousie street, and on the Monaghan Road from Homewood avenue to Walkerfield avenue.

3. We recommend that the matter of the work to be done by the Canadian Pacific Railway at the corner of Romaine street and the Monaghan Road be referred to the Legal Committee to have the work done as soon as possible as the city wishes to lay a sidewalk on that street.

4. We recommend that the Utilities Commission be requested to move the standpipes on George street near Antrim street, on Aylmer street at Wolfe street, and on Smith street at Dennistoun avenue, with the least possible delay.

5. We authorized the City Engineer to construct a sidewalk on the south side of Dublin street from Downie sreet about ninety feet west.

6. We recommend that the Grand Trunk Railway be written to and urged to have their engine house south of King street removed this year, pointing out the nuisances complained of by residents, and that the Council express its preference for the gateman's cabin at King street being moved o the north side of King street and east of the main tracks, and also that the Council consent to the Grand Trunk Railway gateman's cabin at Sherbrooke street being placed on Bethune street immediately south of the west gate on posts 14 feet high.

7. The City Engineer having reported that the Peterborough Radial Railway Company had completed their railway on George street from Lake to Romaine sreets and on Romaine street from George to Loek streets in accordance with their agreement with the city, we recommend that the Council sanction the opening of these tracks for traffic.

8. We recommend that the Bell Telephone Company be permitted to place three poles on the south side of Elm street east of Cambridge street the poles to be placed and the work to be done as directed by the City Engineer.

9. We recommend that the Mayor and Clerk execute agreements with

Council After Hearing Deputations From Women's Council and Merchant's Association Turn Down Report of Property Committee

WILL BE ENFORCED

At the regular monthly meeting of the City Council last night the Property committee brought in a report which recommended that the Council rescind the recently passed market by-law which requires all selling goods on the market to have their names on their baskets, and to have the fowl weighed. The recommendation did not meet with the approval of the Council, however, and as a result the market by-laws will not be rescinded but are still in force, and will be enforced in fnture. In connection with the matter, two deputations waited upon the Council. One was from the Retail Merchants' Association asking that the recommendation of the committee be acted upon, and the by-law rescinded, because it was hurting the local market. Mr. Thos. Barrie acted as spokesman for this deputation very ably. The other was from the Woman's Council urging that the by-laws be retained as they were very sensible and valuable ones protecting the interests of the local housewives while not in any way inconveniencing the farmers. Mrs. Davidson made a very clear presentation of their view of the question.

Mr. Barrie, speaking for the deputation from the Retail Merchants' Association, said that the Association did not want to oppose any measure that would be of advantage to the market. But the by-law calling for the weighing of fowl he did not think was of much advantage, and they had by investigating found out that many of the farmers were opposed to it. They had received 18 letters from producers objecting to it. While not so many had objected to the putting of names on their baskets, yet some ,who had been coming to the market for years were now taking their produce other places because of that restrictive regulation. As to the throwing the market open at nine o'clock, Mr. Barrie said that in Berlin, London and Hamilton, that system had been very successful. The larger the demand, naturally larger the supply. In Hamilton the finest market in the province, all restrictions had been removed with encouraging results. In concluding he said that the Retail Merchants' Association did not want to oppose any particular measure of the Council except as it effected the success and supply of the local market, in a harmful manner.

Mr. N. C. Cameron also spoke saying that some days ago a woman was "dragged into police court" for a violation of the by-law. He ventured to say that if that became known through the papers the attendance would next Saturday decrease twenty per cent.

Mrs. (Rev.) J. C. Davidson speaking for the deputation from the Women's Council, said that first of all they wanted a market clean and fit for women. It didn't seem fair to amend the by-laws after six weeks' trial. If it were given a years' trial then it would be time to judge the by-laws, and act accordingly. If these by-laws were enforced, as they are not at present, the market would be patronized by more sellers and buyers. They thought that the market by-laws were splendid ones and should be given a fair trial with good enforcement. If the buyers were allowed into the market at nine o'clock what would be the result to the housewife who could not get to the market until ten o'clock? The big buyers would get on the market at 9 o'clock and would buy up the supply before the housewives could reach it, and the result would be that those who had to do their own housework, and could least afford to pay the high prices, would have to buy from the larger buyers and merchants at increased figures.

Mayor Buller — I agree with you that the by-laws haven't had a fair trial. I think that the weighing of the fowl is a good thing. The putting of names on the basket is not a great hardship, and if the people have things to sell they ought not to be ashamed to put their names on their baskets. If some women are brought into the police court and fined, and their names get into the paper it will be worth several hundred dollars worth of advertising. Every body will know she is doing business

After some discussion on clauses 2 and 3 of the Property committee's report it was decided that no action would be taken in the matter, and consequently the by-laws remain in force. Curiously enough the motion to turn down the report of the committee in this regard (which was moved by Ald. Johnston) was seconded by Ald. Langford, who is chairman of the Property committee.

Thus within the last few months the Property committee have gone in-

STREET PAVING.

Our morning contemporary has had several inspiring articles lately on street paving and it appears to have taken up the fight for a particular system of paving construction irrespective of the merits of any other pavement.

The paper or its contributing editor, whichever the case may be, is evidently much peeved to note that The Examiner is exerting its influence with the taxpayers of Peterborough to do away with the possibility of unworthy pavements being laid on the streets of this city, in preference to pavements which have been given the right-of-way in all the leading cities of this continent.

We note with interest the nicely arranged cost table in the editorial columns of the morning paper, and we view with horror the millions (or is it billions) of dollars spent by the city of Buffalo in repairing its asphalt pavements.

—After reminding its readers that matter appearing the its editorial columns must be classed as "patriotic" it goes on to draw a most horrifying spectacle of Peterborough trying to raise a huge sum of money in order to repair its pavement.

This is one of the very arguments propounded by The Examiner. We do not wish to see inferior grades of asphalt or any other poor material used in the construction of Peterborough streets.

It is evident that the morning paper is placing an abundance of reliance in the matter submitted by its contributing editor and this probably accounts for the rank injustice shown in the article published on July 4th.

When the contributing editor copied his data from the Annual Report, Department of Public Works, Bureau of Engineering, Buffalo, he found his cost table under the heading—"Cost of asphalt repairs." During the journey to the editorial sanctum of the morning paper, however, the caption seems to have undergone a remarkable change, so that when the cost table somes out in print, it reads "Repairs to Patch Top Surface of Trinidad Asphalt Pavement," which is the pavement already used in Peterborough, and no doubt printed to mislead.

When it is considered that up to the time specified in the last table—1908, Buffalo had streets constructed of every known form and quality of artificial or manufactured asphalt, as well as the Trinidad natural asphalt, it seems rather brutal of the morning paper to place the cost for repairing all the asphalt pavements at the door of the Trinidad product.

Now had the morning paper printed a table showing the cost of repairs later than 1908, when Buffalo commenced laying nothing but Trinidad pavement, we might be able to come to some happy conclusion regarding the merits of that material.

If the morning paper is not prejudiced the least little bit in favour of any particular material, then it has nothing against the Trinidad asphalt, with which our present streets are paved. This being the case, we wonder why, with the wealth of information at its command, the morning paper didn't borrow the Annual Report of the Buffalo Department of Public Works, and after a perusal of same, reprint the statistics showing that the average life of Trinidad asphalt pavement in the City of Buffalo has been over 10 years. Is not such information of interest to the taxpayers of Peterborough? Or, perhaps such matter is not "patriotic" enough.

In reference to the morning paper's kindly suggestion that we write the city officials of London for information, this is made quite unnecessary by a recent visit of two of our aldermen, accompanied by our City Engineer, to that very city, and we trust that the information they gathered there will prove of value to those most concerned.

If the morning paper will ascertain the true facts regarding Richmond street (especially that section near the C.P.R. depot), find out what material was used in its construction and get a line on its present condition and then give these facts to its readers, we shall place some little faith in that "patriotic editorial" idea.

We do not distinctly advocate the use of any particular paving construction, but we do feel that if the present system is satisfactory, and this appears to be the fact both here and in other large cities which have a wider experience than Peterborough, then why make a change?

It is a matter the Council will go into thoroughly, and it makes no difference to The Examiner which system of paving construction is used so long as we get the best as shown by the experience of large users and the statistics gathered therefrom.

A NEW PROHIBITION LAW

(Montreal Herald.)

Many people have thought that the temperance party in Ontario is considerably in advance of the times in advocating the abolition of bars through the province. That proposal however is a mild one compared to the prohibition law just passed in the United States, for it fixes the punishment of first offenders at fine and imprisonment in the county jail, and of second offenders at fine and imprisonment in the State penitentiary. The offences include shipping alcoholic drinks to those who would sell them, and printing adpertisements of liquors in newspapers, or in circulars or posters. It is unlawful for a druggist to sell, either by prescription or otherwise, any whiskey, brandy or ale or any other intoxicating beverages. Druggists may, however, sell alcohol on a physician's prescription, setting forth the reasons for it use, provided the prescription is not issued to a habitual user of alcohol. Those who wish alcohol to burn in a spirit lamp must make affidavit that they do not intend to drink it, and records must be kept of all sales. We are told that throughout the United States prohibitionists are awaiting the outcome of the law with deep interest, some being afraid that those zealous in a good cause may have overreached themselves. Canadians will be no less interested, for while the cause of temperance appears to have met with a setback in Ontario, temperance sentiment is in reality growing in power all the time not only in Ontario, but throughout the Dominion.

BY-PRODUCTS OF THE CAMPAIGN.

(Toronto Globe.)

The by-products of the Provincial campaign are more important to the political parties and more significant to the people of Ontario than are the obvious results of the election itself. The election marked for the time the success of one party and the defeat of the other, but the campaign set the permanent issues in a clearer, steadier light, and discovered more completely than has been done before the potent factors making for success on one side and for defeat on the other. The by-products are of enduring value.

(1) One thing the campaign has done supremely is to set forth Mr. Rowell, not before his personal and political friends merely, but in the eyes of all Canada, as a leader free from chicanery and claptrap, a statesman having at once the wider vision and mastery of details, and a gentleman to whom, even in defeat, the vulgarities of the boor, which others practice in their daily triumph, are utterly impossible. For resourcefulness, capacity and incorruptible integrity he stands in the very forefront.

(2) The campaign also discovered and brought into public view and encouraging number of capable and purposeful men who, though many of them were defeated in the election, will count none the less in the fight for progressive legislation which has only begun. Windsor and the two Brants took their places deliberately, having committed themselves and their elected representatives up to the hilt to the programme of reform along the various social, educational, economic and industrial lines. But the stand industrial lines. But the stand enclies and the type of leaders they produced make this campaign, so far as Liberalism is concerned, not an isolated and finished incident, but a resolute and progressive movement.

(3) A third result is the very plain evidence that the organized liquor thaffic has broken completely and forever with the Liberal party. It organized its own machine more than two years ago, to intrigue within the lines of the Liberal organization, to seduce Liberal newspapers from their party allegiance, to compass by its own agencies the defeat of candidates favourable to the Liberal programme, and now, if possible, to force, directly or indirectly, the withdrawal of Mr. Rowell from the leadership of the progressive party in Ontario. It is altogether probable that Sir James Whitney and others prominent in the Conservative ranks were entirely sincere when on the eve of the election they frankly predicted a doubling of Rowell's supporters in the Legislature. Some of them, like leaders on Conservative newspapers, feared the Government's defeat. They did not know, any more than Mr. Rowell and the Liberals knew the range and efficiency of the machine operated by the liquor traffic and the allied trades. The officials of the traffic kept their own counsel, played their own game, handled their own funds, and undeniably won their own prize. They are now masters of the situation as never before in Ontario.

(4) And quite as undeniably the Government and the Conservative party have the organized and self-interested liquor traffic on their hands. Of course, by the help of the liquor interests they have succeeded in holding office, but their might have been some chance for them to exercise power had they failed. When the test comes it will be found that the Whitney Government has a tiger by the tail. The now dominant privilged interests will not be as docile and patient and easily hoodwinked as the friends of temperance in the days when the Whitney Govrnment was supposed honestly to care about temperance reform. Many Conservative temperance leaders have now broken with the Hanna group that betrayed them and with the Premier who offered them only insults.

(5) The entire circle of Governmental service—education, agriculture, justice, finance, labour—suffer for want of leadership. In the new Parliament the Liberals must press still further these other features, economis, and industrial, in their programme. But it will not be forgotten that Sir James Whitney and his Government hold their places by the corporate support of the liquor traffic; that for a mess of pottage they sold their party's birthright, and that through the life-time of another Parliament, by the combined votes of misled temperance Conservatives, and the wide-awake liquor party, the bar-room is legalized to carry on its wasteful and ruinous trade. When Kentucky, even Kentucky, rebels against whiskey rule, will Ontario much longer submit?

To Look For Hulls.

SARNIA, Ont., July 7.—Word was received here yesterday that a survey party will patrol a considerable portion of Lake Huron in the vicinity of Goderich, where some of the boats lost in the disastrous storm of November last are supposed to be. The Canadian Government already has a survey boat in that neighborhood investigating reports to the effect that the hulls of the steamers Wexford, McGean and Carruthers are lying just off Naftel's Point.

To Force Local Killing.

CHATHAM, Ont., July 7.—A proposition was brought up at the meeting of the City Council last night to inaugurate a movement whereby all of the cattle and hogs for home consumption must be slaughtered at the local abbatoir where there is a Government inspection and thereby protect local consumers from diseased meat. This will be investigated and reported upon.

SPLENDID ADDRESS ON THE MAKING OF A NATION

Mr. Jos. Wearing, B.A., Spoke in the Murray Street Baptist Church on Sunday Last.

REMARKS APPRECIATED

Mr. Joseph Wearing B.A., gave a most interesting address on "The Making of a Nation," in the Murray Street Baptist Church, on Sunday. He spoke from the text: "Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people."—Prov. 14—34.

You will notice that this is a straight declaration without any qualification whatever. There is no quibbling or equivocation about it at all. In this sentence Solomon delivers a final judgment he has reached after a certain definite process of reasoning. It is impossible to say, of course, what the exact path was that his mind followed in reaching this conclusion, but it is quite probable that the reasoning was something like this: "Righteousness tendeth to life"; as Solomon tells us himself, in another chapter of this same Book of Proverbs, and we here in this Church know that without life and indeed "fullness of life," there can be no growth, deevlopment, attainment, or exaltation, either for a man or a nation. Looking at it now from another augle we learn that "the soul that sinneth, it shall die." It is true that this axiomatic truth was not proclaimed by Solomon in these exact words, which are from the life or pen of the prophet Ezekiel, but his writings reveal in many places the same thought working in the mind. In this case, too, our reason prompts us to accept the statement without challenge and we know also that what is deadly to the soul of an individual is just as deadly to the soul of a nation; which, after all is simply a mighty individual. Reasoning, then, from these two fundamental principles, "Righteousness tendeth to life," and "The soul that sinneth, it shal die," we easily and quite naturally come to the logical conclusion that "Righteousness exalteth a nation," or, in other words, quickens it with life, and development, and power; but, on the other hand, "sin is a reproach to any people," because it signifies weakness, and decay, and death.

My purpose is to inquire briefly into the truth of the statements contained in our text, and afterwards to seek an application of those statements with respect to our own fair Dominion; for, as young men and women, (and I am sure we are all young in heart, if not in years, as those who are about to "go in and possess the land," we cannot fail to be more or less concerned about her future welfare. Whether in the years to come she shall be exalted among the nations of the earth, or whether, instead, she shall be an object of reproach before all the world.

Righteousness exalteth a nation. This was the opinion of King Salamon, often reputed the wisest man who ever lived. However, it should be observed that men have not always agreed with this opinion of Salomon, and, as a matter of fact, very different views have been held by very sagacious men at different periods of history and in different parts of the world.

For example, the ancient Greeks would probably have said "Perfection exalteth a Nation." They believed that the ideal state should consist of a small, but thoroughly organized community, in which the men most richly endowed by nature—and only these—were trained to the highest point of physical and mental development. This was the Greek system of selection and concentration, a system which produced Plato, Aristotle, Demosthenes, Sophocles, and Phidias, probably the greatest philosophers, orators, dramatists and sculptors that the world has ever seen. You would say "a great system!" Yes, a great system! But the system failed because it lacked what is the very essence of Christianity—the spirit—universal brotherhood.

In the first place, this system demonstrated that a large majority of those lying in the state should be serfs, and slaves; men condemned to ignorance and degradation; forced to do all the rough labour and perform all the menial tasks; this, that the favoured few who had inherited the richest physical and intelectual gifts should have ample leisure for self-development and culture. In the second place, this system developed a number of small, isolated communities, which cared nothing for any other community but its own, and in which the citizens became selfish, proud, arrogant, and recognized no friendship outside their own city state, and treating all but their own fellow-citizens as aliens and even enemies. Civil war was the bane of Greece. Philip of Macedon, coming from the north, would have met the same fate as Xerxes who came to destruction, from the east, if the city states had been united.

The trouble with Greece was that while the body politic was splendid in exterior, it was at the same time, rotten at the core. Aristides was banished because his fellow-citizens tired of having a "just" man in their midst. Socrates, who clearly anticipated Christianity, was forced to drink the poisoned hemlock, because, as the Athenians said, he made a public nuisance of himself with his preaching. Greece flourished for a time and her radiance was diffused over all the world, but she flourished as certain plants flourish, on the decaying vegetation beneath. Finally, her sin became a reproach to her people, and she perished.

Righteousness exalteth a nation. If we had lived in the Middle Ages, instead of at the time of ancient Greece, we would very likely have heard that the accumulation of wealth and the expansion of territory exalt a nation. Surely the statesmen of Spain, for example, would have said this. Before the destruction of that magnificent fleet (the Invincible Armada") which Philip sent to crush Elizabeth, Spain was probably the wealthiest country in Europe, and undoubtedly the most influential. Her galleons went from the shores of this continent, laden to the water's edge, with solid bars of gold and ingots of the purest silver, (though it is true that because of men like Drake and Frobisher some of these galleons never reached their native shores. Right now they are trying to raise some of them in the harbour of Cadiz). On the continent of Europe, too, the armies of Spain were everywhere invincible, and victory after victory added glory and power to the nation.

A great historian, writing of that period, says: "Spain was at this moment the mightiest of European powers." If ever a nation was apparently exalted surely it was Spain, the mistress of the Middle Ages. I said "apparently exalted" because we know that she fell, and fell most ingloriously—robbed of her territories, stripped of her power, shorn of her glory. Her exaltation was like that of a giant balloon seen to soar high towards the heavens, glittering in the brilliant sunlight, and then, suddenly, to burst. With the acquisition of wealth her people became luxurious, frivolous, and indolent; losing the strength, dignity and manhood that had made them great; and with the increase of influence and power, her citizens became oppressive, intolerant, cruel; devising the most agonizing instruments of torture for those who did not accept the general beliefs of the time, or were unwilling to submit to the yoke of Rome. At last the sin of Spain became a reproach to her people and she died, and has been dead ever since.

The question naturally presents itself, why should righteousness alone exalt a nation? We have seen that other attributes have failed. Righteousness alone can exalt a nation because God, who is himself the pinnacle of all perfection, the zenith of glory and honour, the source of dominion and power, demands from men, everywhere, an absolute surrender to his inscrutable will, and an entire conformity to his supreme law. To the poor in spirit and not to the proud of heart, is the kingdom of heaven to be given. It is the meek and not the rebellious who shall inherit the earth. It is those who hunger and thirst after righteousness who shall be filled, and not those whose desire is for the riches of this world. It is the pure in heart who shall see God, and not the great in intellect or power. It is those who are persecuted for righteousness sake who shall walk with God when their persecutors have gone to their reward. Christ, Himself, declared the truth for nations, as for men, when He said: "He that humbleth himself shall be exalted, and he that exalteth himself shall be abased."

"The tumult and the shouting dies,
The captains and the kings depart,
Still stands thine ancient sacrifice,
An humble and a contrite heart."

It is a good thing to bring home a truth to one's self, and I wonder if we cannot find a lesson or two in our text which would well apply to our own country.

It is, of course, that the Greek system of government no longer prevails, and that the vain glory of old Spain has long since passed away; but have we not right here in our own country certain tendencies we would do well to consider: a tendency to put perfection, or, as we call it, success, together with wealth and power before righteousness. Ours is a young country, which is fast growing up, and this rapid growth involves a lot of pushing and elbowing, and shouldering. The strong are very apt to jostle the weak, and the clever are very likely to take advantage of the dull. We live in what are called strenuous times, in which only the fittest survive in the mad race for success. Remorseless competition all around us, is ever squeezing out the least capable and organized specialization is tending more and more to condemn the majority to heavy drudgery and to give the power and authority to the few. The danger, my friends, is that in the strain and stress of rapid development and the surge and sweep of onward progress the hearts of our people may become hard and bitter, cold and revengeful, and their natures lose the tenderness, sympathy, compassion and love, which make life sweet. God forbid that this should occur.

We are proud of our great Dominion, and well we may be. Forty-seven years ago last Wednesday we attained our majority. Our youth had been full of vicissitudes, and on that day when we leaped into being as the Dominion of Canada the outlook appeared exceedingly doubtful, as those of us know who have read the pre-Confederation debates. But with the responsibility of nationhood and self-government our fathers took fresh courage and renewed their strength. To-day our glorious heritage is a country towards which the people of many lands look with the same eagerness that the Israelites did towards fair Canaan, centuries ago; and surely no one thinks that this period of financial depression will seriously affect our real growth. No, it will help it.

The eyes of the world are upon us. The "Maple Leaf" is everywhere a symbol of freedom, of opportunity, of independence; it is for us to say whether it shall also be a smbol of righteousness. If you want to read the ultimate fate of any nation, read the Book of Isaiah. At the beginning of the 10th Chapter, you will see the end of the nation that forgets its duty to man and God: "Woe unto them that decree unrighteous decrees and that write grievances that they have prescribed.

To turn aside the needy from judgment and to take away the right from the poor of my people, that widows may be their prey, and that they may rob the fatherless!

And what will ye do in the day of visitation and in the desolation which cometh from afar? To whom will ye flee for help? And where will ye leave your glory?"

In comparison with this, read part of the 33rd Chapter: "And the work of righteousness shall be peace, and the effect of righteousness, quietness, and assurance for ever."

In conclusion, I would say that exaltation can only come to our country with the allegiance of our people with the "Prince of Peace," He, who voluntarily left the throne of glory to serve the children of earth, and who, by this supreme act of self-abnegation, raised Himself to the highest height of transcendent exaltation. Our people must learn from Jesus that it is better to give than to receive; that it is only by self-sacrifice that we gain; that we must deny ourselves many of the fruits of earth in order to possess the hope of heaven; that we must be known as people of integrity, faithfulness and honour, aiming at peace, amity, and concord with all men, if from the bosom of our land there would rise springs of sympathetic and universal brotherhood, which would hear our ships, our state into the measureless ocean of God's love; that, finally, whether as individuals, or as a nation, we must spurn the very things which exalt us in the eyes of men and of nations, and stand at judgment without reproach through the redeeming work of the matchless Son of God, if we would at last join that exalted host, which "with the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, shall shout at the marriage supper of the lamb, "Alleluia! for the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth."

To close, I would repeat with all earnestness the invocation of one of our poets, which, I am sure, voices the sentiments of everyone here:

"Father in Heaven, who lovest all,
Oh help thy children when they call,
That they may build from age to age
An undefiled heritage.

Teach us to hear thy yoke in youth,
With steadfastness and careful truth,
That in our time thy grace may give
The truth whereby the naions live."

BUGGY FRAGMENTS COLLECTED YESTERDAY

The fragments of the buggy in which James Cowie was driving on July 1st, and was struck by the G.T.R. noon train at the Monaghan Road, were collected yesterday and carried away. The top, the box and wheels were all separated; in fact the vehicle was simply reduced to matchwood. The buggy belonged to Arthur Kennedy.

DANGER FROM THE INCINERATOR SPARKS IS NOW REMEDIED

A letter was read at the council meeting last night from Messrs. Peck, Kerr & McElderry, on behalf of the Alfred McDonald estate, informing the council that two fires had been started on the McDonald Estate by sparks from the incinerator. The letter also stated that under present conditions a north west wind caused sparks from the incinerator to travel as far as the lumber mills.

The Mayor informed the council that the matter had been attended to and the danger eliminated by putting a screen in the smoke stack of the incinerator.

PERSONNEL OF THE GAY PARTY ON THE THAMES

LONDON, July 6.—The body of Mitchell, the bandsman who lost his life while attempting to rescue Sir Denis Anson, who had jumped overboard from a launch on a woman's dare early on Friday morning, was recovered to-day. The body of Sir Denis Anson has not yet been found. The tragedy occurred during the trip of a gay party which left Westminster Bridge between midnight and one o'clock on Friday morning.

Considerable secrecy has been maintained as to the identity of those composing the party, but it is now known that there were fourteen men and women on the boat in addition to the crew, seven bandsmen and three waiters. The hosts were Sir Denis Anson and Count Constantin Benckendorff, son of the Russian Ambassador at London, who made a gallant attempt to save the lives of Sir Denis and Mitchell. The guests were Raymonr Asquith, son of the Premier, and Mrs. Asquith, Lady Diana Manners, the beautiful daughter of the Earl of Rutland; Jasper Ridley, brother of Viscount Ridley and brother-in-law of Count Constantin, and Mrs. Ridley; Miss Iris Tree, daughter of Sir Beerbohm Tree, the actor-manager; Edward Horner; Mrs. Hart Davis, sister of A. D. Cooper; Miss Nancy Cunard, daughter of Sir Bache and Lady Cunard, who was formerly Miss Maud Burke, of Chicago; the Countess Pourtelek and her brother and Claude Russell.

The dress coat which had been worn by Sir Denis is in possession of the police. It is torn at the back, and it is suggested that this was caused by the efforts which were made to prevent Anson from diving into the water.

Mitchell, the plucky bandsman who jumped after Anson against the advice of his fellow-musicians, had just returned from a holiday on which he had been sent by the management of the Drury Lane Theatre because he showed a tendency to tuberculosis. He was 25 years of age, and leaves a widow and two small children.

The chief officer of the British Columbia Department of Agriculture declared that the fruit crop of the province will this year break all records.

Work on the Ogden Point breakwater, near Victoria, is progressing rapidly. In the month of May, 54,144 tons of rock were dumped on the site.

Good progress is being made with grading operations on the C.N.R. cut through Saanich peninsula, and engineers say the end of the work is in sight.

Dandelion Salad.

Pick over and wash very carefully, using only the tender inner leaves; lay in cold water to become crisp, then place in salad bowl and grate a little onion over. Dress with one tablespoonful of oil to three of vinegar, adding salt, pepper, and a little sugar—about one tablespoonful of sugar to every half cupful of the dressing.

MAPLE LAYER CAKE.

Cream a cupful of butter and two cupfuls of sugar (granulated), add a cupful of milk or water, 3 eggs (beaten separately), a pinch of salt, and 3 cupfuls of flour, in which have been sifted 3 teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Bake in layers. For the filling: boil 1 pound of maple sugar (broken in small bits) in just enough water to keep from burning. When it will spin a thread, remove from the fire, and stir until it begins to cool; do not allow it to harden. Then add slowly the stiffly beaten whites of 2 eggs and 3 tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Spread between the layers, and sprinkle thickly with some finely chopped nutmeats. Cover the top and sides with any good plain white icing.

MARKET BY-LAWS WILL REMAIN ON STATUTES

to the matter thoroughly in the first place, and out of a number of proposals submitted to them they selected the best, and added to them from their own judgment. Some of the recommendations of Sanitary Inspector Spence including the cleaning of fowl before they were brought to the market, were not recommended to the Council, although only a fter hot discussion in the committee stages of the matter. Finally the by-law now in force was drafted, recommended to the Council and passed, to come into effect on the first day of May. At first the by-law was not enforced, then a few days ago two women were charged in police court with selling goods without complying to the market regulations. Magistrate Dumble seemed to have no choice but to find them guilty when Mr. C. N. Cameron appeared in the court vouchsafing the information that the by-law under which they were charged, would in all probability be rescinded at the next Council meeting on the recommendation of the Property committee, on whose suggestion the Council had made the regulations law. Thus the first effort made to have the by-law enforced was abruptly brought to a halt and has been halted ever since. Last night the final chapter of the matter was completed when the Council agreed with the deputation from the women that the by-laws had not been given a fair trial yet, that they were good by-laws and that they did not think it right to rescind them. The case now awaiting judgment in the police court can therefore now be settled and the officials can go about their duty to see that the by-laws are enforced. And dealers will have to wait until ten o'clock a.m. to buy on the market.

The two clauses included in the Property committee's report dealing with the matter was as follows:

2. That, to meet the wishes of the Merchants' Association, the by-law compelling sellers of food to weigh their fowl and to have tickets attached to them showing the weight and compelling sellers to have their names and addresses attached to their baskets be rescinded.

3. That the Market by-law be amended to accede to the request that dealers be allowed to buy on the market after 9 o'clock a.m.

ONCE AGAIN IT IS THE QUESTION OF PLUMBING INSPECTOR

Council Refuses to Make Mr. P. Thompson Plumbing Inspector and Returns Report to the Property Committee

A hornet's nest was stirred up in the Council meeting last night when the Property committee brought in a recommendation that Peter Thompson, Asst.-Plumbing Inspector, be appointed Plumbing Inspector.

Ald. Duncan at once took objection to taking action in accordance with a report. Mr. Thompson, he said, hadn't been doing his work satisfactorily. He did not see how members of the Council, knowing the manner in which Mr. Thompson had acted in the past, and was acting in the present, and knowing, too, that the City was at present threatened by a law suit as a result of his inefficiency, could rise to speak in favour of his being appointed pluming inspector.

Ald. Stratton—Well at present the City has no plumbing inspector. I do not agree with the suggest ion that the City Engineer be made plumbing inspector because he has already all the work that he can attend to. What I suggest is to make Mr. Thompson plumbing inspector and then if he does not do his work satisfactorily, get some one who does.

Ald. Johnston felt that the thing should be threshed out in committee. "Before the next Council meeting there will be a Property committee meeting," he said. "Let Mr. Thompson be asked to come to this meeting (on pain of dismissal' interjected Ald. Anderson) and thresh the matter out face to face."

On his motion the matter was referred back to the committee.

WILL STRENGTHEN THE POSITION OF THE CITY

Mr. G. N. Gordon, City Solicitor, wrote the council last night suggesting some changes in the agreement of the city with Messrs. Foley & Gleeson Paving Company. The guarantee of the company, he thought, should cover any defects in the completion of any part of the work, or any failure of the work to fully perform and endure the service for which it was intended for the space of five years. He also suggested a couple of other changes in the wording of the agreement that would put the city in a much stronger position if inserted.

It was reported by the City Clerk that the guarantee had been returned to the company to have the changes inserted.

Oil experts are alleged to have said that, according to present indications, the Graham Island oil field will be the most extensive in America.

TENDERS FOR STREET PAVING ASKED FOR the Grand Trunk Railway tracks on from the Railway Board permitting the city to construct sewers under the Grand Trunk Railway racks on McDonnel street and Park street, and a drain under their track on Charlotte street and to attach the Corporate Seal to the agreements.

10. We instructed the City Engineer to insert a clause in the contracts for street paving providing that nine hours shall constitute a day's work.

11. We instructed the City Engineer to ask for tenders for the castings required by the City, the tenders to be in accordance with the plans and specifications to be furnished by the Engineer.

12. We instructed the City Engineer with reference to the specifications for street paving, that the guarantee period be five years, that a surety bond be accepted for the guarantee during the maintenance period, that if the City Solicitor saw no objection that the tenders give prices for the work as a unit and also for the concrete base and the wearing surface separately and that tenders be received up to July 8th.

13. We recommend that the Chairman and the City Engineer be authorized to arrange for a supply at the sewerage pumping station while the Engineer is away on holidays, and that the supply be paid on the certificate of the City Engineer.

14. We recommend that notice be given in accordance with Section 9 of the Local Improvement Act of the intention of the Council to pave the following streets:

Brock street from Water to George streets.

Brock street from George to Aylmer streets.

WILL ASK TO HAVE DANGEROUS SPIKES REMOVED

From Poles of the Peterboro' Light and Power Co., and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company

At last night's Council meeting the following report of the Power Committee was adopted:

Your Power Committee beg leave to report as follows:

1. We instructed the Clerk to write to the Peterborough Light and Power Co. and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company's Telegraph and other companies having poles on the streets and request them to remove spikes from poles that are in the sidewalks up to the height of six feet.

2. George S. Kingdon desiring to increase the motor capacity at his cooper shop applied to the Peterborough Light and Power Co. for the increased current required, but the Company declines to instal the transformers and make the connections unless the city agrees to pay the cost estimated at $150.00 if the city takes over the property of the company. We recommend that if the city takes over the property of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, that Company be paid the cost of the transformers and of making the connections, not to exceed $150.00.

3. In order to settle a claim made by I. N. Watson who fell from a Hydro-Electric pole on George street, we recommend that a cheque for $100 be issued to the City Solicitor.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

W. J. JOHNSTON, Chairman.

A MUTINY IN HUERTA'S RANKS

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, D.C., July 7. — Despatches from Vera Cruz tell of a mutiny among the Federal Mexicans in the earth works facing that of the United States' post. General Funston has authorized his men to accept the surrender of these men when they offer themselves on the usual conditions. This part of the Federal force was supposed to be the flower of Huerta's army and their disaffection has caused great surprise here.

Seventeenth Annual Camp of The Y.M.C.A. Now In Full Swing

Splendid Time Being Enjoyed by the Boys at Sandy Point—Reminiscences of Past Camps.

THE FIRST "Y" OUTING

The seventeenth annual camp of the Boys' Department of the Peterborough Young Men's Christian Association is now in full swing, the boys having arived Monday, June 29th, at noon per steamer Manita. The advance guard arrived Friday and had everything in readiness for the reception of the main contingent.

Their first day in camp was rather damp and gloomy, but that simply serves to accentuate the beauty of the days of sunshine when they come.

We bow our heads to the men of the next generation and bid them welcome to Stoney Lake, and wish, in all reverence, that we were boys once more, that we might enjoy the advantages they possess.

The officers of the Association are to be commended for their enterprise in keeping up these annual camps. We realize they cannot be carried on without much labour and expense, but the results obtained far outweigh the trouble taken.

The primary object of these outings is to provide a well-spent vacation for boys who most need it, and who, under ordinary circumstances, could not get it under the proper conditions, or possibly not at all.

The health of the boy is the first consideration. Without health he has nothing. All things being equal the healthy boy has a better chance in this world than his weaker brother. He makes more rapid progress in school, standing higher in his classes, and after graduation he is surer of receiving employment, and is able to render to his employer a better day's work.

An outing of this kind does a boy a great deal of good. It knocks many a rough corner off his social makeup. No greater cure for selfishness could be imagined. Well does the writer remember a case in point during one of the early camps.

The mother of one of the boys sent up a box heaping with red rosy apples, and juicy turn-overs, enough for every boy in the camp. Instead of dividing his treasure among his companions he hid the box under his bed. That efening a "council of war" was held, and before morning, box and all disappeared never to be seen again. Instead of becoming the most popular boy in camp he chose to be the opposite, a lesson he never forgot.

One special feature of the camp is the attention paid to athletic sports of all kinds, particularly swimming. It has been truthfully stated that no boy is properly equipped for his journey through life without a knowledge of how to save his life should the occasion demand it.

Of equal importance is the moral training imparted, under the leadership of Christian men.

The first camp was held in '98 under the leadership of Messrs. G. H. Williamson and W. J. Stubbs. Mr. Williamson was Secretary of the Association, and had command on shore, while Mr. Stubbs was part owner of the sailing yacht "Pleo," and was boys, having command while on operating it for the benefit of the water.

Early in the month of June Messrs. Baker and Stubbs were delegated to journey north and spy out the land. They chose Sandy Point as the most desirable, and it has been used ever since. They reported it "flowing with milk and honey," (a herd of 150 cows greeted them on the beach, while they were stung by 20 bees.)

While on their trip of discovery they were royally entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Northey, Sr., who lived on the Burleigh Road. Their son, Mr. Robert Northey, now resides on the same farm.

This first camp was held before the days of the canal between Peterborough and Lakefield. The sailing boat had to be carted from Peterborough to Young's Point, the boys were brought up in omnibusses. The yacht was put in the water near the lock chamber. Just across the canal a young lady lay on her death bed and the boys were requested to make no noise. The whole operation of launching, loading and embarking was carried out in death-like silence, but once they were out on Clear Lake, a mighty roar rent the air, the result of their pent-up enthusiasm. The sail to Sandy Point was not devoid of excitement. The last boat in tow was a punt carrying some planks, a stove, some bread, and, perched on top, Milan Hamilton (now deceased). About half way up it became detached and the work of rescuing "Robinson Crusoe" proved great sport for the boys.

The Superintendent of the City Water Works, Mr. Ross Dobbin, was one of the members of the first camp, and was the designer of the prospectus, on the back of which was inscribed "No Back Out."

We hope the boys of this year's camp may have a pleasant outing.—Monty La Rock.

All Saints' Choir Moonlight Was Big Success

The first annual moonlight under the auspices of All Saints' Church Choir was held last evening per steamer Stoney Lake, and was patronized by a large number of the congregation and their friends. The boat left the Wharf just after 8 p.m. and proceeded slowly across the lake in the twilight of a most glorious evening. The Maple Leaf Band had been engaged and discoursed sweet music for the pleasure of al on board. Then the moon came out in all its glory, and with the searchlight playing on the smaller craft dotted here and there, presented a view of the river in all its beauty. Dancing was indulged in by the younger people and songs and choruses sung by lusty voices and appreciated by a number who had gathered below. Refreshments were served and the return journey was made about 11 p.m., all being well satisfied with their delightful trip. The Captain and his crew left nothing to be desired in their courtesy to all on board.

PRESENTATIAN TO MR. FAWCETT

Retiring Engineering of Water Works Department Honoured

At 8 o'clock last evening the employees of the Peterborough Waterworks met in Colemans' parlours in honour of Mr. A. G. Fawcett, the Superintendent Engineer who has lately resigned.

After a bountiful supper had been served, Mr. E. Massey Cooke presented Mr. Fawcett with a magnificent ebony-filled suitcase and read the following address:

Mr. A. G. Fawcett, A.M.I.C.E., Superintending Engineer of the Peterborough Waterworks:

We, the undersigned, ask you to accept the accompanying suitcase as a mark of the appreciation and esteem in which we have held you for the past three years that you have been Superintendent of our Department.

Much as we regret your departure, we have, nevertheless, the satisfaction of knowing that you do so to accept a more responsible and highly remunerative position than that which you held.

Wishing you every success and hoping that a full and steady stream of prosperity, under high pressure, may flow your way in your new life.

E. Massey Cooke, Assistant Engineer.
Dave Oliver, General Foreman.
J. Meharry, Trench Foreman.
J. Curran, Pipe Layer.
E. Park, S. P. Layer.
B. Robertson, S. P. Layer.
T. Scott, Pump Runner.
M. Wainwright, Pump Runner.
G. Grist, Turn-cock.

Mr. Fawcett replied in fitting terms saying he was sorry to leave a community of men who had worked with him in such perfect harmony. He thought he should never be more pleased than to have them working under him again were it practical, and in this the gathering signified their concurrence by hearty applause.

The remainder of the evening was agreeably spent in social intercourse, and the gathering broke up shortly before eleven o'clock.

$500 WAS SUBSCRIBED AFTER VESTRY MEETING

A vestry meeting was held in St. Johns' Church last night to consider certain improvements to the property. There was a large attendance and much interest was manifested in the proceedings. A disinclination was shown to provide funds for necessary improvements by mortgage and it was determined to make temporary improvements to the organ, to inaugurate a fund for its rebuilding and to receive subscriptions for these and other objects. Over $500 was received in subscriptions after the meeting, three gentlemen giving $100 each.

FORMER LOCAL TEACHER WAS A POSSIBILITY

The Toronto Telegram says:

On a three to two vote at the Management Committee of the Board of Education this afternoon, Mr. D. A. Glassey of Harbord Collegiate was recommended for the new principal of Jarvis Collegiate and the name passed on to the Board of Education. Previous to the arrival of Dr. McKay, Trustee Houston was in the chair and all the names were placed before the committee and voted upon. Miss Lawler received one vote, Mr. Gourlay two, Mr. Glassey two, and Mr. Jeffries two. The committee was then in doubt as to what should be done when Dr. McKay arrived.

"You cannot re-open the matter," asserted Trustee Boland.

Hodgson—"What you should do now is call for further nominations."

Chairman McKay ruled that the matter could be opened up, and the result was the recommendation of Mr. Glassey.

Mr. Jeffries was formerly on the staff of the local Collegiate.

AUTO UPSET WHEN IT STRUCK GRAVEL

John Douglas of Millbrook and Roy Taylor of Keene, while motoring near Keene last night, ran into a freshly gravelled section of roadway, an upset resulting. It was reported that the front wheels swerved quickly and the car was at the roadside and upset in a twinkling. Neither of the young men were hurt, and it was not known what damage the car sustained.

Tongs for removing fruit seeds, sharpened to aid their work, have been patented.

WHAT THE HEALTH ASSOCIATION IS DOING FOR WEAKLY CHILDREN IN THE CAMP AT JACKSON PARK

I have just returned from a visit to this camp, at Jackson Park. I feel that the public ought to know more about it. It is not a gathering of tubercular cases, as some have supposed, but it is a summer outing provided for children whose parents are utterly unable to give them the care they require because of illness in their homes.

It is a work of prevention, rather than cure. Just think of what it must mean during these long hot days both to the afflicted parent and to the children to have a conveyance call for the little ones each morning and carry them to the Park, where the entire day is spent in the pure air, and amid the most wholesome surroundings. Immediately upon their arrival at the Park a morning lunch of bread and pure milk is served. At noon, a wholesome dinner, well cooked, is provided, and in the evening before the conveyances arrives to return them to their homes, a late afternoon meal is prepared.

In the large tent are cots with mattresses, where each of the little ones is required to rest for a time each day, and to which the delicate child can retire at any time A trained nurse is in charge of the camp all the time, and the parents need have no concern for their safety and welfare.

I have seen nothing for years that has made a stronger appeal to me. The whole plan is one which must commend itself to all who are anxious to spend their benevolent portion in a way that will count most for the welfare of those that are down.

The work has been undertaken largely by faith, as we have no funds for the purpose. There are twenty children there to-day and that number and more should be cared for every day between this and the first day of September. The cost is considerable and there is surely no citizen who would not regret it if we were unable to continue the work. May I urge most earnestly upon men and women of all denominations and those outside of the churches who "love their fellowman" to send in at once a gift for the support of this work.

It must be an extra. We must not in any way interfere with the gifts to the general work of the Health Association, for that goes on as usual.

I am sure the newspapers will gladly acknowledge all sums sent in for this purpose. Mark your subscription "Children's Camp".

J. R. Webb,
Chairman Educational Com.

New Fish Receptacle Installed by N. Douros Meets His Approval

The Oke fruit and fish store, now owned by N. Douros, has solved the question of keeping his fresh and immune from dust and flies in a manner most acceptable to the Sanitary Inspector. They have had made a large receptacle on the plan of an ice box, lined with marble and with glass lids. In this, amid chunks of ice, repose in tempting array, members of the finny tribe. Apart from a sanitary standpoint, the whole thing has a handsome and pleasing appearance, and won the hearty approval of the inspector when he examined it this morning.

MADE 576 FLOWERS FOR 10c

New York Factory Investigation Reveals Pitiful Conditions.

NEW YORK, July 6.—Pitiful and illegal child labour conditions were revealed at a hearing before the state factory investigating commission.

George Hall, of the New York Child Labour Commission, displayed samples of artificial flowers, letter initials, neckties, and other articles made by children in tenement houses. Some of the children doing this work, he said, were as young as from 5 to 8 years.

As a fair sample, Mr. Hall exhibited a bunch of violets which were made by a child 14 years old. He said the girl had to make 576 flowers and paste them up in wreaths to make 10 cents. The average earnings, he said, would not exceed $2 per week.

Another exhibit was shipping and price tags, in which a grandmother and her granddaughter, 14 years old, put wire and cord into the tags. They were paid 6 cents per 1,000 for wiring the tags and 5 cents per 1,000 for the cords.

Another instance showed where a mother and three children, aged, respectively, 8, 13 and 35 years, made artificial flowers, their combined earnings being between $6 and $7 per week. Mr. Hall said the children were required to go to work as early as 5 a. m., and work till 9 o'clock, when they went to school. After school they were required to work till 10 o'clock at night.

Splendid Programme Was Given By Peterboro' Artists

Asa Huycke's Orchestra and Murray Street Choir Entertained Large Number at Indian River

The choir of the Murray Street Baptist Church, and Mr. Asa Huycke's orchestra motored to Indian River last evening where they presented a splendid programme at the lawn social of the Baptist Church of that village.

The lawn social was very largely patronized, and the orchestra and choir made a big hit with the large number who attended. The choir rendered several splendid anthems, and a solo was rendered by Mr. J. Minicola. A mixed quartette, composed of Misses Kidd and Alexander and Messrs. Jary and Batley, also won much applause for their contribution to the programme of the evening. Asa Huycke's orchestra more than sustained the reputation for splendid music that they have won in this city, and rendered several beautiful selections including a number of the newer popular songs and tunes. All the local artists were very warmly applauded, and it was evident that the audience enjoyed their numbers. Mr. George Schneider, the popular conductor of the Murray Street Choir, lead the choir last night and played their accompaniments most acceptably.

Brief addresses were given at the social by the Rev. J. R. Webb, Messrs. V. Eastwood, T. F Matthews, Jos. Wearing, and Dr. Morgan. The affair was a very enjoyable one, and an undounted success, due in a large measure to the excellent programme rendered by the local talent. The members of the choir and orchestra were entertained to a sumptuous tea at Indian River.

Council Dealt With Communications

Miss Ranney wrote the Council, thanking them for the picture of the school children singing before the Duke of Connaught, which they had presented her with.—Received.

Mr. E. G. Patterson wrote the Council asking why some action had not been taken in regard to a petition from the residents on Hunter Street, west of Aylmer Street, for a permanent pavement on that section of the street. His letter was referred to the Board of Works for immediate consideration.

A letter was read from the Rev. F. J. Sawers, Acting District Commissioner of the Boy Scouts, asking the Council for an appropriation towards the travelling expenses of the Scouts, to the scout camp next August. The camp is to be held at the Toronto Exhibition, where the Duke of Connaught will inspect the Scouts and bid them farewell, owing to his early departure for England. Other municipalities, said Mr. Sawers in his letter, were helping the Scouts to attend the camp in Toronto next month. — Referred to the Finance committee.

An invitation from the City of Shorbrooke was to hand requesting the attendance of His Worship Mayor Buller, members of the City Council and any delegates the City may appoint, to the annual convention of the Union of Canadian Municipalities, to be held in that City August 5th, 6th and 7th. It was announced that the subjects discussed would be of much interest to municipalities generally, and it was urged that this City be represented.— Received and referred to Legal and Reception committee.

A communication was to hand from Mr. P. Campbell, manager of the local branch of the Bank of Toronto, advising the Board that the balance appearing at the debit of the City on the last day of May was $87,240. — Received and referred to the Finance committee.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

THE PETES WIN A CLEAN CUT VICTORY OVER THE YANKS IN OPENING GAME

Sterling Pitched Fine Ball and Petes Outplayed the Visitors in the Field, at Bat and on the Bases

With the Petes outhitting and outfielding the Yanks, and Sterling twirling in his 1913 form, the home talent had little trouble in grabbing the first game of the home series from Erie yesterday, winning easily by 5 to 1. Erie scored their only counter in the first innings and only threatened twice after that, the side being retired in order in six of the nine innings. Sterling was in grand fettle with a sharp-breaking curve and plenty of zip on his fast one, and the Yanks' willow swinging was confined to six blows, five of which were collected by Dawson and Carney. The Petes played snappy ball behind the big fellow.

Morse, the stocky little Erie pitcher, twirled a nice game of ball, but his support was unsteady, and the homesters managed to interject their safeties at times when they did the most harm. Three of the four miscplays credited to the Sailors figured in the run getting, and on top of this the Blount gang stole five bases, Carney's throwing being very inaccurate.

The hitting of Welsh, Kelly, Dawson and Carney featured. Welsh kicked in with a triple ,two singles and a sacrifice in four appearances at the plate, each of the singles driving in a run, while Dawson contributed a double and two one-sackers in four times up, his double in the first innings being responsible for the only Erie counter.

The fielding fireworks was a smartly executed double play by Calligan and Carley. With Welsh on third, Stewart boomed a fly to left. Calligan gathered in the ball and made a grand throw to the plate, Carney putting the ball on to Welsh as he slid in.

Kelly's all-round work was one of the bright features of the afternoon. In addition to hitting splendidly and showing speed on the bases, Kel's pegging was a treat.

First Innings.

Erie — Dawson doubled along the first-base line, Scott grounded to Dolan, Dawson going to third. Calligan drew a pass. Gygli hit a sacrifice fly to Stewart, scoring Dawson, Calligan going to second on the throw to the plate. McNeal grounded to King.—One run, one hit, no errors.

Peterborough — Blount singled to right; Welsh sacrificed, Morse to Paton. Dolan grounded to Scott, Blount going to third. Stewart walked and pulled off a double steal, with Blount scoring. Byrne flied to left. — One run, one hit, no errors.

Second Innings.

Peterborough—King drove a liner into Scott's hands. Fox fanned. Kelly was hit on the head, but did not quit the game. Sterling singled to right, sending Kelly to third. Blount grounded to Gygli.—No runs, one hit no errors.

Third Inning.

Erie—Dawson flied to Bount. Scott died the same way. Calligan went out on a fly to Welsh.—No runs, hits or errors.

Peterborough — Welsh tripled between Colligan and Dawson. Dolan flied to centre, Dawson making a nice running catch. Welsh had no chance to score. Stewart flied to left and Colligan doubled Welsh at the plate with a beautiful throw to Carney.—No runs, one hit, no errors.

Fourth Innings.

Erie — Gygli fanned. McNeal grounded to King. Paton struck out.—No runs, hits or errors.

Peterborough—Byrne flied to Dawson. King died on a high one to McNeal. Fox went down on a bunt to Scott.—No runs, hits or errors.

Fifth Innings.

Erie — Behan grounded to King. Carney singled over second. Morse fanned. Carney stole second, King making it sure by losing Kelly's throw. Dawson beat out a slow roller past Sterling. Carney was out at the plate on an attempted double steal, Kelly to King, to Kelly, two perfect pegs, getting the runner.—No runs, two hits, no errors.

Peterborough—Kelly doubled to left but was out trying to stretch it into a triple. Sterling popped to Paton. Blount was safe on Behan's error. He stole second and went to third on Carney's bad throw. Welsh singled over second, scoring Blount. Dolan grounded to Gygli.—One run, two hits, two errors.

Sixth Innings.

Erie—Scott flied to Welsh. Colligan died on one to Stewart. Gygli also flied to Stewart.—No runs, hits or errors.

Peterborough—Stewart went out on a smash to the box. Byrne was safe on Scott's bad throw to first. King was out on a roller to Gygli. Fox grounded to Gygli.—No runs, or hits, one error.

Seventh Innings.

Erie—McNeal grounded to Sterling. Paton smashed one at King and was out. Behan walked and was out stealing, Kelly to King.—No runs, hits, or errors.

Peterborough—Kelly singled through short. Sterling fanned. Kelly stole second. Blount flied to McNeal. Welsh singled to right, scoring Kelly. Dolan cracked one which hit Welsh as he ran down to second and the base runner was out.—One run, three hits, no errors.

Eighth Innings.

Erie—Carney was out on a roller to Byrne. Morse flied to Stewart, Dawson singled over second. Scott singled to centre. Colligan grounded to King.—No runs, two hits, no errors.

Peterborough — Stewart singled to right. Byrne laid one down for a sacrifice and when Carney heaved a mile over Paton's head, Stewart scored, and Byrne went to third. King grounded to Morse. Byrne scored on a wild pitch. Fox singled to right. Kelly fouled out to Carney. Fox stole second, Carney throwing high, but the runner was out trying to go to third on the play. — Two runs, two hits, one error.

Ninth Innings.

Erie — Gygli grounded to Byrne. McNeal rolled to Fox. Patton grounded to Byrne.—No runs, hits, or errors.

PLEASED WITH THE MERCANTILE LEAGUE GAMES

Sporting Editor, Examiner.

Dear Sir—Please allow me to express, through your columns, a protest, re our Mercantile League. I was agreeably surprised to see in last Friday's Examiner that the Mercantile games were to be played at Riverside Park. I went over there, together with some friends and saw two fast games of ball. The games were much faster than I saw at the Exhibition Grounds, and I paid the same price, (but am willing to pay a little more to see them at Riverside).

Now, seven innings might be O. K. for the Exhibition Grounds for both games, but the interested public do not intend having anything "slipped over" them as on Saturday.

The first game was over at 3.15 and we had to wait until 4.05 (50 minutes) for the second game to commence. Why the first game did not go nine innings I cannot find out, but I think the League officials responsible should see that they play nine innings for the first game, or else call the second game earlier. It would be better for the League, I think, if they played at Riverside all the time, if it makes such an improvement in the games I saw. Thanking you for the space, I am

Yours,
"Pro Bono Publico."

GOOD SHOOTING BY DUMMER BOYS

In the shooting exercises at Petawawa, E Company of the 40th Regiment, supplied two of the best. W. H. Hill, of Centre Dummer, scored 69 out of a possible 70, and Stewart Clydesdale, of Dummer, was second, with 66 out of 70.

Two Japanese cruisers will visit Esquimault Harbour about the end of June, and the Provincial Government will extend courtesies to them.

To-morrow's Game At Two O'clock

In order to allow the Erie team to catch a train, to-morrow's Canadian League battle will commence at two o'clock, sharp. Fans are asked to note this change in the hour. The Toronto Beavers will be here on Thursday for a three-days' stay and Thursday being a half-holiday the doings will begin at 3 o'clock, sharp.

Killed By Train.

TORONTO, July 7.—Geo. Cootes, who gave his address as Pennsylvania, was killed by a train on the tracks at the foot of Ellis avenue on the Lake Shore road at four o'clock yesterday afternoon. He was found with both legs almost severed, his head crushed, and otherwise mutilated, by Thomas Trann, of Swansea, who secured police assistance and had him removed to the Parkdale Hospital, where he died an hour after being admitted.

No Federal Grant for Salem.

BOTH FIGHTERS READY FOR MILL

LONDON, July 6.—Willie Ritchie, champion lightweight of the world, who will defend his title before the Olympia Athletic Club here to-morrow night in a 20-round bout with Freddie Welsh, the English title-holder of the same class, says that he is ready for the big battle. Welsh also reports that he is prepared. The men are to weigh in at the English scale, 135 pounds, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

The prospective opponents are both reported to be fit for a hard struggle. Because of his nationality, perhaps Welsh has been favourite in the betting. So much American money has made its appearance within the past couple of days that the odds have been gradually hammered down. To-day the Britons were offering but 6 to 5 on their idol. It is possible that the wagering will be at evens when the men climb through the ropes.

Ritchie has staked his punch against Welsh's wonderful cleverness and a guarantee of $35,000 with the privilege of a return match. The American champion further has an option on fifty per cent. of the gross receipts. London predicts a gate of $100,000. All England is excited over to-day's lightweight battle for a world's championship, the first seen here in eighteen years, or since the time that Kid Lavigne knocked out Burge in the seventeenth round.

London, Eng., July 7—The fight for the lightweight championship of the world, between Willie Ritchie, the present champion, and Freddy Welsh, the British title holder, takes place about 5 o'clock this afternoon, (Canadian time). Ritchie says: "I am not worrying about Welsh's twenty-two successive victories in the past 15 months. He beat me two years ago, when I was a youngster, but I have improved and expect to win.

Welsh says: "My hope of victory is not based on the fact that I once beat Ritchie, but on my long ring experience and punching power. I haven't gone back any."

Home Rule for Filipinos.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—President Wilson and House leaders have agreed substantially on a bill granting a larger measure of self-government to the Filipinos. The President told callers yesterday that he approved the bill introduced by Representative Jones of Virginia and modified by the House insular affairs committee, but made it clear that he did not expect the bill to be passed by both Houses during the present session.

OFFICER SHOT AT.

Warrant Is Out For Indians Who Attacked Police.

TORONTO, July 7.—Three brothers, Commanda Indians, have been arrested under instruction from Chief of Police Rogers, of the Ontario force, by Inspector Storey. The arrests follow a search for some days of the Naughton Reserve, back of Sturgeon Falls. The Indians are charged with shooting with intent to kill, with assaulting an officer in the discharge of his duties, and with taking game out of season.

A month ago two game wardens went to inspect the Indian camp for contraband skins, and some beaver pelts were found. One of the brothers in a rage started to shoot from ambush and injured both game wardens, wounding one in the wrist. The warrants were issued and the arrest effected yesterday.

Armstrong, Morrison & Company of Vancouver, were awarded the contract for a $500,000 government bridge across the Pitt River.

Preventing a Business Slump

IF during September, October and November manufacturers and merchants were to suspend their selling aggressiveness, as represented by their newspaper advertising, autumn business for them would be very, very dull. When selling energy is reduced, business slumps.

The slump in summer business which many firms experience is due mainly to a collapse of their own efforts to keep business up to its usual level. The public does not eat less in summer than in the autumn; it merely changes its diet.

The summer apparel worn by the average man and woman differs from autumn or winter apparel only in weight and kind, not in extent or variety.

The common needs of man remain fairly uniform the year round.

The way to keep business up in summer is to keep up the selling pressure as faithfully then as at other seasons, and to keep open the channel of communication between seller and buyer — the channel of newspaper advertising.

You can obtain helpful advice on advertising free of cost and without obligation by consulting the Business Department of The EVENING EXAMINER.
